'I KNOW THE KIDNAPER'---CONDON

SENATOR WALSH WARNS MONTANA AGAINST DEADLOCK

State Democratic Leader Issues Stirring Challenge to Party To Spur Movement for Nomination of Roosevelt.

AIDES PIN HOPES ON FIRST BALLOT

Reed's Selection for Resolutions Group Complicates Republican Wet Plank Troubles.

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Spurred by a party warning from Senator Walsh, of Montana, against a deadlocked convention, supporters of Franklin D. Roosevelt are ready for a renewed drive next week to impress upon democracy the commanding lead of the New York governor for the presidential nomination.

The republicans, their convention only a month off, are still having their troubles over prohibition. The selection today of Senator Reed as the Pennsylvania delegation's representative on the convention resolutions committee made it virtually certain a strong attempt would be made to insert a moist plank in the republican platform. Reed, an administration stalwart, came out only Thursday for licensed sale of liquor in government-owned or government-controlled dispensaries.

Warns of Deadlock.

Walsh, in a letter today to W. W. McDowell, chairman of the democratic state committee of Montana, urged democrats of that state to instruct their delegates next Tuesday to vote for Roosevelt. He said it was being "insidiously" suggested that conventions refrain from instructing their delegates and this was part of the "stop-Roosevelt" movement.

Walsh is assistant democratic leader in the senate and his words carry considerable weight in the party.

"The unhappy result in 1920 and again in 1924 of the selection of a candidate by a deadlocked convention," he said, "ought to dissuade any democrat from looking eagerly to the recurrence of such an issue, and little hope is entertained of the nomination of any one of the able and eminent gentlemen whose names have been mentioned in connection with the nomination, other than Governor Roosevelt, except through a deadlock."

Local Support.

"In very truth it may be said," he added, "that however worthy they may be, there is for none of them much more than local spontaneous support."

Heartened by this harmony plea as they looked toward selection next week of 154 more democratic delegates, the Roosevelt forces displayed little worry over the prospect of failure in New Jersey on Tuesday and of losing a majority of Connecticut's delegation of 16 on Monday.

With 362 delegates instructed, pledged and claimed for the New Yorker to date, excluding a claimed bloc of a hundred or more from Pennsylvania and New York, the Roosevelt camp here still is pinning its hopes on a first or early ballot nomination on second-choice strength from favorite son states.

New Jersey Conceded.

Of the 154 to be named next week, they concede New Jersey's 32 to the opposition. They also give a majority of Connecticut's 16 to Alfred E. Smith under a recent compromise, but look to the other primary—in Oregon—to pledge 10 for Roosevelt

Manages Campaign

FRANK M. SCARLETT.

SCARLETT DIRECTS RUSSELL'S DRIVE

Brunswick Lawyer Is Selected to Manage Campaign for U. S. Senate.

Frank M. Scarlett, young Brunswick (Ga.) lawyer, will manage the campaign of Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. for the United States senate. In a statement accepting the appointment, Scarlett indicated that the governor's campaign would be pitched upon unalterable opposition "to the cancellation or reduction of one dollar loaned to Europe while those countries are spending millions on armament."

Appointment of Scarlett and the latter's outline of the Russell platform, on which the governor will oppose Representative Charles R. Crisp for the senate seat made vacant by the death of William J. Harris, divided political interest with legislative politics. In the latter, the candidacy of former State Senator E. D. Rivers for the speakership held the spotlight.

In announcing the appointment of Scarlett as campaign manager, Governor Russell said:

"Honorable Frank M. Scarlett, of Brunswick, Ga., has kindly consented to manage my campaign for the United States senate. Headquarters will not be opened for some time, but corresponce has attained such proportions that it is necessary to take some steps to handle the preliminaries to the actual canvass.

"I am deeply appreciative of the compliment Mr. Scarlett has paid me in assuming this undertaking, for it involves a considerable sacrifice on his part. He was being strongly urged to enter the race for congress from the new eighth congressional district, and has unselfishly lain aside his own ambitions to assist me."

Praises Governor Russell.

Scarlett's acceptance of the campaign management was contained in the following statement addressed to the public:

"My acceptance of Governor Russell's request that I manage his campaign for the United States senate was prompted by a desire to be of real service to the people of Georgia. I am firmly convinced that the critical period through which we are passing demands that we send to that body a man who will carry new thought, energetic action, and above all, a clear understanding of the struggles of the average man and a heart that beats in sympathy with that struggle, in order that our national government may render the greatest possible service and assistance to our people.

"Governor Russell is thoroughly familiar with conditions in our state and possesses the same interest in the individual citizen and the same untiring energy in serving that interest which marked the career of the late Senator Harris. His admitted achievements in directing the government of the state during a time of great adversity show him to be a far-visioned and courageous statesman. Through the reforms of his administration a fiscal policy for the state has been adopted which makes it possible to keep expenditures within income. During his administration the state sales tax was

"Unending Stream of Statements From White House" Criticized as Hampering Progress.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Speaker Garner today leaned back in his chair, fingered the stub of a cigar and accused President Hoover of having "done more to prevent the return of public confidence than any other one thing."

The silvery-haired Texan chose his daily press conference as the occasion for criticizing what he called "the unending stream of statements from the White House."

Garner said the president could not forget the days when he was a "mining promoter selling stocks."

"He has the idea of propaganda so strongly in his mind that he can't let even the department of justice, which has the case in charge, give out a statement that it is going to help in the Lindbergh case without signing it himself," he added.

After saying he did not yet want to talk about his plans for relief legislation, the speaker set newspapermen to scribbling when he remarked:

Assails Statements.

"The president's statements have done more to keep the people's minds unsettled than any other one thing. If he would refuse to issue a statement for 30 days, I would guarantee that things would thaw out."

Someone asked whether he thought the president was "campaigning."

"I don't say that, but I think it does indicate that he wants to keep his name before the people," Garner answered.

The Texan already has been pledged the California votes for the presidential nomination at the democratic convention, Texas, too, will support him. Campaign headquarters have been opened in Chicago, the convention city, although the speaker never has said he would be a candidate.

"The president says, and keeps saying, that confidence is frozen," Garner continued. "Something brought that about. He started issuing statements in 1929 to thaw things out.

"His statements have been so contrary—he has changed his mind so many times that in my opinion the people not only have lost confidence in his judgment, but possibly in his patriotism, except from a selfish standpoint.

Public Confidence "Frozen."

"He has done more in the last six months to freeze public confidence than all other forces put together. If he would just take Cal's attitude for 30 days and keep mum, things would thaw out."

He was referring to the president's announcement yesterday that justice department and government agents would keep after the Lindbergh baby kidnapers until they were caught. Recalling that Mr. Hoover also said yesterday that if it were necessary he would use wartime methods to combat the depression, Garner remarked:

"He not only issues daily statements, but shoots both barrels in one day. All I've got to do to be convinced that there is a lack of confidence is pick up this morning's paper; the president says so."

Evidence May Link Woman in Lee Case

Intimation that alleged new evidence in the Ben Lichtenstein murder case will attempt to connect a woman with the affair when an extraordinary motion for a new trial is to be heard Wednesday for J. D. Lee given a life sentence for the slaying, was revealed Saturday.

The motion for the new trial was to be heard Saturday but Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy set it over until Wednesday and one of the witnesses to be introduced by Arthur W. Powell, attorneyf or the defense, was allowed to make a deposition before a court stenographer. The witness was Dr. Lewis Burger, Grady hospital interne.

Dr. Burger testified that when called to the apartment with an ambulance the night of the murder that a woman, standing on the doorsill of the Lichtenstein apartment, turned and brushed past him. Dr. Burger failed, however, to identify a picture shown him by Powell Saturday, as the woman who passed him.

Ouster of Mayor Walker To Be Asked of Roosevelt

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—The Times says recent developments in the Hofstadter investigation have made it virtually certain that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt will be called upon within the next three weeks to remove Mayor James J. Walker from office.

For the governor to be faced with the task of making such a decision just before the democratic national convention would be exceedingly embarrassing, the paper adds.

If he removed the mayor he would be accused of acting in a spirit of revenge for the failure of Walker and Tammany to support his presidential candidacy. Should he dismiss the charges against the mayor, which The Times says undoubtedly will be filed by Samuel Seabury, chief counsel to the Hofstadter committee, he would be accused of seeking to protect Tammany.

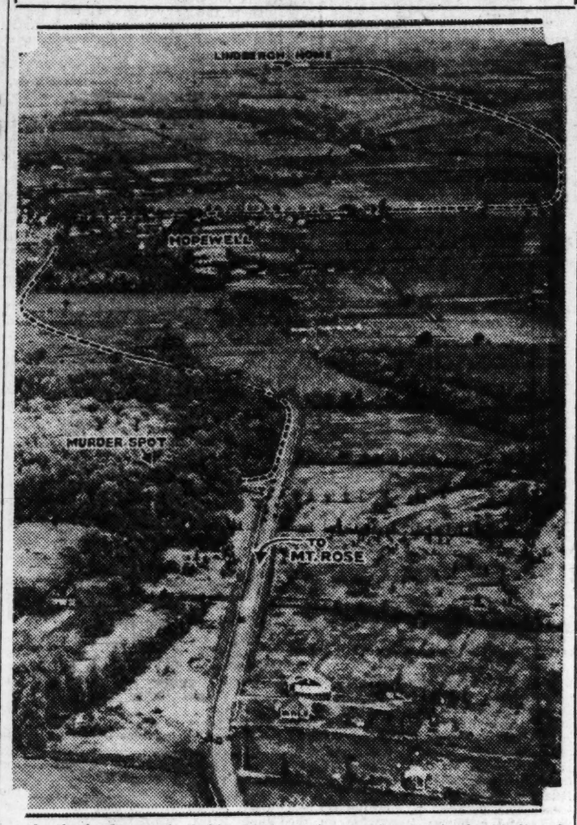

Seabury's charges are expected to be filed shortly after he calls the mayor to the stand, which reports say he will do next week.

Already having adduced evidence that Walker received a "gift" of $26,535 worth of bonds from a taxicab financier, Seabury is expected to try to show a connection between the mayor and the $1,000,000 stock transactions of his missing business agent, Russell T. Sherwood, when public hearings are resumed on Wednesday.

Governor Roosevelt was described by The Times as prepared to deal promptly with any charges that might be brought against the mayor.

It is the general opinion among democratic leaders, both favoring and opposing Roosevelt's nomination, the paper says, that Walker's removal would enhance the governor's position throughout the country by affording tangible evidence he does not propose to bow to Tammany, should the evidence warrant removal.

RAMSPECK GIVES REFERENDUM VIEW

Says He Will Not Oppose State Test; Explains Vote in House.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—In the face of the current nationwide agitation for an expression by all party leaders and public officials on the highly controversial prohibition issue, Representative Robert Ramspeck, of the fifth Georgia district, today announced that he would raise no objection to the state of Georgia undertaking a referendum on the question.

The effect of the Georgia congressman's statement is to place him on the side of those who are urging that the whole question of prohibition be referred back to the people for consideration.

"Under conditions as they now exist," said Representative Ramspeck, "the only method by which the people of Georgia could go to the ballot box and vote their convictions on prohibition would be at a referendum provided by act of the legislature. I do not now and never have opposed such a referendum on this question."

Explaining his recent vote on the Beck-Linthicum proposal, designed to open the way for a referendum on prohibition, Representative Ramspeck said he had opposed that measure on the grounds that it failed to make specific provision for a new amendment to the federal constitution.

Had the proposal been adopted and ratified by the various states, he asserted, it would have permitted the return of the open saloon and made it impossible for the federal government to adopt a plan for dealing with prohibited beverages such as that prevailing in Canada.

The Georgia congressman's stand on the question is looked upon in capital political circles as a sign of the times. It comes as a climax to a series of important developments during the week on prohibition. Overthrowing the last stronghold of the Anti-Saloon League, Ohio republicans in their primaries this week nom-

HAINES HARGRETT, ATTORNEY, PASSES

Widely-Known Atlanta Lawyer and Tax Expert Drops Dead at Home.

Haines H. Hargrett, widely known Atlanta attorney and income tax expert, dropped dead shortly before 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at his home at 139 Brighton road, Brookwood. Death apparently was caused by a heart attack, physicians said. He was 42 years old.

Mr. Hargrett, who was a member of the law firm of Spalding, MacDougald and Sibley, had just returned to his home from his office and was waiting for his lunch to be served when he was stricken, members of the family said. Friends and business associates said he had appeared to be in good health earlier in the day.

Born in Alapaha, Ga., Mr. Hargrett was a member of one of the most prominent families in south Georgia. He received his early education in the Tifton public schools and later attended the University of North Carolina, where he took a degree of bachelor of arts.

Began Practice in Tifton.

For several years he was connected with the Atlantic Coast Line railway as claim agent while he read law. As a young man he stood the state examinations and was admitted to the bar. Beginning practice in Tifton, he became associated with the firm of Fulwood & Hargrett, which connection was severed when he removed to Washington, D. C., to become a member of the firm of Miller & Chevalier, nationally known income tax experts. Mr. Hargrett continued with that firm until his removal to Atlanta in 1926.

In Atlanta he joined Spalding, MacDougald and Sibley. He was an expert on income tax and insurance law and at the time of his death was engaged in work on one of the biggest income tax trials in the south, in which he had already won one verdict. He was preparing a brief for

"Last Word on Circulation"

The three Atlanta daily and Sunday newspapers belong to what is known as the Audit Bureau of Circulations. The circulation audit of the three Atlanta papers, covering the last audit period, has just been released.

This audit shows that the daily Constitution has the largest total city circulation, largest total city and suburban, and largest grand total of any daily paper published in Atlanta.

It is a recognized fact among advertisers that carrier or home delivery circulation in the city is the most worthwhile circulation to the advertiser.

This audit shows the daily Constitution to have carrier or home delivery circulation of 40,497 in the city of Atlanta, which is about 5,000 larger than the second paper in home delivery circulation, and about 13,000 larger than the third paper.

This audit also shows the Sunday Constitution has a larger city circulation and a larger suburban circulation, and a larger total city and suburban than either of the other Atlanta Sunday newspapers. This audit is recognized as the last official word on circulation.

NINE KENTUCKIANS ARE NAMED IN SUIT BY GARFIELD HAYS

Bell Officials and Citizens Sued for $100,000 in Barring of Civil Liberties Group.

BY W. H. MOBLEY.

LONDON, Ky., May 14.—(AP)—On the grounds that bloodshed might follow their visit and a mob that could not be controlled would form in Pineville, an American Civil Liberties Union delegation was barred from the southeastern Kentucky coal fields today.

Returning here, Arthur Garfield Hays, a leader of the group, filed a $100,000 personal damage suit against nine officers and citizens named as having blocked his progress at the Bell county line. It would test, he said, whether members of a community can legally prevent citizens from entering.

After being halted at the Bell county line by Mayor J. M. Brooks, of Pineville; Walter B. Smith, Bell county attorney, and others and told it would be dangerous for them to enter, the delegation was warned here to leave within four hours.

Sheriff W. H. Steele, who delivered that warning, said "There might be trouble" if the visitors did not heed it. He did not explain. Crowds gathered on the streets here, but there was no demonstration as the group departed late today.

The suit filed by Hays named County Attorney Smith, Mayor Brooks, Pearl Osborne, chief of police of Pineville; Walter Baker and Charles Stacey, named as a Bell county deputy sheriff; J. A. Whitaker, a Pineville businessman; W. L. Hammond, Pineville businessman; Herndon J. Evans, Pineville newspaper publisher, and Walter Mayhew, chief of police of Barbourville.

Feeling in Bell and Harlan counties against outside investigators and visitors had been described before Federal District Judge A. M. J. Cochran who last night denied the injunction the Civil Liberties group sought. Witnesses from the two counties said the residents would forcibly prevent such visits, fearing they would arouse certain elements among the miners who were on strike last winter and lead to bloodshed and destruction of property.

"The town is full of a mob and we can't do anything with them," the visiting group was told by a Pineville resident giving the name of W. L. Hammond, when it reached the Bell county border today. "The situation can't be handled if you come into Pineville."

He added his warning to that of Mayor Brooks and County Attorney Smith, and said decision to bar the gates to the coal fields had been made at a meeting of 15 or 20 representative citizens at Pineville this morning.

Mayor Brooks handed the visitors a written statement on meeting them at the Bell-Knox county lines in which he said:

"In denying you a permit to hold a public mass meeting in our city today we do so in the spirit of not preventing free speech and free assemblage. Our community has a right to prevent and suppress such meetings in order to prevent violence and

Brown Says G. O. P. Will 'Satisfy' Wets

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 14.—(AP)—Walter F. Brown, postmaster-general and Ohio campaign manager for President Hoover, commenting tonight on the apparent anti-prohibition sentiment in the May 10 Ohio primaries, intimated that it would have definite influence on the republican national convention in its platform construction.

"The national convention will adopt a platform to which we all can subscribe," Brown said, following a meeting of the Lucas county republican central committee.

David S. Ingalls, party gubernatorial candidate, and Ohio Attorney-General Gilbert Bettman, winner of the United States senatorial nomination, both ran as avowed "wets."

Pressed for more comment, Brown said his statement could be interpreted to mean that the convention will take some action acceptable to those desiring a change in the prohibition laws, but would make no other comment.

Committee members regarded Brown's statement as definite indication the republican party platform will contain a wet plank.

Sues Officials

Arthur Garfield Hays filed suit in federal district court Saturday asking $100,000 damages from officers and citizens of Kentucky in barring him from the state. Hays charged the defendants had deprived him of his civil rights and by force had prevented his going to Harlan county.

Highlights of News In Lindbergh Case

By the Associated Press.

Discovery of new clues spurred on the world's greatest manhunt—for the kidnapers and killers of the infant Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

A burlap bag, found near the spot, was being examined to determine whether the body might have been transported in it.

The earth which formed an improvised grave for the murdered child was scraped up and taken away for analysis. The digging left a hole a foot deep and about six feet in diameter.

New York papers reported the Lindberghs were considering a plan to abandon their hilltop home, into which tragedy stalked on the night of March 1, and move to France until after the birth of their next child, expected within several months.

An official bulletin from the famous flyer's estate said neither he nor Mrs. Lindbergh was ill, but it was learned the grief-stricken young mother was under a physician's care.

The United States treasury department directed the secret service and intelligence units of the internal revenue bureau to do what they could to aid in the intensive manhunt.

The Bronx county (New York) district attorney announced he would begin a grand jury investigation next week into all circumstances surrounding the payment of $50,000 ransom money to a man in a Bronx cemetery on April 2 by Dr. John F. Condon, who will head the list of witnesses.

Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney of New York disclosed he had conferred with the Bronx prosecutor about the case.

Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall, of Mercer county, where the body was found, said he was working on a new clue, but declined to add how important he considered it.

Morris Rosner, mysterious undercover man, was examined at great length at the Lindbergh estate. One question officials presumably were attempting to clear up was what basis he had for stating at one stage in his own private efforts to find the child that he had positive knowledge the baby was alive and well.

"It is apparent to me that we must settle down to a long, grim fight to capture and to convict the man guilty of this heinous crime" —Prosecutor Marshall.

Senator McKellar Collapses in Hotel

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, collapsed at his hotel here today and was taken to the hospital where he was reported threatened with pneumonia.

The senator's condition was attributed to overwork. He has been studying day and night with members of the senate's special economy committee. Because of his collapse, the committee abandoned plans for a meeting tomorrow, which was called in a desperate effort to get the economy bill into form for early senate consideration.

FINDER OF BODY IS FINGERPRINTED

Jersey Police Head Says He Is Taking No Chances; Absolves Rosner of All Suspicion.

BY FRANCIS A. JAMIESON.

HOPEWELL, N. J., May 14.—(AP)—Pages of intriguing details, indicative of even more important information beneath the shield of police secrecy, came to light tonight in the relentless pursuit of the Lindbergh baby killers.

An outline of the two months' negotiations carried on along the Atlantic seaboard with a five-man gang by John Hughes Curtis became public even as another intermediary, the aged Dr. John F. Condon, asserted the child's "kidnaper" was known to him and would be caught.

Then spoke up the police in the person of Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf:

"As has been shown in Dr. Condon's own statements, he only saw one member of the gang and the description given of this man does not coincide sufficiently closely to any of these described by Mr. Curtis to cause us to draw any conclusions."

Dr. Condon paid a $50,000 ransom for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh to a man in the dusk of a Bronx (New York city) cemetery on April 2. Curtis and two Norfolk, Va., associates began their negotiations on March 9 and continued them until Thursday night, when the body of the child was found.

Lindberghs Calm.

As these and other revelations were bared, the principals in the tragic drama maintained an outward calm in their hilltop home. Colonel Lindbergh managed a wan smile of greeting when Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall visited the residence late in the day. Mrs. Lindbergh, an expectant mother, who wavered close to a collapse last night, regained her quiet demeanor late in the afternoon.

The fantastic story of Curtis, supplemented by a sea captain's description of the boat trips he made with Colonel Lindbergh, even as late as the night of the finding of the body, set a flotilla of coast guard craft to scouring an area off Cape May, New Jersey.

Officials at the Atlantic City, N. J., coast guard station admitted the searching vessels were carrying more than the usual number of firearms, but refused to estimate the number of boats engaged in the task.

From the office of the attorney-general in Washington, acting by the direction of the president, a formal offer of vast federal assistance was dispatched speedily to Governor A. Harry Moore. Both Colonel Schwarzkopf and the governor acknowledged the aid of government operatives since the outset of the state inquiry and the latter said he would reply in writing Monday to the renewed offer of co-operation.

The governor indicated he would

Plot To Abduct Lindbergh Seen by Skipper of Marcon

BY CHARLES M. McCANN.

(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

NORFOLK, Va., May 14.—(UP) An amazing plot to kidnap Colonel Charles Lindbergh at sea was frustrated when the Flying Colonel's slain baby was found, in the belief of the captain of the searching yacht, Marcon.

This theory was expressed tonight when for the first time the gripping story of John Hughes Curtis' negotiations with the men he believed were in possession of the kidnaped child was revealed by Captain Frank H. Lackmann, skipper of the Marcon.

In an interview with the United Press, Captain Lackmann disclosed that the Marcon's seven trips to sea were in pursuit of a phantom ship, always tantalizingly just out of reach, and that on all of its voyages the Marcon was heavily armed with automatic rifles and followed, secretly, by a navy seaplane.

Beset by storm and fog, John Consolvo's 86-foot ship tossed like a cork in the heavy seas off the Maryland and Delaware coasts. Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the missing infant, kept almost constant vigil aboard the yacht.

In telling his story, Lackmann expressed frankly his belief that the kidnapers who promised to deliver the Lindbergh baby to Curtis really aimed at getting Lindbergh himself, to hold him for an inestimable ransom that conceivably might have been raised by national subscription.

Though he emphasized that his belief could be no more than a theory, he offered the suggestion that unless the kidnapers were after Lindbergh, their motive in promising the delivery of the baby entirely without previous payment, as they did, was inexplicable.

To protect Lindbergh, the Marcon accept the proposal of the attorney-general placing the federal division of the search under J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the department's bureau of the investigation, and would ask that Hoover get in touch with Colonel Schwarzkopf.

The New Jersey chief executive, who personally has followed the baby hunt since the kidnaping on the night of March 1, took occasion to praise the long hours and strenuous efforts devoted to the case by Colonel Schwarzkopf.

The unexpected statement of Dr. Condon, made as he left his New York home for a short trip, was:

"I know the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby and he will be caught. I know his name, his nationality, his physical characteristics and all about him."

This was added to a cryptic utterance of the retired school teacher as he emerged earlier from the quarters of Charles B. McLaughlin, Bronx district attorney, who has announced his intention of initiating a grand jury inquiry in which Dr. Condon would be a witness.

"Jafsie's" Remark.

At that time the 72-year-old "Jafsie," who treated with the supposed kidnapers partially through newspaper advertisements, said:

"Isn't it bad enough to be silent without being indicted for infringing on silence? Anything I might say might add to the discomfiture of a bereaved family."

The disclosures of still another intermediary, Morris Rosner, mysterious undercover man, added to the puzzling mass of data filtering through the hands of investigators.

Rosner, who appeared for questioning at police headquarters here, revealed that he took one of the ransom notes to New York and supplied a list of all persons to whom he had shown it. He was permitted to leave without surveillance.

Prosecutor Marshall, the man upon whom rests a large portion of the burden of capitalizing the police information, had a perplexing series of questions to answer.

Questions Rampant.

Among them were:

Did one and the same group of persons steal the infant, kill him and then negotiate for ransom both through Dr. Condon and Curtis?

Were there separate or interlocking criminal gangs which operated in this manner?

Did the contents of the original ransom note become known to a group of extortionists who never had the baby in their possession?

Was the garment purporting to be the baby's sleeping suit—the token which was used in the "Jafsie" negotiations—the genuine article or a counterfeit?

In answering these questions, the public had before it the repeated official declaration that positive means of identification were provided in the ransom notes received subsequent to the original demand left in the baby's nursery.

Such a premise prompted the final question of whether or not it might have been possible to forge whatever means of identification was provided.

Negro Fingerprinted.

As an indication of the breadth of the police pursuit, authorities announced William Allen, negro truckman, who came upon the baby's body, was being investigated and that his fingerprints were taken.

New York authorities, in their efforts to co-operate, escorted James Gracie to New Jersey for examination regarding his statements that he had been in touch with underworld characters who once demanded $100,000 for the baby's return.

As the secret and complicated story of the various private negotiations for the return of the Lindbergh baby was unfolded to officials, they strove to learn whether the men who kidnaped and killed the child, the men who received the $50,000, and the men who were negotiating with Curtis might not all have been members of the same gang—even the same men.

Meanwhile, a new clue was announced—dirty burlap sack.

It was picked up about 50 feet from the improvised grave five miles from the Lindbergh home where the infant's body was discovered.

It was taken carefully to police headquarters to be examined in the hope it might in some way throw more light on the case.

One theory was that the child might have been killed somewhere else and the body transported in the bag to the heavily wooded section where it was found.

Curtis At Hopewell.

Hope of finding some other clue led officials to have all leaves, twigs and surface dirt, for a large radius around where the body was found, scraped up and taken to the Lindbergh garage. When the collection dries, chemists will analyze and study it.

Curtis remained on the Lindbergh estate to aid by whatever means possible in the hunt for the men he had believed were the kidnapers.

Most of Thursday night he spent telling officials the long story of his negotiations. Yesterday he was taken over part of the ground he covered during his work in Colonel Lindbergh's behalf.

Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, state police head, told of passing on to the coast guard part of the story—the nicknames of the five men, their descriptions and a description of their boat.

"At no time," Schwarzkopf said, "was anything given to Mr. Curtis to deliver or show to Colonel Lindbergh and no demands were made upon him by any of the alleged group of kidnapers with whom he was in contact as to any additional ransom."

It had been reported unofficially that this gang furnished the Virginian with a picture purporting to have been taken of the Lindbergh baby while he was their captive, and also to have demanded $200,000 for the baby's return.

Another of the intermediaries in the case was at the Lindbergh estate throughout the day—Morris Rosner, mysterious undercover man who at one time said he had positive knowledge the baby was alive and well.

Rosner had been a frequent visitor at the Lindbergh home while the frantic attempts were being made to find the kidnapers and negotiate with them for the child's return.

"His activities apparently were confined to endeavoring to make contacts which would assist the family in contacting the actual kidnapers," Schwarzkopf said, after examining the man.

"Nothing in any way connecting him with the kidnapers has been disclosed during his questioning."

Prosecutors of the county in which the body was found and the one in which the kidnaping occurred met at the spot where the body was found.

Sees Long Fight Ahead.

Both were searching for "something new"—some fresh clue to aid them in the greatest job of their lives.

Later Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall said he was working on a new clue, but did not disclose how important he considered it or where it had been discovered.

"It is apparent to me," he stated, "that we must settle down to a long, grim fight to capture and to convict the man guilty of this heinous crime.

"The time is past for excuses for lack of action because of fear for the safety of child.

"There did exist that condition. The hands of officials were tied. They, in proper and true sympathy with the parents, desired the safe return of the child.

"But now we know he is dead.

"Now is the time for swift, determined action."

The officials directing the great man-hunt have intimated frequently they were making public none of their findings the publication of which might interfere with capture of the kidnaper-killers.

List of Clues.

How much or how little they have as a basis for their hope of success, few knew.

There was a belief, however, that a great mass of evidence and clues now is being sifted over, and that much of this information has never been made public.

This wealth of material at least includes:

The subsequent notes received by the Lindberghs;

The notes received by Dr. Condon;

The information Dr. Condon picked up during his long negotiations with the men who posed to him as the kidnapers.

His description of the man to whom he paid the $50,000.

The communications Curtis and his two Norfolk associates received.

The information Curtis gained, through long weeks of negotiating, concerning the gang with whom he was dealing.

The kidnaping ladder.

The burlap sack.

The secret reports on the tracing of the marked bills which comprised the $50,000 ransom.

Shovel Has No Bearing.

A broken shovel was found at the scene during the morning, but later it was stated officially it had been placed there only a short time before.

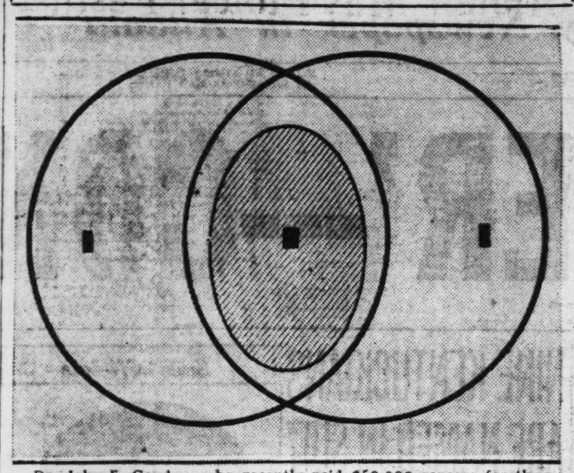

The dirt-covered shovel scoop was discovered against a tree by an investigator and at first seemed to be an important clue, but in his 3 p. m. bulletin Colonel Schwarzkopf said:

"The broken shovel referred to was handed to the trooper guards at the scene by Chief Snook, of the Hopewell township police, who said he had received it from occupants of a New York car parked out on the road.

"This was turned over to the trooper in charge of the detail, who placed it at the base of a tree, where it was 'found' this morning."

Schwarzkopf added: "The occupants of the New York car told Chief Snook they were Jersey City detectives, but were recognized as reporters who had been working on this case."

Odd Symbol Used by Kidnapers

Dr. John F. Condon, who recently paid $50,000 ransom for the return of the Lindbergh baby, was convinced that he was dealing with the kidnapers because of the symbol, shown above, appearing on a note he received. The same kind of symbol was found in the original ransom note left in the baby's crib. The solid circle in center was of red ink. The large hollow circles were drawn with blue ink. Three small holes punctured the symbol. Associated Press photo.

Lindbergh Flashed Own Signals In Contact Attempt, Says Paper

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 14. (AP)—That Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh personally flashed signals from a boat in the Atlantic ocean in an attempt to contact the supposed kidnapers of his son was disclosed today.

The colonel's active participation in the efforts of John Hughes Curtis, of Norfolk, Va., and his whereabouts this week were described in an interview with the owner of the schooner by the Atlantic City Evening Union.

Quoting A. L. Foster, New York manufacturer, who lives here and owns the Cacholot, the newspaper related details of the attempted negotiations.

"I had known John Hughes Curtis, the Lindbergh intermediary, for several years as the result of having some work done at his shipyard in Norfolk," said Foster.

"He had asked me several weeks ago if I would be willing to use my boat in the search for the Lindbergh baby, and, naturally, I was only too glad to offer my services.

"Sunday afternoon I received the call, and Monday afternoon Colonel Lindbergh, Mr. Curtis, Lieutenant Richard and Edwin Bruce arrived at my home.

"I set the point for a rendezvous with the kidnapers' boat in a conference with Mr. Curtis and toward evening we drove to the boat house. We left Atlantic City at 7 p. m. and arrived at the rendezvous at 12:30 a. m. Tuesday in a northeast storm. We remained on the station until 5 a. m., but no boat hove in sight. Then we pulled into Cold Springs harbor.

"A continuous effort was made to contact the other boat by prearranged signals, using a masthead light for the purpose. Colonel Lindbergh personally flashed the signals.

"The sea was rough, but it would have been possible to visit the other boat.

"Tuesday the storm increased and it was not possible to leave anchorage. Colonel Lindbergh was aboard from Monday night until Thursday night.

"Mr. Bruce and Mr. Richard made a trip to New York Wednesday. Mr. Curtis was in Atlantic City Thursday. He caught Mr. Bruce and Lieutenant Richard with a phone message about 7 p. m., just when they started to board the Cacholot.

Rev. Dobson-Peacock Tells of Negotiations

NORFOLK, Va., May 14.—(UP) The Very Rev. H. Dodson-Peacock, one of the negotiators for the return of the Lindbergh baby, told the United Press tonight that an effort was made in New York last month to collect the Lindbergh ransom money from him.

Dean Dobson-Peacock said he was called to New York for a meeting at the Park Central hotel.

"I do not know the man I met there," the dean said. "The man wanted me to pay over the money on the promise that he would get the baby. His evidence was weak, however, and after discussing the matter with John H. Curtis, chief of Norfolk negotiators, Mr. Curtis and I returned together to Norfolk."

Dean Dobson-Peacock was asked about rumors from New York that the man he had met was Gaston Means.

"I am certain," he said, "that the man was not Means."

CONGRESSMAN ASKS $100,000 U. S. REWARD

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—A federal reward of $100,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the Lindbergh kidnapers was proposed in the house today by Representative Douglass, democrat, of Massachusetts.

He introduced a bill which read:

"Whereas, . . . The president of the United States has ordered and the American public demand that the criminals responsible for the kidnaping and murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. be brought to justice, and

"Whereas, . . . The president of the United States has directed the law enforcement agencies of the several secret services of the federal government to exert unceasingly all of their resources to apprehend those responsible for the atrocious crime perpetrated upon the Lindbergh baby, and

"Whereas, . . . Already vast amounts of money have been expended by both the federal and state enforcement authorities to bring about the capture of those indictable for the kidnaping and murder of the infant son of America's idol, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, with but futile results; therefore, be it

"Resolved, . . . That the attorney general of the United States is authorized and hereby directed to offer a reward of $100,00 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons guilty of kidnaping or causing the death of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

"There is authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000 for the purpose of paying the reward provided for in this act, such sum when appropriated to be paid to such person or divided among such persons as the attorney general of the United States may determine."

PAT CROWE QUIZZED FOR POSSIBLE CLUE

WYOMING, Pa., May 14.—(AP)—Pat Crowe, notorious kidnaper of a quarter century ago, is being "investigated" in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping, it was learned at the headquarters of the Pennsylvania state police tonight.

Authorities at the barracks here said they had decided to question Crowe because of his repeated statements on lecture platforms that the infant son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh would be found not far from Hopewell.

Police at Hazleton, Pa., where Crowe last was seen, said he called at their headquarters last Monday to ask their assistance in placing a telephone call to the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J. When they refused, Crowe departed and it was not known whether he had made the call.

FLA. JUNIOR CHAMBERS ASK DRY REFERENDUM

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 14. (AP)—The state Junior Chambers of Commerce in annual convention here today adopted resolutions asking congress to call a referendum on the 18th amendment.

Another resolution asked an immediate start on the construction of the new veterans' hospital at St. Petersburg.

M. M. Frost, Jacksonville, was elected president.

Tampa was selected as 1933 convention city.

CHICAGO CRITIC HURT WHEN PLANE CRASHES

GENEVA, Ill., May 14.—(UP)—Gail Borden, dramatic critic and columnist of the Chicago Sunday Times, was seriously injured here today when his airplane crashed from 1,000 feet shortly after a takeoff.

LINDY PROBERS TELL OF PROGRESS

Written Statement Being Taken From Rosner, Investigator Reveals.

By the Associated Press.

Bulletin at 10 a. m. by Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, state police superintendent:

"A written statement is being taken from Morris Rosner. Nothing in any way connecting him with the kidnapers has been disclosed during his questioning.

"His activities apparently were confined to endeavoring to make contact which would assist the family in contacting the actual kidnapers.

"Mr. Curtis (John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk (Va.) intermediary) is being questioned as to the contacts he had with the alleged kidnapers. These contacts were by telephone and in person.

"This is being continued and the check-up on such information as we get from him is being vigorously pursued.

"All the scrapings off the ground in the vicinity where the baby's body was found, together with the burlap bag, are being sent, for detailed analysis, to experts.

"Any findings that will not interfere in the possible apprehension of the criminals will be published in subsequent bulletins."

Schwarzkopf's Statement.

Colonel Schwarzkopf's 3 p. m. bulletin:

"Mr. Curtis described to the police authorities at this point a boat which he stated the alleged kidnapers were associated with. Through federal agencies, co-operating with this department, a request was made that the coast guard search for a boat such as described by Mr. Curtis. No report has been received as yet concerning the results of the search.

"Mr. Curtis gave the nicknames and descriptions of five men with whom he claims he had been dealing and who are alleged to be the kidnapers.

"These men were last reported to be on the boat referred to above and these descriptions were also given to the coast guard as a means of further identification.

"At no time was anything given to Mr. Curtis to deliver or show to Colonel Lindbergh, and no demands were made upon him by any of the alleged group of kidnapers with whom he was in contact as to any additional ransom payment.

"The only articles found at the place where the body was discovered were two articles of clothing on the body and a burlap bag lying on the ground, approximately 50 feet away from the body toward the road.

"All leaves and surface dirt for a considerable radius about the spot where the body was found were gathered after a search and brought to these headquarters.

"They are now being dried and when dry will be submitted to chemists for an analysis and study.

"Mr. Curtis is still at Hopewell. The broken shovel referred to was handed to the trooper guards at the scene by Chief Snook, of the Hopewell township police, who said he had received it from occupants of a New York car parked out on the road.

"This was turned over to a trooper in charge of the detail, who placed it at the base of a tree, where it was found this morning.

"The occupants of the New York car told Chief Snook they were Jersey city detectives, but were recognized as reporters who had been working on this case.

"Prosecutor Marshall had not been at these headquarters today, nor has any representative of his been here.

"Prosecutor Hauck has been at these headquarters today and has participated in the questioning of Morris Rosner."

Anne Lindbergh Directs Household

HOPEWELL, N. J., May 14.—(AP) Displaying unusual recuperative ability, the frail mother of the kidnaped and slain Lindbergh baby again took an active interest late today in the conduct of her desolate household atop the Sourland mountains.

Last night her strength wavered for the first time during the long strain and a physician was consulted. At her insistence she had been told the details of the finding of her first-born.

She retired early, but this afternoon she again exhibited the calm and composure that has been a remarkable characteristic of the tragedy.

"They're the kind of people that the harder things get, the stiffer their backbones become," was the way a friend and visitor explained her condition.

BRILLIANT BRAIN PLANNED CRIME, SCIENTISTS BELIEVE

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE.
(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 14.—(AP)—A probably brilliant, diseased mentality against which society can be protected, summarizes a diagnosis of the Lindbergh kidnaping made Friday by two leading authorities attending the American Medical Association.

One comment was by Franklin G. Ebaugh, M. D., chairman of the section on nervous and mental diseases, professor of psychiatry of the University of Denver and director of the Colorado State Psychopathic hospital.

The other was by Michael Osnato, M. D., of New York, professor of nervous diseases in the post graduate department of Columbia University.

Neither has commented for publication before. They talked to the Associated Press after the close of the medical association meetings.

Both said the kidnaper is probably a "psychopathic personality," a type of social menace not yet well recognized by law.

Mental brilliance and moral impecility were cited as outstanding characteristics of this personality.

A new type of crime prevention, akin to preventive medicine, was forecast to include this dangerous psychopathic. The first steps in establishing the new regime by co-operation between medical and legal professions were described.

"My impression," said Dr. Osnato, "contrary to many expressions that gangsters did it, is that the Lindbergh kidnaping was done by some extraordinarily intelligent person.

"This person calculated that because of Lindbergh's prominence he could put the whole thing through with minimum danger of punishment. The results suggest that this calculation proved correct when efforts were made to buy off the kidnaper with the promise of letting him go free at least so far as the persons contacting him were concerned."

PLOT TO ABDUCT LINDBERGH SEEN

was armed principally with Browning automatic rifles.

In addition, each time the Marcon cruised, a navy seaplane, in personal charge of Captain Kenneth Whiting, commandant of the Norfolk naval air station, went out to reconnoiter for the Marcon, to look for the phantom kidnap ship, and if necessary to speed back to the air base on Hampton Roads for aid.

There the navy tug Owl was ready for any emergency, and the Norfolk fleet of coast guard boats would have been on call.

Romantic Story.

The argosy of the fast, sturdy, keen-lined Marcon must be one of the most romantic of modern times.

To Lackmann, cool, matter-of-fact, in mid-thirties, with his face hardened to a dull brown by wind and sun, apparently the search for the Lindbergh baby was just another of his many jobs, though he admitted it was the most exciting thing in his career.

Captain Lackmann was taken into the confidence of Curtis early in the negotiations with the men who now are believed to be the actual kidnapers and murderers of the baby Lindbergh.

As soon as the kidnapers told Curtis to meet them at sea and obtain the baby (whose body even then lay in the woods near its home) Lackmann offered the Marcon. He said to Colonel Consolvo, its owner:

"If I'm missing for four or five days, don't worry. I'm going to do a little job, and I need the boat."

Colonel Consolvo told him to go as far as he liked, and the yacht was ready from that time on whenever Curtis needed it.

"It was quite a business," Captain Lackmann said. "Curtis was in constant touch with the kidnap gang by telephone. They gave him directions where to sail. They said they got their instructions from the boat on which they pretended they had the baby. They described it as a two-masted fishing schooner, a little over 100 feet long.

Kidnapers' Directions.

"We were to sight it from the air—the seaplane—by means of two white towels laid flat on the deckhouse. One day Captain Whiting did see a boat of that description flying two white pieces of cloth from the shrouds. But it might have been washing.

"Colonel Lindbergh joined us at the start. In addition, there were Curtis, Lieutenant George L. Richard (the crack pilot of the Norfolk station): Edwin B. Bruce, friend of Curtis; the mate, M. G. Mason, and the steward, Jack Frost, who was impressed as cook. He wanted a stripped, picked crew, and we left the engineer and ship's cook ashore. I attended to the engines myself.

"We first steamed out of Norfolk from Curtis' shipyard on the night of April 22. Each night we would come in, sometimes to the submarine base, sometimes to lie in an inlet.

"The kidnapers used to say they got their messages from the schooner on a 500-meter wave length, from a special rum runner's radio set that could send and not receive.

"They took Curtis aboard the ship on one occasion, before they claimed they took on the baby.

Means of Communication.

"The kidnap messages used to be sent to a shore station, a rum running gang apparently. Curtis would telephone these people each day to get directions. It seemed as if the men were moving along the coast, because Curtis used to have to telephone to various points.

"Our first cruise was to a point off Winter Quarter lightship, along the Delaware coast. Then it was to a point off Chesapeake lightship, 15 miles east, one-half north of Cape Henry.

"They would tell us to go out beyond sight of the lightship and then cruise in the direction they named for so many miles—20, 30, 40, north or south.

"By direction we would then go for 15 minutes toward each main compass point. We made a course like a cross, each arm about four nautical miles long. We would go first north 15 minutes, then back to our starting point. Then east 15 minutes, and back, and so on. That gave us a visible range, squaring the cross, of about 64 square miles—eight in each direction.

"After each cruise the kidnapers would tell us, they said by message from the ship, why they could not meet us. Fog, interference, heavy seas, and so forth. There was fog, there were storms, and there certainly was interference. One day the battleship Utah came near us. That would have given a kidnap ship a thrill. Again it was destroyers, again a fishing trawler.

Orders Changed.

"They changed our orders nearly every day, and finally they ordered Curtis north. Had the baby's body not been found, they would have come back here again, to carry on their terrible game to the finish—which I believe must have been an attempt to kidnap Colonel Lindbergh.

"The way we worked things out aboard was a system of three-hour watches. Mason, the mate, or myself, was always on deck. Curtis, Bruce, Lindbergh and Richard took their regular turns. Lindbergh was splendid. It is not hard to fancy what he was enduring. But he took his turn like the rest, eager to help, and he certainly made a fast friend of me.

"When we started out, the man who had had the most sleep would take the first watch, and we worked it out that way as best we could."

Lackmann was reticent about his own part. But he acted as his own engineer, he admitted in response to questions, in addition to splitting the 24 hours of the day with the mate on deck.

The Marcon started its first cruise on a Friday night. Lackmann had been up all day. He did not go to sleep until 1 p. m., Sunday. Then he had one hour, and he was up again until midnight. Things went that way right along.

"Weather and everything else was against us," Lackmann said.

"Curtis was knocked from the wheel once. Again, the cook was coming up to the galley when the refrigerator door was swung open by the tossing, and he got a bowl of eggs on his head. It took a pretty good seaman to get any sleep."

Skipper Wears Well.

The skipper was the only one aboard who did not show signs of the rough passages. Each time there was a spare hour after a cruise, he was at the Monticello hotel (owned by Colonel Consolvo) to see his wife and chat with those he knew, shaved and fresh looking.

"It was pretty hard going," he said. "Had not the Marcon been such a staunch boat we would have been in trouble, and we would have been out of luck if the engines had failed. At one time we were in a storm 87 miles out, east by north, of the Shesapeake lightship.

"I would have given anything to see that ship. The kidnapers told Curtis that it was chartered, and that they forced the skipper to do what they said. They said also that they shanghaid a German nurse. And they claimed that the reason for the broken English in their notes to Dr. John F. Condon was that they made her write them to conceal their own hands.

"It was something to remember, and we certainly were shooting for big game. I am sorry we could not get the baby, and I have the utmost sympathy for Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh. But maybe we have done something to make it harder for the next man who contemplates going in for kidnaping."

Prosecutors at Scene of Crime

This Associated Press telephoto shows Prosecutors Erwin A. Marshall, left, of Mercer county, New Jersey, and Anthony Hauck, of Hunterdon county, in a thicket at Mount Rose in the Sourland Mountains, near where the body of the slain Lindbergh baby was found. They made an investigation at the scene where the body was discovered, but pictures were not obtainable because of the heavy growth of trees.

'FRAME-UP' CHARGED IN ABDUCTION PLOT

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., May 14. (AP)—City and county authorities today continued to hold two men suspected of a plot to kidnap 6-year-old Edith Marie Gardner, while they debated what charges to make against them.

The suspects are Edgar "Shine" Mote, 25, and Jerry Metz, 35. They were arrested Friday morning, as police revealed the result of an investigation they said had been going on for several days.

Officers said Mote probably would be released from custody soon. They said they did not believe he had any criminal part in the alleged plot, although they said he confessed to them how Metz had plotted with him to kidnap the child, daughter of Dr. David M. Gardner, of St. Petersburg, and hold her for $30,000 ransom.

Meanwhile, Metz, held in the county jail at Clearwater, asserted in an interview that he was the victim of a "frame-up." He denied any knowledge of such a plot as the police charged, and said "the whole thing can be explained."

He urged that he be allowed to see Dr. Gardner, pastor of the First Baptist church here, contending that he could clear himself in a discussion with the minister.

Police said they had signed statements from several persons revealing the entire story of the alleged plot. They charged that Metz, who said he came here from Bluefield, W. Va., first attempted to enlist confederates from that state, and failing in that, approached local people to join him in the venture.

Mote charged Metz with the entire plot when he confessed, police said.

He said Metz approached him with the plan, but that he never seriously considered it. Thursday night, he said Metz and another man approached him in a car, but that he refused to go through with the kidnaping plot.

Authorities indicated that a charge of conspiracy to commit a felony might be made against Metz and another man, whom they are seeking.

A man who said he was approached to serve as "go-between" for the would-be kidnapers revealed the plot to police, and they investigated for several days. They said they made the arrests Friday morning after learning that Mote had refused to go through with the plan.

The child was to be kidnaped, police said they learned, while she was en route to school Friday morning. She was to be held while the $30,000 ransom was demanded from Dr. Gardner and delegates attending the Southern Baptist convention here.

Montgomery Plans Full School Salary

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 14.—(UP)—City and county officials came to the aid of Montgomery county school teachers Saturday, directing the county board of education to tender contracts for full salary next term.

The board previously offered contracts providing payment of half salary, the other half payable "when and if collected from the state."

The new contract, drafted by Mayor W. A. Gunter and Cyrus Brown, chairman of the county board of revenue, calls for a four and one-half months' school term, though hope was expressed by officials that schools may continue a full nine-month term.

Today's action ended a bitter dispute between the board and the teachers, backed by parent-teacher organizations of the county.

MISSISSIPPI COURT RECORDS ARE STOLEN

PURVIS, Miss., May 14.—(AP)—A truck load of books and records were stolen last night from the Lamar county court house and today were reported missing.

Officials said the stolen records were taken from an upstairs room occupied by J. H. Nevill and Company, an auditing firm which had been engaged in auditing the county's record books.

Among the missing records were a great quantity of cancelled warrants, a bank statement and warrant books. There was no clue today to the identity of the thief.

Federal Aid Offered In Letter to Gov. Moore

TRENTON, N. J., May 14.—(AP)—By direction of President Hoover a formal tender of federal assistance in hunting the murderers of the Lindbergh baby was transmitted to Governor A. Harry Moore today by Attorney-General Mitchell, who took extraordinary steps to facilitate the delivery of his communication.

75 U. S. VESSELS JOIN IN SEARCH

28,000 Federal Men Thrown Into Manhunt by Hoover Orders.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(UP) The coast guard kept vigil tonight from Virginia to Cape Cod, and concentrated a fleet in New York waters in an attempt to capture a mysterious ship believed to be involved in the Lindbergh kidnaping.

High officials of the service expressed the opinion that some definite clue, if forthcoming from the sea, will be found within 48 hours.

The 75 ships, including six destroyers, now working on the case, are part of the federal army of 28,000 men that President Hoover has mobilized with orders to make the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby "a never-to-be-forgotten case." It includes such able investigators as J. Edgar Hoover, director of the justice department's bureau of investigation, and Elmer L. Irey, chief of the treasury department's investigators. They are the men who are credited with doing most of the work that resulted in the conviction of Al Capone on income tax fraud charges.

Presumably Hoover and Irey will work chiefly on the angle involving the $50,000 which Dr. J. F. Condon paid to men with whom he established contact through a series of newspaper advertisements. The treasury department has a record of the serial numbers of the bills and if many of them are put into circulation the tracking down of the men who got the money should be a comparatively easy task.

The 75 coast guard ships are divided into 24 patrols and are maintaining constant radio communication with land bases and police authorities. No information was forthcoming regarding the particular ship for which the search was being made except that it is supposed to be off New York city in the Long Island section.

It is understood orders have been issued for the boarding of any craft imperfectly identified and the men in the various coast guard stations have been ordered on a 24-hour watch.

The state department announced today it was ready to order its far-flung system of consulates and embassies throughout the world to be on watch for the slayers of the baby if such a request is received from the justice department.

BAPTISTS REPORT INCOME DECLINE

Cut Budget But Disregard Salary Slash to $2,500 of All Preachers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., May 14. (AP)—The Southern Baptist convention, faced with decreased revenues and mounting indebtedness, today met the situation by slashing its 1933 budget 12 per cent, and by ordering reductions in salaries and consolidation of boards and agencies wherever possible.

Dr. Fred F. Brown, of Knoxville, Tenn., was elected president, succeeding Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, of Greenville, S. C., who retired after serving three years.

Washington, D. C., was chosen for the 1933 convention, which will immediately follow the Northern Baptist convention.

Dr. Meade E. Dodd, of Shreveport, La., was elected first vice president, and Dr. J. E. Dillard, of Birmingham, Ala., was chosen second vice president.

High C. Moore, of Nashville, and Henry Burnett, of Macon, were re-elected executive secretaries.

Cheer Prohibition.

Meeting at night, the Baptist adopted with cheers a report of the social service commission which commended prohibition, condemned gambling and touched upon numerous other points.

The education commission, in its report, called for a campaign to stem what it pictured as a growing tide of "the influences which have tended to break down spiritual attitudes."

Better financial support for denominational schools and colleges was recommended as the best means of accomplishing this.

Anticipating further decreases in income, the convention ordered its boards and departments to prepare their 1933 budgets on a basis of 88 per cent of the 1932 total contributions.

The 1931 receipts for all church work totaled $32,618,128.56, a decrease of $4,870,892.72 from 1930.

The 1932 budget, however, was made on a basis of 100 per cent of the 1931 contributions. This action, in the light of various reports of dropping revenues, caused the convention to adopt a resolution calling for every possible consolidation or elimination of departments.

An annual campaign January 15 to March 1 to raise funds for debt retirement was authorized.

Refuse Salary Cuts.

An attempt to set a goal of $1,000,000 for the campaign next year failed. The campaign will be continued for five years.

Another campaign approved was to raise $300,000 during June and July of this year for support of home and foreign missions.

A proposal by E. W. Hagood, of Sheffield, Ala., to reduce the salaries of every preacher, to "not more than $2,500 annually until the church debt is met, was greeted by a ripple of laughter. It finally was ruled out of order as President McGlothlin held the convention had no authority over the individual churches.

A warning that southern Baptists will not support the political party that nominates a "wet" for president was issued tonight.

"If either of the political parties shall go wrong either in platform or its nominees and undertake to destroy prohibition we will turn away from that party and support a party and candidate that stand for maintenance and perpetuation of prohibition as our greatest national policy," the warning read.

The report commended prohibition, world disarmament, better interracial relations and Boy Scout work and opposed military training, the motion picture industry "as it is operated at the present time," gambling, mob violence and clamoring for re-submission of the eighteenth amendment to the states.

Deplore Modern Shows.

Summarizing its report, the commission, through Dr. Arthur J. Barton of Wilmington, N. C., offered these resolutions among others:

1. That we deplore and condemn the salacious and immoral features characteristic of most of the motion pictures now being presented on the screen.

2. That we urge all parents to exercise the greatest care and diligence that children and young people shall be kept away from the theaters when objectionable or questionable pictures are on exhibition.

3. That we approve the Brookhart bill, now before the United States senate, proposing to prohibit block-booking and blind-booking, whereby producers have compelled exhibitors to show their pictures without the right of choice; and that we give our support to any other legislation intended to prevent the exhibition of unclean pictures.

4. That we condemn all forms of gambling; that we deplore all existing legislation and every proposal for the enactment of legislation to legalize gambling in any form, especially race track gambling, one of the most prevalent and one of the most corrupting forms of this evil. . . .

5. That we commend the Boy Scout movement, and recommend . . . that each of our Baptist churches sponsor a scout troop.

6. That we retaffirm our approval of the permanent court of international justice and our belief that the senate of the United States without further delay ought to ratify the protocol of the court by which approval our government could and would have official representation on this court.

Rap Easy Divorce.

7. That we oppose the continued large expenditure by the government for military and naval equipment; that we oppose military training in the schools and colleges, whether denominational or state; and that we favor full and complete disarmament as rapidly as it possibly can be accomplished, except such armament as may be absolutely necessary for police duty within our own territory and on our borders.

The committee described as "a source of gratitude" its ability to report there were eight fewer instances of mob violence during 1931 than in 1930. The 1931 total was 13.

"The prophets and people of God, all who believe in human justice," the report said, "must unsparingly condemn this brutal and lawless crime until it is stamped out and our civilization is saved from its blight." Lynching, it was said, "threatens the very foundations of government."

Of marriages and divorces, the report said, in part, "The thing most needed now is better laws regulating and destricting marriage. Only so can hasty, ill-considered and unseemly marriages be prevented and the number of divorces reduced."

Characters Made Famous in Joel Chandler Harris Stories Live Again at Wren's Nest

Perched on the corner of a split-rail fence instead of his usual listening place by the cabin hearth, the Little Boy (Lucien Harris III) Saturday afternoon heard Uncle Remus' latest story about the animals on Snap Bean farm. The picture at the left shows the Harris child, great-grandson of Joel Chandler Harris, and "Uncle" John Cooley, representing Uncle Remus. In the center is little Miss Barbara Hastings, newly-crowned queen of the May Flower Festival of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, sitting on the throne; while at the right is Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, life president of the association, with John Henry Horsch. These pictures were snapped by Bill Mason, staff photographer, at the flower festival at the Wren's Nest Saturday afternoon, when a large group of Atlanta children and adults attended the colorful event.

BY WILLIAM O. KEY JR.

Surrounded by happy, smiling faces and bathed in a sunburst of splendor, little Miss Barbara Hastings was crowned queen of the May Flower Festival of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association at Snap Bean farm Saturday afternoon.

In the midst of re-enacted scenes from the stories of Joel Chandler Harris, and with an improvised Uncle Remus so realistic in appearance that it seemed to be the old negro man himself, the coronation was witnessed by hundreds of children and grown-ups.

Around the rear of the Wren's Nest, in the green, cool gloaming of shade trees and rambling vines the May sun spilled through to make dappled shadows on the ground of the old homestead, and here children romped and played, or went "fishing" at Brer Bar's fishing hole, which had been rigged up for the smaller tots who drew tiny dolls and other little momentoes from behind a canvas replica of the place where Brer Bar fished.

There were goodies, too—brown gingercake and ginger-bread boys; sugary popcorn and ice cream, and soft drinks of all kind. Music was in the air, furnished by the police band under direction of Captain John Scharf, and the happy crowds mingled about Snap Bean farm in a colorful pattern of costume. There were little ones dressed in crinoline and bustle; still smaller tots garbed in snow-white bunny costumes, with fluffy cottontails; black-garbed and soot-faced Tar Babies; others made up as Brer Rabbit, Brer Fox and Sis Cow.

Little Miss Nancy Brayon, last year's queen, placed the crown on the head of the new monarch, amidst a court of ladies-in-waiting, pages and trumpeters which made it just like a real coronation. Children from toddling size to early 'teens took part, and represented virtually every section of Atlanta.

Preceding the coronation ceremonies Lee Street school pupils presented a pageant, "Sis Cow Falls Victim to Brer Rabbit." Beverly Barrow enacted the role of Sis Cow, while Slade Dean essayed that of Brer Rabbit, and Brer Fox was played by little Lorraine Reece. A cast of little rabbits assisted in the pageant.

Pupils from Peeples Street school next presented "Miss Meadows and de Gals in which Patricia Smith took the titular role, with Billie Baldwin playing the fox, and Tommie Hardy the rabbit. The pageant was featured by a reading by Betty Ramsey.

Perhaps the most gleeful pageant was that of the J. C. Harris school in "The Wonderful Tar Baby Story." Billie Reeves Anderson, playing as the rabbit; and Tom Haynes as the fox, aroused a chorus of mirth with the famous episode of the sticky tar baby and a chorus of blackened tar babies proved ultra-modern, coming onto the stage with some agile tap dance steps.

Throughout it all, on the left side of the rostrum sat 97-year-old "Uncle" John Cooley, who presented a wonderful portrayal of the real Uncle Remus pictured in the noted stories. By his side sat Lucien Harris III, great grandson of Joel Chandler Harris, in a rapt attitude—as if he were the little boy who listened long ago.

This year's program was the twenty-third annual festival, and was under the direction of Mrs. Brevard Montgomery, chairman of the festival committee of the association.

SOLONS DEMAND DEBT SHOWDOWN

Resolution Asks President To Call World Conference on Prices.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The house coinage commitee today officially demanded a showdown on international debts.

After a lengthy study of silver and monetary exchanges, it submitted to the house for approval a resolution requesting the president to invite interested nations to join a round-table discussion for "the restoration of the commodity price level," and added:

"The raising of the commodity price level should have instant appeal to those nations which are debtors to the United States, if for no other reason than that international debts will be reduced in inverse ratio to the rise in commodities . . . .

"The nations which decline to attend a conference which will be called for the sole purpose of re-establishing the normal basis of economic relations between debtors and creditors, thus materially favoring such nations as are debtors of the United States, will automatically have served notice on this country that their true intention is not to reduce their debts . . . but rather to induce our government to establish the principle of the capacity to pay at a time when that capacity is virtually non-existant."

This statement was included in a lengthy partial report the committee submitted after a three months' investigation ordered by the house of silver and monetary exchanges.

Five republican members of the committee signed a minority report. They endorsed the resolution for the conference, but said they could not agree with some conclusions drawn by the full committee in its report. They did not explain with what conclusions they found fault.

The committee proposed that the conference be convened not later than July 1, 1932.

POSTMASTERS URGED TO SUPPORT HOOVER

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 14.—(AP)—Urging Missouri postmasters to defend and support Herbert Hoover, W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster-general, told the postmasters' state convention here today that "as long as you do that, you are filling the job of postmaster."

"You are a part of this administration," he said. "It is best for us to get out on the firing line. I shall be back in Washington Monday, and I will be glad to take the resignations of any of you postmasters who do not want to do it."

Answering those who say what America needs is a leader, Glover declared, "We've got a leader. We have had one for years. If we do not stand back of that man Hoover, regardless of party, God help this country."

BY SIDNEY B. WHIPPLE.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(UP)—New York blew the bung from its pent-up craving for old-fashioned beer today, and frothed into a parade that flowed in sparkling streams through uptown streets all day and far into the night.

There were 100,000 constitutionally thirsty marchers in line, and 400,000 citizens jammed the sidewalks to watch them pass, led by the bubbling Jimmy Walker in a double-breasted suit and derby hat.

The populace in hotels overlooking the parade showered the mayor with roses and greeted him with noisy applause. They cheered without discrimination both the Plattdeutscher Volkfest Verein, marching because they hope for the return of beer, and the chorus girls' division, marching because the girls are so, so tired of champagne.

Marching grimly half way down the long roster of civic, patriotic, sporting and theatrical organizations came the Anti-Profanity Society. They passed, one might say, without a word.

Civil War veterans in automobiles and World War veterans on crutches. Greenwich Village mummers and gold star mothers. The house-wreckers union side by side with the building trades—symbols of New York. The Improving Social Club band, and the Fulton Fish Market Association.

The J. M. Kelley Marching and Chowder Club, and the Association for Better Citizenship. The Hamburg Geselligkeits Verein and the Societe Francaise. The Compressed Air Workers' Association, which labors 1,000 feet below the Hudson river, and the structural steel workers, who labor high above it.

Old men with the memory of musty ale in their faded eyes. Hundreds of children, too young to know the days when it was easy to send around the corner, with a pitcher in a paper bag.

And one father, carrying a child in his arms along the four-mile course, in order to have Jimmy Walker pat the baby at the finish. "He's wet, too," the papa said proudly. And Walker agreed.

There was a truck resembling a broadcasting station, from which a spellbinder addressed the multitudes along the route. He explained, in his two-minute speeches, that the whole purpose of the parade was economic—not that New Yorkers actually want beer, but that to tax beer will cure the nation's economic ills.

The entire cast of "Of Thee I Sing," burlesque senators, politicians, White House secretaries, and chorus, chanted joyful songs along the way, followed by the choruses of "The Cat and the Fiddle" and "Face the Music."

There were a hundred bands, ranging from three-piece orchestras (piano, piano bench and pianist) to the Seventh Regiment outfit, whose blaring brass could be heard for miles when it was not drowned out by Caledonia bag-pipers, skirling from 72d street to 39th, and easily heard the whole distance.

The parade began at 10 a. m. with its chief sponsor only ten minutes late. He had been delayed by a search for the proper posy for his buttonhole, and threatened to wind up with a dandelion until he found a good looking gardenia.

It was a grand day for the parade, despite the fact that the W. C. T. U., which has scoffed at its purpose, had predicted rain. Late in the afternoon, when the last of the daylight marchers were struggling to get into the nearest speakeasies, the clouds rolled over the scenes, but it was too late to do any damage.

The evening parade was a repetition of the daylight procession, except in extent. In fact, rather than a repetition, it was merely a continuation.

Some of the day-time marchers, it appeared, enjoyed the walk so much they repeated the jaunt for exercise.

"This is thirsty work," some of them reported. And others persuaded their wives that the parade was long and so many people were waiting to get in line, that they might not get through marching until next Wednesday.

PABST FAVORS MOVEMENT AS MILWAUKEEANS MARCH

MILWAUKEE, May 14.—(UP)—Thousands of residents of the city that "beer made famous" paraded today to urge beer's return.

The mile-long parade was led by police and American Legion bands. Among the onlookers banking sidewalks were some of the 6,000 men and women who earned their living in breweries prior to 1918.

"We have plenty of moonshine, but we want beer," one marcher shouted.

Representatives of breweries were banned. Fred Pabst, owner of Milwaukee's largest brewing plant, watched the marchers.

"The $6 a barrel tax on beer would net the government approximately $300,000,000 a year if the Volstead law could be revised," he said. "This would pay 4 per cent interest on the amortization bonds for 20 years."

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, socialist and wet, refused to participate in the demonstration. He has said he does not believe a tax on beer would solve the nation's problems, although he believes it would help.

The parade required 23 minutes to pass. It had been expected it would be much longer.

ONE-MAN BEER PARADE IS STAGED BY CHICAGOAN

CHICAGO, May 14.—(UP)—Chicago had a one-man beer parade today.

Promptly at the scheduled hour, C. E. Browning hummed "Strike Up the Band," hoisted a flag over his left shoulder, dangled a cane with his right hand and managed also to display a banner as he began marching. The banner read: "We (sic) are for bringing back beer for tax and better times."

Browning didn't march far. The day was the warmest of this spring and despite his light suit he began perspiring.

So he waived the privileges of the official parade permit, chose a short cut on his line of march, and went home.

DETROIT MAYOR HEADS PARADE OF 30,000

DETROIT, May 14.—(UP)—Mayor Frank Murphy headed a "beer" parade of 30,000 Legionnaires, Crusaders and factory workers through Detroit streets today.

The parade, which required three hours to pass a designated point, included hundreds of automobile floats carrying signs which read:

"We Want Beer," "Lighten the Tax Load With Lager," and "Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment."

Floats equipped with musical horns playing "How Dry I Am" passed in review before good-natured crowds lining the sidewalks. The 200-piece band of the Detroit Federation of Musicians marched at the head of one division to the strains of "Sweet Adeline."

American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps led other divisions. Forty-eight taxicabs, representing the states in the Union, rolled past bearing signs which recorded the results of the Literary Digest poll on prohibition.

DAYTONA BEACH SEES THOUSANDS ON PARADE

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., May 14. (AP)—This little city, which the census says has less than 17,000 permanent residents, today turned out in a parade more than two miles long, with thousands from here and the hinterland participating in protest against the eighteenth amendment.

Headed by a placard, "We Want Beer," the marchers assembled at a central point where they drank beer from an old-fashioned 20-gallon keg.

A solid line of automobiles took part in the carnival. Floats representing the local labor council and the American Legion, which organizations had a large part in the parade's sponsorship, all were conspicuously manned and decorated.

The idea originated from a letter published by Lawton Carver, sports editor of The News-Journal, advocating the parade as a means of sounding out public sentiment. Public and civic groups took it up.

WETS, DRYS DEFEATED IN SYRACUSE PARADE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 14.—(AP)—They said it with music here today when wets and drys gathered because of the wet parade. Drys began with "Onward Christian Soldiers" over a church chimes; wets quickly replied by putting a loudspeaker atop an automobile. Rain drenched them both, so it was called a draw.

DRIVER IS SOUGHT FOR AVERY DEATH

Bartow and Cobb county police were searching Saturday for the driver of a truck which struck a car driven by Paul W. Avery, 26, of 1034 Piedmont avenue, N. E., Friday afternoon, tearing off Mr. Avery's left arm, from which injury he died at St. Joseph's infirmary early Saturday morning. Following the accident, which occurred two miles north of Acworth, the truck failed to stop, according to eye-witnesses.

Kenneth Dowdy, Indianapolis, Ind., youth, whom Avery had picked up hitch-hiking to Atlanta, took the wheel following the crash and rushed the injured man to Acworth for emergency treatment. Later he was rushed to Atlanta in an ambulance and transfusions were administered, but loss of blood and the shock of the blow brought his death.

Dowdy said the truck overtook and passed Avery's car and in doing so cut across in front of the lighter vehicle, sideswiping it and tearing off the driver's arm.

Avery was vice president of the Weekley Elevator Company, and is the son of S. H. Avery, of Newnan. Surviving are his wife and small son, Paul Jr., and nine brothers. He was the son-in-law of P. J. McCormack, proprietor of the Southern Printing Company.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the residence, with Dr. L. R. Christie officiating. Interment will be in West View cemetery. Pallbearers will be George Yancey, J. A. Hayes Jr., T. L. Johnson Jr., Harvey Reeves, Parks Avery and William McCormack. Sam Greenberg & Co. in charge.

Citizens Group With Lindy as Head Could Stamp Out Crime, Says Key

With Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, America's martyred father, at its head, an organization of citizens directing its attention to stamping out crime and vice would be able to solve this country's criminal problem within a remarkably short time, Mayor James L. Key suggested Saturday.

"If there ever was a time to take advantage of a dreadful situation and reap the benefit for humanity, it is now," Mayor Key said. "Colonel Lindbergh, to whom the sympathy of the country has gone out in his hour of bereavement, holds, in my opinion, the key to a movement which, if he unlocks the door, will swell to such proportions that those hoodlums and gangsters and criminals who are now preying upon the public will be put out of business behind prison bars or run out of the country."

Mayor Key said that he had not evolved any particular plan under which his suggestion could be carried out, but that a number of courses are open to Colonel Lindbergh, including election to congress on a platform of stamping out crime, organization of a national committee of citizens sworn to eradicate the gangster menace or leadership of a concerted drive for better law enforcement.

"I would like to see Colonel Lindbergh come out for the senate or house on a platform aimed at extermination of gang murderers, kidnapers, extortioners, and similar hoodlums," Mayor Key said. "I believe that he could, with the public sentiment which has been aroused over this case, put through reforms which would be far-reaching and lasting. Crime costs this country huge sums every year, and one way to help restore prosperity is to cut down on the enormous toll taken by the criminals. With the influence that would be his in such a movement, Colonel Lindbergh would be able to render this country and the world one of the greatest services humanity has ever received."

Wakefield, Washington Birthplace, Presented to Federal Government

WAKEFIELD, Va., May 14.—(AP) The lands and buildings of Wakefield, birthplace of George Washington, were given into the custody of the federal government today, by the Wakefield National Memorial Association.

After years of effort, motivated largely by the patriotic interest of the late Mrs. Josephine Wheelwright Rust, the organization's first and only president, the association has completely restored Washington's birthplace to its colonial aspect.

Mrs. Anthony Payne Cook, of Cooksville, Pa., first vice president of the association, made the address of presentation at the ceremonies this morning.

The speaker outlined briefly the story of the association's efforts to secure Wakefield from its century of oblivion, and described the conditions faced by it at the beginning of its efforts.

"Even the foundations of the house were no longer visible," she said, "because of an accumulation of heavy overgrowth. In a plowed field, nearly a mile away, was the family vault and burial ground, overgrown with brambles."

Mrs. Cook described Mrs. Rust's persistence in calling the attention of the country to the "incredible and deplorable" fact that the nation was preparing to celebrate Washington's bicentennial without reclaiming and restoring his birthplace and the burial ground of his forebears.

To the furtherance of this colossal task, she said, the association was formed, and its early work, aided by the philanthrophy of John D. Rockefeller Jr., the historical and genealogical researches of Charles A. Noppin, and the advice and co-operation of the commission of fine arts, the restoration was completed, authentic in all details.

The whole-hearted co-operation of congress in the association's work was also praised by the speaker.

"Today's brief recital of these steps of accomplishments," she said, "gives them an aspect of triumphal progress. Only those of us who had a part in the task of perfecting corollary organizations, in every state in the Union, walking the halls of congress, importuning the necessary legislation and the aid of high government officials, these persons and only these can measure the inspiring zeal, wisdom and devotion of the association's first and only president, Mrs. Harry Lee Rust."

In the formal presentation, Mrs. Cook consigned the property "in sacred trust, representing the free will offering of the people of this nation in memory of George Washington. For all time may they symbolize God-fearing citizenship and exalted love of country."

Secretary Wilbur was present to accept for the United States.

METHODISTS BALLOT ON 2 NEW BISHOPS

BY WILLIAM A. KINNEY.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 14. (AP)—More than a hundred Methodist Episcopal ministers were entered in the balloting today as the general conference of the church started the task of picking two new bishops.

Dr. Lewis O. Hartman, of Boston, chairman of the New England delegation and editor of the Zion's Herald, received more than half the 547 votes necessary for election on the first ballot, which ordinarily is considered only nominating in character.

His total of 228 votes compared with 147 for Joseph H. M. Gray, pastor of the Central Church of Detroit, who was second highest.

After the results of the first ballot were announced, the second ballot was cast and sealed for tabulation Monday.

Japanese invasion of China was viewed as a continued threat to world peace today by Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, in an address before the conference.

Early United States adherence to the World Court, under the Root protocol, was urged by Robinson as a step toward the substitution of justice for force in the settlement of disputes between nations.

Submission of interpretative reservations to the World Court to the major powers would delay United States entry, Robinson said, at a time when the influence of this country is needed. He opposed a resolution of the senate foreign relations committee providing that the reservation would be submitted to the powers. The reservation would interpret the United States exception to the World Court protocol that no advisory opinion touching a subject in which our government claims an interest will be rendered over our objection.

Quartet To Sing.

Morehouse College quartet will sing at the West End Presbyterian church at the evening services at 8 o'clock tonight, it was announced by the pastor, the Rev. E. L. Flanagan. The public is invited.

Sue Carol Expects Stork's Visit in July

CHICAGO, May 14.—(UP)—Sue Carol told reporters at the train as she and her husband, Nick Stuart, left for Hollywood tonight that she expects to become a mother in July.

The screen actress, a former Chicago girl, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. S. M. Lederer. Miss Carol said she intended to resume her work in motion pictures as soon as convenient after her baby is born.

ROOSEVELT RAPS OUSTER OF PYRKE

New York Commissioner of Agriculture Is Defended by State Executive.

BY WALTER T. BROWN.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., May 14. (AP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt today assailed as an "outrage" the removal of New York's state commissioner of agriculture, Berne A. Pyrke by a republican-directed state council of farms and markets, asserting "it is the first time in New York's history a department head has been thrown out because he refused to use his office to play politics."

Governor Roosevelt commended Pyrke's 11 years of service as agriculture head, declaring "he co-operated with all agricultural interests of the state." Pyrke is a republican.

The departments of agriculture and education are the only ones in New York's state government which, after reorganization, remained under the domination of the state legislature, which generally is republican, while the chief executive, since 1918, has been a democrat. Four department heads are elected and 13 are appointed by the governor.

Republican Accusation.

For two years there has been dissatisfaction in the republican ranks, one group claiming Pyrke was too friendly to Roosevelt's farm program. When legislature launched an investigation into Roosevelt's administration, avowedly to effect economies, Pyrke's department was first to be scrutinized.

Roosevelt's farm policies, with which Pyrke co-operated are given a large part of the credit for the governor's ability at the last gubernatorial election to put up-state republican counties into the democratic column.

Henry Morgenthau Jr., conservation commissioner, visiting with Roosevelt here, said Pyrke "in operating his department has had only one thing uppermost in his mind—what is best for agriculture." Morgenthau publishes a farm paper.

Brandon a Visitor.

Delegations from Alabama and from Shiloh, Ga., visited Roosevelt today. The Alabamans were from all sections of that state and were headed by W. C. Fitts, of Birmingham, manager for Mr. Roosevelt in Alabama. Included in the last from Alabama was former Governor W. W. Brandon, whose booming of "24 votes for Underwood" was a feature of the 1924 democratic convention. He said his voice now is in shape to announce 24 for Roosevelt at the Chicago convention next month.

Governor Roosevelt tonight was a spectator and Lee Pattison, concert pianist, was orchestra leader at the patients' show of the Warm Springs Foundation. A member of Pattison's family is a patient htre. Newspaper reporters, with the governor, staged a political satire with performers from the Inner Circle and Albany correspondents taking part. The Inner Circle is made up of New York political writers.

Stimson Optimistic On Arms Meet Success

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson returned tonight from the Geneva five-power conference with the optimistic prediction that while the illness of Andre Tardieu, French premier, was a case of "temporary bad luck," it will not seriously affect the ultimate result of the disarmament conversations.

Mr. Stimson, who reached New York on the Vulcania, declared there was "no cynicism among the leaders at the conference." He added: "They realize how serious it would be to fail, and that is my reason for the belief that they will get together ultimately.

"It is difficult to say when the conference will end. I can not emphasize too strongly the enormous complexity of this meeting. Conclusions must be unanimous, and it is difficult to reconcile the viewpoints of more than 50 nations. It will take the utmost patience and much time."

AMERICAN AID ASKED FOR JEWS IN POLAND

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—An American committee headed by Felix M. Warburg, Rabbi Jonah B. Wise and others today called upon the American people for aid to Jewish citizens of Poland, whose want was described as "so acute as to be seemingly hopeless."

Abraham Grafman, Warsaw editor, in the committee's letter of appeal, said Jews in Poland had been aided somewhat by funds raised in 25 cities in the United States and Canada under leadership of Rabbi Wise, but that campaigns were to be carried on in other cities.

The joint distribution committee sought $2,500,000 for Poland and other central and eastern European countries.

Native of Bainbridge Reveals Plans To Entertain Georgians at Olympics

An invitation to attend the tenth Olympic games in Los Angeles, July 30 to August 14 inclusive, is extended to the people of Georgia in a message received from Mrs. Erle M. Leaf, native daughter of Georgia, and official Olympic hostess for this state. Under the direction of Mrs. Leaf, special arrangements are being made to accommodate and entertain Georgians who attend the games.

MRS. ERLE M. LEAF.

Tours to points of interest, teas, visits to the motion picture studios, garden parties, and beach picnics are among the events for Georgians which are being planned under the direction of Mrs. Leaf, who is a member of the group of hostesses headed by Mrs. Herbert Hoover, honorary chairman.

Assisting Mrs. Leaf will be other Georgia women who will devote their efforts toward entertaining visitors to the games from this state. Representatives of the hostesses will be placed in each of the major hotels and women's clubs, and Georgia visitors are urged to get in touch with these representatives, who will notify Mrs. Leaf of their presences, and arrange for their attendance at the events which are being especially planned for Georgians.

Visits to the world-famous Huntington Art Galleries will be arranged, as will also tours of some of the most famous California gardens and points of historic interest. Sunday evening, July 31, there will be a pageant of all nations at Hollywood Bowl, with singers and musicians of each nation presenting their native songs. Another outstanding event will be the grand international ball of the state hostesses, to be attended by distinguished guests from every nation participating in the games. This ball, it is believed, will be unrivaled in the history of the nation for color and splendor.

Mrs. Leaf, who is the daughter of Judge E. C. Bower, was born in Bainbridge, as was her father. Her mother, Harriet Daffin, was also a native of Georgia. Although she has resided in California since childhood, Mrs. Leaf has retained an active interest in Georgia affairs, being prominently identified with the Daughters of the Confederacy and other southern organizations. She was sponsor for the Pacific division of the Confederate veterans at Nashville, Tenn. Many members of the Bower family still reside in Decatur county, and in other parts of the state.

Georgians who plan to attend the Olympic games are urged to write to Mrs. Leaf, at Olympic Games Headquarters, Los Angeles, for information, for reservations to the international ball, or concerning any other events in which they are particularly interested.

SENATOR WALSH WARNS MONTANA AGAINST DEADLOCK

and conventions in Kansas, New Mexico, Montana, South Carolina, Vermont, Tennessee and Nevada to pledge another 90 or more. The democrats to date have named 806 delegates divided as follows:

xRoosevelt, instructed, pledged and claimed	362
Lewis, pledged	58
White, pledged	52
Smith, pledged	46
Garner, pledged	44
Reed, instructed	36
Murray, instructed and pledged	23
Ritchie, pledged	16
xxPreference in doubt	169
Total	806

(x) This includes 58 claimed for Roosevelt, of which 11 in Porto Rico and the Canal Zone are disputed by the Smith forces.

(xx) Includes 76 from Pennsylvania, 92 from New York and 1 from Alaska. How Pennsylvania and New York will line up definitely will not be known until the two delegations caucus at Chicago. Roosevelt and Smith claims still overlap in the Keystone state, with the Roosevelt forces claiming a minimum of 63 and the Smith group 38.

Republicans will select 87 delegates next week—in primaries in Oregon and New Jersey and in conventions in Montana, Alabama and Vermont.

President Hoover, whose renomination has been regarded as a foregone conclusion for weeks, stands to pick up enough votes out of the 87 to place his actual pledged strength beyond the required 578 convention majority. He already has 921, or 343 more than a majority, if his managers' claims are included, but he needs only 44 more pledged votes to make his renomination an unqualified certainty.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—The confident statement that "by the time the convention meets in Chicago Governor Roosevelt will have the delegations of every state west of the Mississippi river with the exception of California, Texas and Oklahoma," was issued today by James A. Farley.

He added the prediction "there will be in all, delegates—selected or instructed—from over 35 states and territories" lined up behind the Roosevelt banner.

Farley, unofficial manager of the New York governor's campaign for the democratic presidential nomination, reiterated his often repeated statement that "Governor Roosevelt will be nominated on the first ballot."

He said the progress of the Roosevelt campaign "has been entirely satisfactory up to the present time. The stop-Roosevelt movement, despite statements to the contrary, has not and will not get anywhere.

"I am certain that the rank and file of the people in every state are thoroughly convinced that Governor Roosevelt is the strongest and best-fitted candidate to carry the democratic party to victory in the November election."

His confidence in the quick nomination of Roosevelt was based, he said, on the letters received daily "from hundreds of democrats as well as many republicans from every section of the country indicating the strong sentiment that exists in favor of Governor Roosevelt in every part of the United States.

"We are also satisfied," he continued, "that the democratic state organizations in many of the states feel confident that with Governor Roosevelt as the presidential candidate, he will not only carry their states for the presidency, but will also carry their state and local tickets to victory.

"They feel that no candidate so far named will have the same drawing power on election day as will Governor Roosevelt and consequently are for him not only from the national point of view, but from the standpoint of their local situations as well."

CONNECTICUT DELEGATION TO SUPPORT AL SMITH

HARTFORD, Conn., May 14.—(AP) Connecticut will send an instructed delegation to the democratic national convention favorable to Alfred E. Smith, State Chairman David A. Wilson said today, but it will not be bound by the unit rule.

Wilson announced formal acceptance by the forces of Smith and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of a compromise whereby the latter will receive a minority of the state's 16 votes. The action was taken to avoid a clash at the state convention here Monday and Tuesday.

Roosevelt may obtain two and possibly four votes from among the ten district delegates, and by agreement will receive support from nine of the 24 delegates-at-large, each of whom will have one-fourth vote.

Thirteen of the delegates-at-large will be chosen by Smith supporters and the other two—Governor Wilbur L. Cross and State Chairman Wilson—will be considered neutral.

M'MILLIN SAYS TENNESSEE IS FOR GOV. ROOSEVELT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 14.—(AP) Prediction that Tennessee's 24 votes in the democratic national convention would be instructed for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt by the state convention here Friday was made tonight by former Governor Benton McMillin, who is managing the New York executive's campaign in Tennessee.

McMillin's forecast was made after he had received returns from many county conventions held today. He pointed out that the counties in which Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga and Knoxville are located had instructed for Roosevelt and that they control 447 of the 1,569 votes at the state convention.

NEW JERSEY PRIMARY TO BE HELD TUESDAY

TRENTON, N. J., May 14.—(AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith expects to add a block of 32 convention votes to his "chock" under the Roosevelt bandwagon and President Hoover will gather 35 additional delegates in the New Jersey primaries next Tuesday.

The democratic delegation will be led by Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, a vice chairman of the national committee and undisputed leader of the state's democracy.

Although he has never publicly expressed his views, Mayor Hague is generally known to be vigorously opposed to the nomination of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt as the national ticket leader. He reputedly favors Owen D. Young as his first choice and either Newton D. Baker or Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, as his second.

Hague is closely allied with Smith and recently has held several conferences with Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, and John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall.

WILLIAM VARE TO HEAD PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICANS

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—(AP)—William S. Vare, Philadelphia republican organization leader, today was elected chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation to the republican national convention. He was nominated by Senator David A. Reed.

the protection of our citizens and the preservance of peace."

County Attorney Smith then drove up and told Malone and Hays, "If conditions were otherwise it would be perfectly all right for you to enter."

"We will accept your ruling," Hays said to Mayor Brooks. "But we think you are putting yourself in a bad light."

Malone said later that B. B. Golden, of Pineville, counsel for a number of miners in murder trials arising from the coal fields disorders, had telephoned him late today saying he had tried to contact him this morning to warn him against coming into Bell county. Malone said Golden told him that while Pineville was quiet, 20 or 30 "toughs" were ready to do violence to the party.

Charges that "democracy has completely broken down" in Bell county and that today's events proved "mobs and dictators are in control." were made in a statement issued by Hays on his return here. In the coal fields, he charged there has been "set up a complete system of fascism which is as dangerous to our institutions as communism," and "there is reason to believe the officials are often part of the mobs and fascism."

Hays said a transcript of the evidence in the injunction hearing would be presented to the senate committee which next week resumes its examination of witnesses in the case.

"If such conditions," said Malone, "exist in Bell county (as described by its citizens at the injunction hearing) it was the duty of the county and state authorities to provide adequate protection to all citizens like ourselves in the exercise of our rights. We have now made the issue clear that all constitutional rights and guarantees have been abrogated in Bell and Harlan counties by the arbitrary conduct of the county officials."

KENTUCKY JUDGE ASKED TO OBSERVE ALL VISITORS

BETHLEHEM, Pa., May 14.—(AP) Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico, chairman of a senate subcommittee appointed to investigate alleged violence in the Kentucky coal fields, today asked Grove G. Sales, of Louisville, Ky., former circuit judge, to act an an observer in connection with the visit of the American Civil Liberities Union delegation.

The senator, here for the Bach music festival, wired Judge Sales that he "would appreciate your acting as observer prepared to report to the subcommittee at a later date concerning the present visit and treatment of the party headed by Arthur Garfield Hays."

HAYS DELIVERS ADDRESS AT KNOXVILLE RALLY

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 14.—(AP) Seven members of the American Civil Liberties Union delegation, which during the day was barred from the southeastern Kentucky coal fields and told to leave London, Ky., within four hours, arrived here tonight at 7:35 on a southbound train. The group was headed by Arthur Garfield Hays. Dudley Field Malone, another prominent member of the delegation, left the party at London, going to Detroit.

At Neal's invitation, Hays agreed to go to a hotel and make an address on civil liberties. The meeting had been advertised late today and the public invited. The delegation planned to catch a 9:10 p. m. train for New York.

Besides Hays, others in the party were Robert Keebler, Memphis attorney; J. C. Duke, Washington attorney; Dr. Ernest Sutherland Bates, New York writer; Professor Broadus Mitchell, John Hopkins University; the Rev. Charles Webber, Union Theological Seminary, New York, and Mrs. Carol King of the American Juridical Association, New York.

Manufacturers and Merchants To Celebrate Cotton Week Here

National Cotton Week, which will be observed throughout the United States beginning on Monday and lasting through Saturday, will be stressed locally in extensive displays of various kinds in which Atlanta stores handling any kind of cotton goods will co-operate to the limit.

The department, clothing, five-and-ten-cent stores, hardware and grocery stores will contribute elaborate window displays to the celebration. In addition there will be interior exhibits, newspaper advertising, special showings at the theaters, and radio broadcasts each celebrating the event.

Increased interest in National Cotton Week in Atlanta has been brought about by the fact that the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association will hold its annual convention here during the week. Approximately 500 cotton mill executives and their wives will be in Atlanta Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, and among these will be many of the outstanding leaders of the textile industry.

Included among these will be George A. Sloan, of New York, president of the Cotton Textile Institute; Cason J. Callaway, of LaGrange, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association; B. D. Gossett, of Charlotte, first vice president and Donald Comer, of Birmingham, second vice president of the American Association. Atlanta merchants are particularly anxious to extend a hearty welcome to these visiting mill executives through an active participation in National Cotton Week.

Theaters Co-operate.

Through the courtesy and co-operation of the Atlanta Theater Managers' Association and the various theaters, a special National Cotton Week film announcement, which has been prepared by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, will be presented at each performance in 11 Atlanta theaters during the entire week. In addition the Paramount theater will present a special feature showing the cotton suits being sponsored by the Kiwanis Clubs. The Fox theater has prepared an appropriate National Cotton Week overture and several special musical numbers devoted to this movement.

All Atlanta street cars will carry National Cotton Week cards and posters both on the front and in the inside of the cars, the space having been made available by the Georgia Power Company in an effort to stimulate public interest in this activity.

Several special radio programs devoted to National Cotton Week are being arranged through the co-operation of Station WSB and it is hoped that some special message may be presented by some of the visiting mill executives.

The Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia has had prepared a number of large National Cotton Week banners five by twelve feet painted on cotton cloth which will be displayed on sign boards, buildings, trucks, and in show windows, theaters and hotel lobbies throughout the city.

Several hotels and restaurants are having their dining room menus printed on cotton cloth in observance of National Cotton Week and the same is being done by several railroads for their dining car services.

Scope Nation-wide.

The scope of National Cotton Week, as indicated by the name, is not limited to Atlanta, or to Georgia. It is a nationwide movement that has been received with equal enthusiasm in every state in the Union, both because of the style, beauty, and utility of cotton and because its production and manufacture constitute one of our basic industries. With cotton, as reflected in the retail price of cotton goods, selling at the lowest figure in 20 years, it is a most opportune time to stimulate public interest in the value of cotton and its products.

It has been estimated by the department of commerce that five million American adults and five billion of dollars in capital are employed in the several branches of the cotton textile industry, and that approximately 12,000,000 people in the United States obtain their living from cotton and its products. In Georgia, alone, there are 65,000 people working in the cotton mills, and fully 400,000 farmers are engaged in growing the million and half bales of cotton produced each year. These mill employes and farmers, together with their families, include nearly 2,000,000 Georgia citizens who look to cotton for their income and support, and whose purchasing power is regulated and limited by the economic condition of this great industry. Any movement which tends to increase the buying capacity of this large portion of our population must necessarily react to the benefit of the country as a whole and will be reflected in a general improvement in many major industries whose raw product is principally cotton in one form or another.

No Sentiment Here.

But the national cotton week program is no sentimental or patriotic movement that makes an emotional appeal. It is based on sound economic principles and good business practices. It is a practical idea that will be devoted exclusively to the advertising and display of cotton merchandise that is actually on sale in the stores of the community.

Cotton fabrics are fashioned in the smartest circles. They have style and beauty, wear well, are serviceable, wash easily, are dyed and printed in fast colors that retain their original luster and beauty of design.

Dollar-for-dollar cotton gives the greatest value of any of the textile fabrics used for clothing or any domestic or industrial purpose. This campaign will emphasize cotton entirely on its merits. Coming at this particular time it gives cotton's popular appeal an opportunity to be presented most advantageously to the nation as a whole.

Local activities in connection with national cotton week are being conducted under the sponsorship of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, of which Norman E. Elsas, of Atlanta, is president, and T. M. Forbes, of Atlanta, is secretary. Through the association's office thousands of national cotton week posters have been distributed and much assistance has been given the Atlanta merchants in the planning of cotton goods displays and in creating a wide public interest in this constructive movement.

At the close of national cotton week last year all the leading Atlanta merchants voluntarily expressed their enthusiastic satisfaction with this merchandising campaign which resulted in a great increase in the sale of cotton goods of all kinds, and even greater results are being expected this year since finer values are available in all kinds of cotton products.

Largest Tire Visits Atlanta

Left, C. F. Bender is shown greeting R. G. Hurst, assistant manager for the Dobbs Tire Company, upon his arrival with the world's largest tire that is touring the country. This huge tire, although 12 feet high, requires only four pounds of air pressure to keep it fully inflated. While here the tire made visits to many Goodyear fleet users and was the center of attraction every time it made an appearance on the street.

LETTERS OF DOUGLAS TO GO TO CHICAGO U.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 14. (AP)—George Fort Milton, editor and publisher of the Chattanooga News, today announced the University of Chicago has concluded arrangements to acquire the letters of Stephen A. Douglas.

The Douglas correspondence, consisting of about 20,000 letters, has been in the custody of Robert Dick Douglas, of Greensboro, N. C., a grandson.

Mr. Milton, an authority on the life of Douglas, has read the letters and will use parts of them in a biography of Douglas he expects to prepare soon.

"It is particularly significant and fitting," Mr. Milton said, "that the University of Chicago should become the resting place of Stephen A. Douglas' correspondence, because Douglas himself was the prime mover in the foundation of the first University of Chicago, gave land for the campus and made possible the establishment of the institution of which the present one is the namesake and immediate successor.

"In my opinion, the Douglas papers represent perhaps the most important new contribution to American historical source material which has been discovered and made available in the past 20 years. They are chiefly letters of the '50s, and are particularly concentrated from 1855 until Douglas' death in 1861. They are unusually representative in their source from the north, south, east and west. A careful reading of them bestows a new force and significance to that great stream of American opinion which was so anxious to secure a peaceful accommodation of sectional disagreements, and to liquidate the slavery conflict without the necessity of arbitrament by the sword."

Senator Seeks Defeat Of Movie Ticket Tax

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(UP) Senator Shortridge, republican, California, today appealed to the patriotism of the senate to defeat the moving picture admissions tax.

Shortridge said the 10 per cent levy on tickets costing more than 10 cents would destroy the moving picture industry, which not only entertained the people, but fostered sale of American goods in foreign countries.

"I am going to ask my fellow senators," he said, "to defeat this admission tax on the elementary ground of duty to their country."

He explained the depression had closed 5,000 theaters and the tax would close as many more. He urged return to the house rate which exempted tickets costing less than 46 cents.

COHEN ADVOCATES '18 INCOME RATES

Georgian, in Maiden Senate Speech, Indorses Couzens' Tax Schedule.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—In his maiden speech in the senate, Senator John S. Cohen, of Georgia, today advocated incorporating in the billion dollar tax bill the 1918 income tax rates as proposed by Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan.

The text of Senator Cohen's address follows:

"Mr. President: It is with some timidity that I raise my voice in this body, but I have no desire to escape responsibility by hiding behind a screen of my brief service here.

"I shall support the principle of the amendment offered by the distinguished senior senator from Michigan (Mr. Couzens).

"Yardstick of Taxation."

"Ability to pay is the most equitable yardstick of taxation.

"If we reinstate the income tax rates of the 1918 revenue act, we shall impose no hardship for if there be no net income there will be no payment, and certainly those who enjoy net incomes in a period such as this cannot with justice complain of a non-confiscatory contribution to the support of the government.

"As the senator from Michigan has said so well, the cost of living now is so far below that of 1918 that the same rate of taxation, taken from net income, means a lighter burden today than in the war period—because the purchasing power of the balance left in the hands of the taxpayer is so far greater now.

"It is necessary for the welfare of the nation and its people that we approximately balance the federal budget, but in so doing, we should adjust the burdens of citizenship fairly.

"My observation is that unless we are too far afield in tapping new or additional sources of revenue, we shall be forced to depend upon either materially higher income tax rates or a general sales tax.

"With the sales tax proposal I find myself in strong disagreement.

"I take issue with the distinguished chairman of the finance committee (Mr. Smoot), in his assertion that a tax upon outgo is a fair measure of tax upon to pay. A tax upon consumption operates inequitably and applies its burdens without considerations of income.

"We are at war with economic depression.

"Let us return to war-time rates of taxation upon those sufficiently fortunate to have net incomes and turn our faces against tariff proposals, sales taxes and nuisance taxes as far as possible.

"I hope for the adoption of the amendment of the senator from Michigan."

FIRST LADY HONORED BY WOOSTER COLLEGE

WOOSTER, Ohio, May 14.—(UP) The honorary degree of doctor of letters and humanities was conferred today upon Mrs. Herbert Hoover amid elaborate ceremonies and pageantry attending the 125th anniversary of the founding of Wooster by her great-grandfather, William Henry, and three other pioneers.

Dr. Charles F. Wishart, president of Wooster College, bestowed the degree upon Mrs. Hoover. A reception for Mrs. Hoover followed the campus pageant.

HOUSE IS ASSURED OF BEER BILL VOTE

Bachmann, of West Virginia, Is 145th Signer of Petition.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The house will go on record Monday, May 23, on the beer-for-revenue issue.

The vote was assured today when Representative Bachmann, of West Virginia, the republican whip, stepped to the clerk's desk as the 145th signer of a petition to call up the O'Connor-Hull bill for a tax of 3 cents a pint of beer of not over 2.75 per cent alcohol by weight.

A burst of applause from anti-prohibitionists greeted Bachmann. Only a few minutes earlier Representative Kvale, farmer-labor, Minnesota, who represents the district once held by Andrew J. Volstead, author of the prohibition enforcement act, had signed.

It will be the second vote on a legalized beer tax this session but the first on which the ballots of individual members will be recorded. Representative Cullen, leader of the Tammany delegation, was defeated in an attempt to attach this plan to the tax bill by a 216-to-132 vote.

The petition had been lying on the clerk's desk for over a month. Sponsors attributed a large measure of their success in obtaining the 145 signatures to the recent Ohio primary. Had the required signatures not been obtained today, a vote would not have been possible under house rules before the national conventions in June.

A few minutes before Bachmann signed, Cullen walked up to Speaker Garner and in a voice that could be heard in the gallery, said:

"Sign that; McAdoo's turned wet."

Garner's name was not on the petition. William G. McAdoo, for years a leading prohibitionist, has been sponsoring the Texan for the presidency.

Representative O'Connor, democrat, New York, predicted the beer vote will show greater anti-prohibition strength than did the 227-to-187 defeat of the Beck-Linthicum submission resolution.

"This will be a real test," O'Connor said.

O'Connor immediately telegraphed the house action to Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, who marched today at the head of the beer parade.

House members from 27 states signed the petition to force a vote on the proposal to legalize and tax beer.

Ten more democrats than republicans joined the move. The party division was:

Democrats, 77; republicans, 67; farmer-labor, 1.

The states not represented were: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kansas, Maine, Mississippi, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming.

Most of the support came from the Millan more thickly populated northern and eastern states. Of New York's 43 members, 31 signed.

The list by states includes:

Louisiana, 3 (democrats): Fernandez, Maloney, Montet.

North Carolina, 1 (democrat), Hancock.

Churches Win Grand Prizes In Samaritan Buying Contest

Here are the winning chairmen of the churches which won the grand prizes, ranging from $300 to $1,250, in the Good Samaritan buying contest. Left to right, Mrs. Augustus Byers, winner of the first prize; Mrs. F. R. Martin, second, and Mrs. J. J. Hemperly, third. Mrs. J. H. Fuller, winner of the fourth prize, was out of town and could not be included in the group.

Winners of the grand prizes in The Constitution's Good Samaritan buying campaign which ended on May 7 were announced on Saturday by the management of the contest.

First prize, $1,250 in cash, was won by the Calvary Methodist church, Mrs. Augustus Byers, chairman.

Third prize, $450, went to the Fidelis class of the West End Baptist church, Mrs. J. J. Hemperly, chairman.

Fourth prize, $300, was won by the Hills Park Baptist church, Mrs. J. H. Fuller, chairman.

A total of $6,000 was distributed through the contest to more than 30 churches and charities of Atlanta, $3,250 having been given in weekly prizes during the past six months.

The churches winning the grand prizes have been consistent winners during the campaign. The Calvary Methodist church won over $500 in weekly prizes, while the Western Heights Baptists have shared in over $700 of the weekly awards. The West End Baptist and Hills Park Baptist churches each won several hundred dollars.

Among the other prominent organizations to win cash awards during the campaign were Capitol View Baptist church with more than $150; Gordon Street Baptist with $200; East Point Methodist, $70; Washington Seminary, $95; Longley Avenue Christian church, $80; Order of Rebekah, third district of Georgia, $100; St. Anthony's Catholic church, $95, and others shared in the cash awards by winning smaller amounts.

More than 60,000 church members and hundreds of their friends and acquaintances were active in the campaign. Thousands have praised The Constitution for conducting this Good Samaritan campaign which has made it possible to distribute among the churches and charities much-needed funds for relieving suffering and helping the churches to carry on their work of charity among the poor and unemployed in the city.

More than 50,000 votes were cast by the winning churches during the last week of the contest and over $1,500,000 was spent with the merchants who advertised each Saturday morning on the Good Samaritan Page.

CHARLES T. FULLER DIES IN SANFORD, FLA.

Charles Thomas Fuller, 53, for more than 21 years in the automobile business here, died unexpectedly Saturday afternoon in Sanford, Fla. Mr. Fuller had been in ill health for the last several months and had been regaining his health in the Florida city. His death from a heart attack was a shock to his many friends here and in Florida and North Carolina where he was widely known in the automotive industry.

The body will be brought to Atlanta Monday morning. Burial will be in Decatur and funeral arrangements will be announced today. Mr. Fuller leaves his wife, who is on the staff of radio station WSB; a brother, John F. Fuller, of Mount Airy, N. C., and a sister,. Mrs. W. H. Butler, of Gadsden, Ala.

Mr. Fuller came to Atlanta about 22 years ago from Greensboro, N. C., when he was associated with Lindsey Hopkins in the automobile business. He opened his own agency in Mount Airy, N. C., where he was in business six years. Later he opened the Chrysler agency in Sanford, where he was three years.

Mr. Fuller was born in Greensboro, N. C. He was a 32-degree Mason.

inated by overwhelming majorities wet candidates for both governor and United States senator, marking a complete reversal of policy of republicans of the Buckeye state who heretofore have espoused the dry side of the issue. Later Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, one of the republican stalwarts of the upper chamber and heretofore rated as noncommittal on the question, came out for a system of government-owned and government-controlled dispensaries.

As a result of it all it is now generally conceded that the republican national convention will adopt a wet or moist plank in its platform, thus taking the jump on their later meeting democratic opponents, who for some time have been foreordained for a wet stand.

The statement today by Representative Ramspeck follows in full:

"Since the recent vote in the house of representatives relative to the eighteenth amendment, several persons have written to ask why I refused them the right to vote upon this question. It has occurred to me that others might be thinking along similar lines and for their information I am making this statement.

"The last legal expression of the people of Georgia was favorable to prohibition. The existing Georgia law is more drastic than the federal law. My vote simply reflected the last action in Georgia on this question, which I considered my duty.

"The proposal on which we voted in congress did not provide for a vote by the people. Congress has no power to provide for a referendum by the voters on this, or any other question. It cannot provide a referendum without a new amendment to the federal constitution.

"The proposal upon which we voted, had it been adopted and ratified by the states, would have permitted the return of the saloon. It would have made it impossible for the federal government to adopt a plan such as that prevailing in Canada, which many people in this country favor.

"Under conditions as they now exist the only method by which the people of Georgia could go to the ballot box and vote their convictions on prohibition would be at a referendum provided by act of the legislature. I do not now and never have opposed such a referendum on this question."

BISHOP CANNON'S CASE IS SET FOR OCTOBER

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(UP) The appellate court rules today that it would hear sometime in October the case of Bishop James Cannon Jr., charged with violating the federal corrupt practices act.

Cannon and Ada L. Burroughs, of Richmond, Va., were charged with violation of the corrupt practices act in connection with the 1928 presidential campaign in which they were active against Alfred E. Smith, democratic candidate.

The District of Columbia supreme court quashed the indictment on technical grounds and the government appealed from the ruling.

SENATE NEAR VOTE ON INCOME TAXES

Bi-Partisan Forces Move Slowly But Surely on Economy Measures.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The budget balancing tax and economy measures moved slowly but surely ahead in the senate today under the power of a dominant bi-partisan majority working on non-political lines.

The compromise relief program, however, remained involved in the intricacies of negotiation with democrats and republicans seeking a common ground on this vital issue.

Three hours of debate brought the senate to the verge of a vote on the all-important income tax schedule—the heart of the revenue bill. A roll call is due Monday. It will be the first major senate test on the legislation.

Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, today renewed his campaign for inclusion of the war-time income tax rates—the highest in history—in the revenue bill, and picked up support from republican and democratic ranks. He would substitute the high income rates for the bill's excise levies.

Mills Bill Defended.

However, republican and democratic regular leaders are standing by the Mills compromise bill approved by the finance committee, and defeat of the Couzens proposal was forecast, together with rejection of more than a score of other individual attacks aimed at various of the tax items.

The special economy committee took a holiday after three days of intensive labor in secret sessions. Its work will be resumed Monday. Confidence that they will effect the more than $200,000,000 in savings necessary, to make the new revenue bill balance the budget was maintained by the silent economy workmen.

Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, the chairman of the senate democratic relief committee, spent the day drafting a counter proposal to the compromise offered by President Hoover. He left the door open to solution of the differences on this legislation.

"The important thing is action," said the New Yorker, himself the author of a relief proposal long pending. "It is no time to quibble over details and glory. We will get action."

Public Works Program.

The democrats are inclined to a separate public works program to be financed by a bond issue in addition to the $300,000,000 relief fund for loans to the states on unemployment aid and the billion-dollar fund for financing of private and public self-liquidating projects.

Wagner will present a tentative piece of legislation to members of the democratic committee Monday or Tuesday. There is no particular necessity for haste, because senate leaders intend to put through congress first the budget-balancing measures.

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, veteran republican independent leader, joined in support for the Couzens income tax plan today, leaving the way open for some modifications in it.

In a speech closely followed by the senate, the white-haired Nebraskan told the senate that "unpleasant" as it is to raise taxes in time of depression, it was tre duty of patrioic citizens to support a program sufficient to pay the expenses of government.

Cohen Approves Bill.

Senator Cohen, democrat, Georgia, in his maiden speech in the senate, also indorsed the Couzens income schedule, as did Senators Dill, democrat, Washington, and Long, democrat, Louisiana. Senator Trammell, democrat, Florida, protested the increased taxes on smaller incomes and the decreased exemptions.

The Couzens plan provides the 1918 income schedule of 6 per cent on the first $4,000 net income and 12 per cent above that amount, and surtax rates running to 65 per cent on incomes over $1,000,000. Exemptions for married persons would be cut from $3,500 to $2,000.

He estimated this would yield $331,000,000 more in revenue than the increased income rates voted by the finance committee in adopting the compromise bill.

The bill carries rates of 3 per cent on the first $4,000 taxable income; 6 per cent on the next $4,000 and 9 per cent on income above $8,000 with a maximum surtax of 45 per cent.

With the higher income rates, Couzens would eliminate from the bill the taxes on automobiles, rubber, lubricating oil and admissions.

Senator Lewis, democrat, Illinois, advanced his $5,000,000,000 bond issue plan with which he said a revenue bill to meet the treasury deficit would be unnecessary.

Three house members meanwhile announced they had been designated members of a steering committee to carry out a non-partisan drive for relief legislation.

They are Representatives Mead, of New York, representing democrats; Kelly, of Pennsylvania, republican, and LaGuardia, of New York, for the progressives.

In a statement they said: "A majority from both sides of the house stand ready to resist adjournment until constructive legislation is passed tending to meet the present crisis by relieving agriculture, providing employment and stimulating business."

They added: "Public meetings to discuss the economic condition of the country and to formulate definite plans of relief are being arranged.

"Only one problem confronts this congress today—the depression which is working deadly injury to every American. Only one duty rests upon congress today, to wage war upon that depression. We propose to meet that problem and perform our duty before the session adjourns."

OIL COMPANY VICTOR IN INJUNCTION FIGHT

GULFPORT, Miss., May 14.—(AP) Chancellor D. M. Russell, in a vacation decision here today, sustained a plea of the defendant Gulf Coast Oil Company and dissolved an injunction issued against it April 26 by fiat of Chief Justice Sidney Smith, of the state supreme court, which restrained the company from operating gasoline distribution stations on the coast until an excise tax controversy was settled.

The defendants based their plea on the grounds that a suit involving the same allegations had been filed previously in Pearl River county. The suit filed by representatives of the state attorney-general's office claimed that the payment of excise tax had been evaded.

JOHN H. MULLIN TAKEN BY DEATH

Casualty Company Agent Widely Known in Business and Musical Fields.

John H. Mullin, general agent of the United States Casualty Company, died early Saturday night at his residence at 1084 St. Augustine place, after an illness of one week. Stricken with bronchitis, he had been confined to his bed since last Sunday. He was 59 years old.

For many years Mr. Mullin had been widely known here as a singer and for his activities in fraternal organizations. He had been bass soloist in the First Baptist and First Methodist choirs, and at the time of his death was soloist at the First Presbyterian church. Twenty years ago he was well known for his appearances in amateur productions of Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

A native of Massachusetts, he removed to Atlanta in 1895 as the representative of the United States Casualty Company in the southern states. He was an acute business man and was a leader in his field.

He formerly resided in Chattanooga, Tenn., and in other cities all over the United States where his father, the late John Hatchman Mullin, was engaged in surveying and laying out railroad lines.

Mr. Mullin had been prominent in fraternal organizations since coming here. He was a Shriner, a member of Gate City Lodge No. 2, F. & A. M., and the Knights Templar. He was a 33d degree Scottish Rite Mason, and was a charter member of the Shrine Chanters and the Scottish Rite quartet.

Surviving are his wife; a son, John H. Mullin Jr., a senior at Emory University; a daughter, Miss Elsie Mullin, a junior at Brenau in Gainesville, and two sisters, Miss Anna Mullin, and Mrs. E. L. Barrett, both of Atlanta.

GEORGIA MARBLE URGED FOR P. O. IN PETITION

The chances at this time are better than ever before to have Georgia marble or granite used in the Atlanta postoffice, according to Roy LeCraw, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Senator Walter F. George, Senator John S. Cohen, Congressman Robert Ramspeck, Congressman John S. Wood and Congressman Charles R. Crisp, who is chairman of the ways and means committee, are extending efforts to stress upon the treasury department heads the importance of using Georgia products as far as possible in the new postoffice building.

The Chamber of Commerce is in receipt of direct information that Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills has informed Major Ferry K. Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury, of his desire to have Georgia products used if possible.

To encourage the Georgia senators and congressmen in Washington to continue their efforts to impress upon the heads of the treasury department the desire of the people of this community to have Georgia products used, a petition, representing more than 75 of the leading civic and business organizations in Atlanta, has been forwarded to the heads of the treasury department and to the senators and congressmen.

HAINES HARGETT, ATTORNEY, PASSES

an appeal Saturday at his office, it was said.

Business associates and well known Atlanta lawyers said Saturday afternoon that Mr. Hargrett was regarded as having one of the best analytical minds in the profession here. Though he specialized in civil law, he also was adept in criminal law, and was considered especially good in arguing before a jury, it was said.

In addition to his business career, Mr. Hargrett led an active social life and was prominent in church affairs. He was a member of the Piedmont Driving Club and the Capital City Club. He attended the Ponce de Leon Baptist church. He was a member of the Atlanta, Georgia and American Bar Associations, and of the Atlanta Lawyers Club. During his college years he was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Mr. Hargrett is survived by his wife, the former Miss Maude Timmons; a son, Haines H. Hargrett Jr., 11 years old; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hargrett, widely known residents of Tifton; six brothers, Clyde Hargrett, of Atlanta; W. T. Hargrett Jr., of Miami, Fla.; Felix Hargrett, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Lester Hargrett, of New York city; Robert Hargrett, of Like Oak, Fla., and Charles Hargrett, of Tifton, who is a student at the University of North Carolina, and two sisters, Mrs. James C. Rousseau, of Macon, and Mrs. Joe M. Medford, of Tifton.

Funeral services and interment will be held in Tifton Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock (eastern standard time), at the First Baptist church. Further arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son, funeral directors, in charge.

DECREASE IS SHOWN FOR FULLER'S EARTH

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(Special)—For the first time in 10 years the fuller's earth industry which used to flourish in Georgia and Florida, retrogressed in 1931 as compared to the preceding year, according to an announcement made here today by the director of the bureau of mines.

Information upon which the bureau based its report was collected in cooperation with the geological surveys of Georgia, Florida, Illinois and Texas.

Georgia was the leading producing state last year in spite of the drop in general production throughout the country. Other producing states were California, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Massachusetts, Nevada, Texas and Utah. Florida stood second to Georgia in point of production.

The apparent consumption of fuller's earth in the United States in 1931 was about 284,000 short tons, a decrease of 14 per cent compared with 1930. The domestic earth used constituted 99 per cent of this total. No separate figures were given for Georgia.

Fuller's earth is a term used to include a variety of natural substances that possess the property of absorbing grease or clarifying, bleaching or filtering oil. The original use of fuller's earth was in the fulling of cloth, but little of it is now used for this purpose. It is now used almost exclusively in the bleaching or filtering of mineral and vegetable oils and animal fats, more than 94 per cent of the domestic output being used for these purposes in 1931; the remainder was used as a filler, a binder, for fulling cloth, etc.

Until 1895, when fuller's earth was successfully produced commercially in Florida, the United States was entirely dependent on foreign supplies. In 1931 the imports of fuller's earth were 4,013 short tons, valued at $48,964, a decrease of 45 per cent in quantity and of 69 per cent in value as compared with 1930.

ISOLATION POLICY SCORED BY RAINEY

Restore International Commerce or Accept Dole, Leader Declares.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Representative Rainey, the democratic leader, said in a formal statement today that "a dole in this country is inevitable unless we can restore international trade."

His statement was a comment on Friday's appeal to President Hoover of the railway brotherhoods, urging a 25-year moratorium on foreign debts with a cancellation system based on imports of United States goods.

Rainey said this plan, which is similar to that proposed by Alfred E. Smith, democratic presidential nominee in 1928, "points out exactly the reasons for the unfortunate economic condition in which this country now finds itself."

"They correctly call attention to the fact," said the house majority chieftain, "that our policy of isolation is responsible for the fact that our railroads and our industries are discharging men and reducing salaries.

"The nations of the world are inter-dependent and they must trade with each other. Foreign nations owe us immense amounts and they cannot pay us in gold. They can only pay us in goods and our foolish policy of isolation makes this impossible.

"The flight of American capital is proceeding with alarming rapidity and it is seeking investment now beyond foreign tariff walls, employing hundreds of thousands of foreign laborers. No wonder 8,000,000 unemployed walk the streets of our cities.

"We can grant further moratoriums, but they must be granted in return for trade advantages and trade advantages can only be accomplished by lowering tariff walls all over the world.

"The president recently vetoed the tariff bill which presented the only method possible of lowering tariff walls throughout the world. . . .

"Another constructive proposition which the president might propose but will not propose, is an amendment to the constitution which would permit the federal government to provide a shorter work week and a shorter work day for industries doing an interstate business and which can regulate wages in those industries so that wages will not be reduced."

Congressmen See Lobbyists As Nuisances, Not Menaces

Following is the first of two dispatches describing the activities and influence of what President Hoover has condemned as the locust swarm of lobbyists who haut the halls of congress seeking selfish privilege for special groups." The second dispatch will appear in an early issue.

BY ELMER DAVIS.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The "locust swarm of lobbyists" denounced by President Hoover is more of a nuisance than a menace, in the opinion of members of congress who have been exposed to the locusts this session. With bills for the reduction of appropriations and the increase of taxes before congress, lobbyists of all kinds have been extraordinarily active.

They have been an obstruction and an annoyance; "trying to get any work done with these fellows on your trail," said Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, "is like trying to play the violin while somebody is pulling your hair." But it seems doubtful if they have had any decisive effect on either taxation or economy.

On some details of those measures their pressure has apparently been very effective, but in every instance a considerable number of voters were directly interested, and congress was afraid to offend them.

"The worst thing the matter with this country," said Representative Crisp, of Georgia, who took the tax bill through the house and came out with nothing much left of it but the chassis, "is fear—economic fear in the country at large and political fear in congress. I don't believe there is a man in either house who could be corrupted, but there are an awful lot who are afraid."

Some Result.

On certain issues the lobbies may have pointed up the interest of groups of voters, but pretty much the same result would probably have been obtained without their intervention—except, of course, that members of the house and senate would have been saved a good deal of time and wear and tear on the nerves.

"The issue," said President Hoover, "is between the people and the locust swarm of lobbyists who haunt the halls of congress, seeking selfish privilege for special groups and sections of the country, misleading members as to the real views of the people by showers of propaganda."

That is what they do, of course, but the average member of congress is always ready to take the articulate discontent of any large number of voters as the real view of the people; and the special groups and sections that hire the lobbyists ought to take some of the blame.

"Lobbying," said Senator Hull, of Tennessee, "is only a symptom. The real disease is the prevalence of group interests and the tie-up of the government with special privileges."

Almost every item in the economy bill met the opposition of a lobby of more or less strength. The attempt to reduce the pay of all government employes earning more than $1,000 a year, defeated to the extent that the exemption was raised to $2,500, was vigorously opposed by the legislative representatives of the American federation of Labor.

Federal employes are themselves forbidden to attempt to influence legislation, but many of them belong to the federation and their fight was taken up by its lobby, which some people say is the ablest in Washington. But congressmen would have been afraid of that even without a lobby.

"Every member from a rural district," said a veteran observer, "was thinking about the mail carriers. They see all the farmers every day and no congressman wants them against him."

One senator told this correspondent he thought a large soap company did more than anybody else to beat the sales tax; "and," he added, "they got what they deserved when the house put a 10 per cent tax on soap instead of the 2 1-4 per cent the company would have had to pay under the general sales tax."

But men who went through the fight in the house say the sales tax was beaten before the lobby ever got into action, though its work undoubtedly helped beat the measure when it was brought up for reconsideration.

Three Groups.

The sales tax was opposed by three groups—manufacturers, retailers and friends of the people; and the friends of the people, professional and amateur, interested or disinterested, seem to have had it beaten on the ground that it would be passed on to the public before the manufacturers and retailers swung into line against it on the ground that it could not be passed on to the public.

Representative Loring M. Black, of Brooklyn, a more realistic observer than most of his colleagues, says the sales tax was beaten by Mr. Crisp himself. "When Crisp said on February 11, 'I have burned every bridge behind me and am going to try to get taxes enough to balance the budget no matter what the personal political consequences,' he killed the sales tax," said Mr. Black. "A lot of those fellows were not smart enough to realize so early that there might be personal political consequences, but as soon as Crisp said that they started thinking."

"The manufacturers helped in the fight on the sales tax," said Mr. Crisp, "and a lot of them wish they hadn't." While most of the provisions imposing excise taxes on individual manufacturers were stricken out by the senate finance committee, a number of people who had helped beat the general sales tax found they were worse off when the bill was finished. In fact, from what can be gathered on Capitol Hill, it seems that the lobbyists pretty largely cancelled each other out.

It must be remembered that the lobbyists are like the sower in the parable—some of their seed falls on stony ground but some of the rest multiplies a hundredfold. It is not going to take any very vigorous lobbying, for example, to make members from Michigan oppose severe taxes on automobiles, or members from California oppose severe admission taxes on movie theaters. Tariffs on coal and oil were jammed into the house bill, and when the measure got to the senate finance committee these were retained after a hard fight, and tariffs on copper, lumber and rubber added.

The tactics by which these items—especially the oil tariff—won and held their place in the bill disgusted low-tariff members of the senate committee.

"Outrageous," said Senator Hull; "ridiculous," said Senator Harrison, of Mississippi; "disgraceful," said Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin.

There was an active lobby in behalf of each of these items, but you can't blame the lobby for the result. The outcome depended on the fact that among the members of the committee are Senators Smoot and King, of Utah, which produces copper; Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, which produces coal; Senator Jones, of Washington, which produces lumber, and Senators Gore, of Oklahoma; Connally, of Texas, and Shortridge, of California, which states produce oil.

The lumber tariff was rejected April 25 and the copper tariff April 29; coal and oil were threatened, but retained. But May 2 lumber got in; May 4, after four proposals, three by Connally and one by Shortridge, to change the house rates on oil had been defeated, a fifth proposal by Connally cutting the crude oil rate but heavily increasing that on gasoline and fuel oil finally went through.

Just after that, copper went over, too. Jones, Connally and Shortridge came through for copper, Connally and Shortridge and Smoot helped save Jones' lumber; Jones and Smoot were there for oil; they all helped save Barkley's coal, though Barkley voted against copper, and was absent when oil skinned through by one vote.

Now the lobby doubtless furnished these gentlemen with statistics and information, but what President Hoover would call the "selfish privilege of their special sections of the country," decided the vote.

And if stones are being thrown at lobbyists there are members of congress who will remind you that when Mr. Hoover was secretary of commerce he was trying to get action on certain measures which would incidentally have benefitted some business interests. He believed, of course, that they would also benefit the country at large, but when a senator or representative sees a chance to get something for the leading industry of his state he usually finds it easy to believe that this will promote the national welfare, too.

SENATE GROUP ENDS WILKERSON HEARINGS

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Hearings on the nomination of Judge James H. Wilkerson, of Chicago, to the circuit court were completed today by a senate judiciary subcommittee.

Chairman Borah said the subcommittee might be ready to report to the full committee Monday. On a previous vote the investigating group recommended Wilkerson's confirmation by 3 to 2. He was the judge who sentenced Al Capone.

Several entries in the third annual students' art exhibit which will go on display at High Museum of Art this afternoon for a 30-day showing. At upper left Miss Myrtle Folsom, of the museum staff, is admiring two displays, while in the center Miss Mignon Breitenbucher and Miss Mary Hutchins smile at each other across some of their work. At upper right Miss Louise Ferguson, art student, admires the painting of a fellow student and at bottom Miss Frances Ferguson shows two modernistic paintings.

Art which reveals strict departure from decadent standards will go on display this afternoon at the High Museum of Art and remain on exhibition for 30 days in the third annual students' exhibit. Open house for patrons and friends will be held at 3 o'clock.

Far superior to showings of the past, according to critics, the display reveals talent which has appeared latent during the last two years, and indicates that only schooling is necessary for the 51 artists represented to reach their full power. The exhibit, as a whole, will feature work in the commercial field.

Perhaps the most interesting and conclusive point brought out in the display is the absolute departure from superficial standards and a wholesome adoption of realism, which, of course, reveals a definite reaction, the faults of which may be cured as a more delicate balance is acquired. New ideas are revealed in abundance and the originality of composition in the work places it on a par with student art in the larger museums of Chicago and New York.

L. P. Skidmore, director of the museum, gave complimentary approval of the work, pointing out that the commercial side of art was advancing in strides equal to the strictly artistic. The display, he said, is a good example of how symbolism in schooling can develop beauty in reaction.

The display will remain open to the public until June 15.

WOLL TO ADDRESS 'WET' RALLY HERE

Climaxing Atlanta's observance of Repeal Week, which opens Monday, will be a rally of prohibition foes at the city aduitorium on the night of May 25, at which Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and chairman of labor's special committee for modification of the Volstead act, will be one of the principal speakers.

Plans for the rally were announced Saturday by Mrs. William T. Healey, chairman of the Georgia division of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, which is sponsoring the rally in co-operation with the federation of labor.

MATTHEW WOLL.

A second prominent speaker, either a United States senator or an outstanding lawyer will address the meeting, in addition to Mr. Woll, Mrs. Healey said, adding that the women's organization likely would send one of its best speakers here to augment those sponsored by the federation of labor.

A special representative of Mr. Woll and his committee is to be here Monday to assist in laying plans for the meeting and to interest local unions in the anti-prohibition movement.

"The city auditorium rally will be the outstanding feature of our observance of Repeal Week," Mrs. Healey said. "We would like to have had our meeting during the coming week but could not because the speakers we desire to offer were not available. Rather than have persons with whom the public is not familiar we decided to wait a few days.

"Mr. Woll is one of labor's outstanding orators and long has been identified with the anti-prohibition movement. For the last two years he has given much of his time to directing the federation of labor's effort to bring about modification. What he has to say should be of deep interest to every man and woman in Atlanta."

At the May 25 meeting Mrs. Healey's organization will announce winners of the state-wide contest being conducted in conjunction with Repeal Week, the contestants being required to write letters giving what they believe to be the 10 best reasons for rpeal of the dry law. Hundreds of letters already have been received at her offices in the Healey building, Mrs. Healey said.

Fair, Warm Weather Forecast for Today

The weather today will be fair and warmer than Saturday, according to C. F. von Herrmann, local weatherman. The temperature will range from 60 to approximately 82 degrees. Saturday's temperatures began at 54 and reached a high of 78 degrees.

BEAUTY EXPERT SAYS NATURE IS GUIDE

Naturalness in hair waving today is the keynote of smartness in coiffures, according to Leonard F. Coles, a specialist in creating smart styles in new modes in hair-waving and hair-cutting.

LEONARD F. COLES

He was brought to Atlanta by Josef Stresser, and is now associated with the Sterchi beauty salon on the mezzanine floor of the furniture store at 116-20 Whitehall street.

He came to Atlanta from Detroit, where he was a charter member of the Association of Cosmetologists.

"A greater artistic effect and more individuality are now expressed in hair-cutting styles than ever before," said Mr. Coles. "Naturalness is the prevailing note today in hair-waving."

The Roswell district of Cobb county, comprised of five square miles and inhabited by 1,500 persons, officially became a part of Fulton county Saturday when ordinaries of both Cobb and Fulton counties issued certificates of final publication.

The certificates were issued to C. P. Vaughn, mayor of Roswell, who has been the instigator of the movement. The 30 days of annexation notice expired at midnight Friday and the last routine steps validating the annexation were completed Saturday morning.

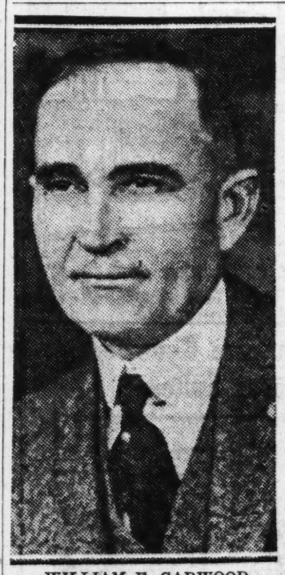

Roswell district attempted 25 years ago to become a part of Fulton county, but failed, and Saturday's action was taken as the culmination of a quarter of a century of effort. The district protruded into Fulton county making it necessary to cross it from the main part of the county to reach the upper end of the county which was formerly Milton county. This is now a thing of the past.

Mayor Vaughn at the courthouse Saturday morning declared that citizens of the district are rejoicing that the annexation has been consumated. The action was made possible through the stamp of approval on the part of county commissions and grand juries of both counties after a petition had been signed by the majority of the citizens of Roswell district.

Fifty years ago William F. Garwood, of 625 Seminole avenue, N. E., at the age of 17 years stepped into the cab of "Little Mary," a tiny, wood-burning engine of the old Marietta & North Georgia railroad and piloted a train on its daily run between Marietta and Canton—at the speed of 12 miles per hour.

Today, William F. Garwood, 67 years old, is wearing the gold and diamond 50-year button—the oldest active employe of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, which line many years ago absorbed the Marietta & North Georgia.

WILLIAM F. GARWOOD.

In presenting the 50-year button to Mr. Garwood, T. E. Brooks, vice president of the L. & N., praised the engineer for his long and loyal service, the time length of which is unusual in railroad circles.

During his 50 years as an engineer Mr. Garwood has held the throttle of engines in thousands of runs which covered hundreds of thousands of miles. In that time there has never been a reportable injury to a passenger on his train.

Mr. Garwood is hale and hearty despite his long and arduous service and takes delight in recounting experiences of old days when as a lad of 13 he began his railroad career. At 15 he was a fireman and at 17 a full-fledged engineer. The little road from Canton to Marietta was of narrow gauge and with no ballast.

At present Mr. Garwood climbs into an iron monster of power, an engine which will travel upward of a hundred miles per hour. He will tell you his two greatest thrills in life were that day he ran an engine for the first time—

And on May 5 when he completed 50 years' service and was rewarded with the gold and diamond 50-year button.

TRAIN IMPROVEMENTS, SUMMER RATES MADE

Vacation days are here with lazy breezes bringing the call of mountain and seashore to lure the city dweller forth. By auto, train and airplane soon vacationists will begin to visit those places dreamed of during winter months.

Railroad travel to southern and eastern points this year will be more comfortable than ever, according to officials of the Southern railway, who Saturday announced improvements for the crack Crescent Limited, a train traveling between New York and New Orleans. New cars containing double bedrooms and private sections will be placed on the train, a development said to insure more comfort and privacy for the traveler.

Other roads have announced the beginning of summer excursion rates today. The Louisville & Nashville railroad announced that in addition to the usual excursion fares with a return limit set at October 31, numerous short line excursions will be made to points in various sections of the country, permitting stopovers and with optional privileges of rail or water travel.

EARLY EVIDENCE FOUND OF CHRISTIAN ART

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 14.—(AP)—Evidence that church painting was fully developed in Christian art as early as 200 A. D., was made public today in a report on the fifth season of excavations in Syria by Yale university and the French Academy of Inscriptions.

Frescoes depicting Biblical figures and scenes discovered on the walls of a church excavated in Dura-Europos, Professor Michael I. Rostovetzeff said, provide the first examples of Christian art, aside from graves, up to the fourth century.

POLICE ARE ASKED TO HELP BEAVERS

An effort to reimburse retired Chief James L. Beavers in the sum of $250 for fees paid Attorney John L. Westmoreland in connection with the prosecution of suspended Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole was launched Saturday by Chief T. O. Sturdivant.

Addressing a letter to all captains, Chief Sturdivant called upon them to circulate among the members of the department seeking contributions to the fund, which if collected is to be turned over to Chief Sturdivant who will reimburse Beavers.

Sturdivant said he was motivated solely because Poole had for his defense counsel a notable array of lawyers and that Beavers had to use his own private funds to employ Westmoreland.

Meanwhile City Attorney James L. Mayson filed with Superior Judge John D. Humphries a demurrer to a petition filed earlier on Poole's behalf seeking to force a verdict by four members of the police committee on the Poole case. Judge Humphries set the case for Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock for hearing.

Poole was tried before the police committee which held a number of special sessions. Alderman Guy Coleman did not attend all of them and was not permitted to vote on the verdict. It was known that Chairman Dan Bridges and Councilman Homer Foster intended to vote for conviction while Alderman Ed A. Gilliam and Councilman Frank Reynolds were to vote for acquittal, the tie vote automatically declaring a verdict in Poole's favor. However foes of Poole sought to withdraw the old charges, file new accusations and place the suspended officer on trial again. Poole's lawyers sought an injunction which is to be decided on Wednesday morning by Judge Humphries.

In the demurrer filed Saturday on behalf of the committee City Attorney Mayson contended that the committee was within its rights in ordering the retrial in order that all five members might hear all of the evidence and vote on the verdict.

Chief Sturdivant's letter to the police captains follows:

"Chief Beavers incurred an expense of $250 for lawyer's fees in connection with the recent trial of Chief Poole, and it has occurred to me that the members of the department, as a final token of the esteem in which Chief Beavers is held by all of us, ought to help him pay this bill.

"Please quietly circulate a subscription list among your men, and if any of them care to contribute to this fund you will accept their contributions and when the canvass has been completed, turn the money over to me.

"T. O. STURDIBANT,
"Chief of Police."

Roosevelt Invited To 'Cue of Old Guard

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, has been invited by Commandant Will L. Hancock to attend the barbecue of the Old Guard Battalion Saturday afternoon, May 28, at old White Sulphur Springs in Meriwether county. Members of the Old Guard will leave the Ivy Street garage at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of the barbecue and will motor to Meriwether county.

Barbecues of the Old Guard in past years at the springs have entertained many national figures. Many of the 125 members of the battalion are expected to attend. Officers of the battalion include V. H. Shearer as adjutant, Dr. W. L. Champion as surgeon, K. S. McAllister, quartermaster; T. G. Woolford, commissary; J. E. Oxford, captain of ordinance; J. C. Gavan, secretary, and Sam Meyer, treasurer.

PRIVATE IN U. S. ARMY SEEN 'MENTAL MARVEL'

A private soldier in the finance department of the United States army, stationed at Madison Barracks, New York, has risen to win for himself the title of "military mental marvel" as a result of amazing memory and cerebral performances with figures. William W. Lord is the soldier and he is known in Atlanta, where he spent a vacation a few years ago.

PVT. W. W. LORD

According to an article in the United States Army Recruiting News of recent issue, Lord has no need of a computing machine when figuring vouchers, pay rolls and other business connected with the huge financial affairs of the army, being able to add several columns of figures without the usual procedure of a column at a time, and the mysteries of cubes and cube-roots are an open book in his mind. Requested to cube 634, he continued to pound away at a typewriter and within five seconds said "254,836,104."

For many years, according to the soldier's statement, he has been a student of concurrent thinking or multiple concentration and has reached an amazing degree of success in controlling his subconscious mind. He can write two proverbs—one with each hand—add up columns of figures, solve long division problems, construct a word maze—all concurrently.

POLICE VETERANS FACE RETIREMENT

As heads of the police and fire departments Saturday moved steadily in their efforts to bring the divisions up to the highest possible standards, and it appeared that about 15 members of each of the departments would be asked to take pensions. Mayor James L. Key directed a letter of congratulations to T. O. Sturdivant, chief of police, and called on him to enforce courtesy and efficiency in that department.

Chief Sturdivant said Saturday that examination of all departmental members between the ages of 60 and 70 years already has been begun. The examinations have the indorsement of the police committee and the fire board, and probably will result in marked shifts in the officer personnel for the most part.

Night Chief C. P. Connally is expected to be retired and Captain A. J. Holcombe to be elevated.

Two city policemen have filed applications for pensions within the last few days or are preparing to. E. O. Eddleman, 69, already has, and B. P. Gillespie, 63, will just as soon as he has completed service of the required 25 years, according to Sturdivant.

For Efficient Service.

"This retirement proposal is not for the purpose of getting the jobs of any individual," Sturdivant said. "It is to build up the physical standard of the department in order that it may more efficiently and effectively perform its services. We plan to institute a system of physical training and also conduct a crime school to keep officers abreast of the best criminal methods to increase their competency in discharge of their duty to Atlanta citizens.

"There will be no wholesale retirement of Atlanta policemen. The city treasury cannot afford such a step. We can make some changes, however, for the better of the service, and we intend to do that."

The fire board has ordered five captains to file applications for retirement by the June meeting of the pension committee, but Saturday B. Graham West, city comptroller, announced none had been placed with him.

Those already ordered to apply for retirement on pension by the fire board are Captains John Peel, No. 15; W. M. Anderson, No. 9; John Rozetta, No. 18; Roy Clayton, No. 14, and J. H. Tolbert, No. 3 engine houses.

Chief John Terrell, of the fire department, announced Saturday that about 200 of the 340 men of the department have taken examinations, but that only about five others had been found physically unfit for duty. These names, he said, he is holding for the fire board.

Text of Key's Letter.

Text of Key's letter to Sturdivant follows:

I have not had an opportunity of discussing the police department with you since you have been made chief of police, but I think it will be encouraging to you to know that your election as chief has met with almost universal approval in the department and out of it. Perhaps no man has ever come into this office with such a splendid confidence and co-operation on the part of the public as yourself.

All of your friends greatly appreciate the vigor with which you have taken up the various matters of administration, and they are gratified at the progress which you have made.

You realize, as does everyone who understands police administration, that the main problem for the police department is the prevention, the detection, and the punishment for crime. That, of course, should be and will be the central thought of your administration, but there are some other matters, of less importance it is true, but at the same time worthy of serious consideration. Namely, the police department should win for itself the confidence and the approval of the public. This, of course, can be realized only by a firm and fixed resolve by every man to do his duty to the public at all times, and under all circumstances, but there are some other matters that will help them to win this place. The police department, man by man, should have a pride in his position. He should be proud of the police department. He should be proud of the city whom he represents. He should take a pride in his own personal appearance and in his behavior toward the public. The police department can build itself up much by being neat and trim in appearance, by being precise and exact in all of their actions and movements. They can build themselves up by their attitude toward the public. Many people find themselves at fault through inadvertence or carelessness, or through violation of ordinances of which they are ignorant. Police should be kind and courteous, and helpful to people thus situated.

I am sure that as time goes on, the wisdom of your selection will be more and more apparent. You have the capacity of drawing your men to you very closely, and we have never had a man who was more capable of putting into execution the suggestions I have made above, if you think well of them, than yourself, and I ask you to give it your serious consideration.

I wish for you every success in your responsible position.

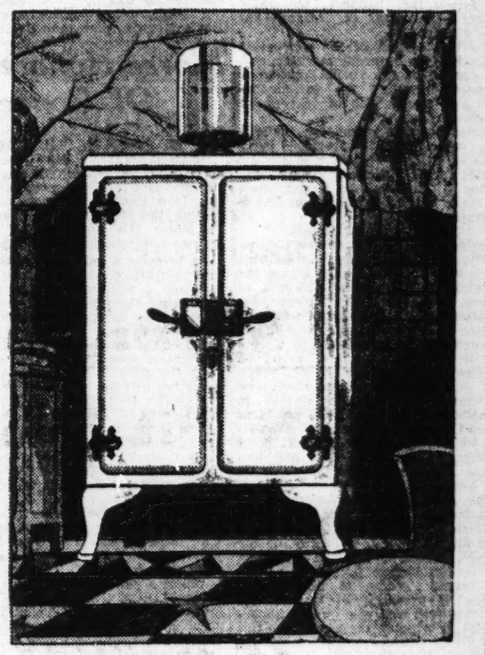

ATLANTAN DESCRIBES SHANGHAI DESOLATION

Atlanta friends receiving letters from Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, who is on a world cruise aboard the S. S. Resolute, have learned that she has been in Shanghai. She writes of the scenes of desolation and destruction left by the Japanese in parts of the city, and of the complete ruins of the city of Woosung. While in China she took trips up the rivers Whangpoo and Kiang.

Mrs. Ashby sailed from Honolulu last week en route to New York by way of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Balbon, Canal Zone, and Havana. She expects to return to Atlanta in June.

TEXTILE SESSION OPENS THURSDAY

Atlanta will be host this week to the largest group of textile mill executives in the country when the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association holds its 36th annual convention at the Biltmore hotel Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Approximately 500 southern cotton mill officials are expected in addition to a number of guests from the east, including cotton goods merchants, bankers and New England mill operators.

The convention will open Thursday evening, with a dinner meeting of the board of governors of the association, which includes the officers, directors and past presidents, representing the various southern states. At this meeting there will be considered several matters of importance which will later be presented to the convention as a whole.

At the opening session on Friday morning the principal speaker will be Dr. Melvin T. Copeland, president of the Harvard school of business research, whose subject will be "The Marketing and Distribution of Cotton Textiles." Dr. Copeland has written several books on the manufacture and distribution of cotton goods and has devoted much time and research to a study of the problems of the textile industry, so his address will be of especial interest to the visiting mill executives.

Executive Board to Meet.

At noon Friday, there will be a meeting of the executive board of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, most of the members of which are affiliated with the American Association. Mr. Norman Elsas of Atlanta, president of the Georgia Association, will preside at this session.

A discussion devoted largely to those foreign fibers competing with cotton will be the feature of the session to be held Friday afternoon. Several speakers have been selected to lead this discussion of a very important subject.

The outstanding social event of the convention will be the annual banquet which will be held at the Piedmont Driving Club on Friday evening. For the first time in many years the ladies are being invited to attend the banquet, and since the wives of many of the mill executives will accompany them an unusually delightful session is anticipated. The men are being urged to wear cotton suits to the banquet and all the ladies are asked to wear cotton dresses, so that it will be a typical cotton convention.

At the banquet Cason J. Callaway, of LaGrange, Ga., president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, will be the toastmaster and will present the two guests of honor, Governor Richard B. Russell Jr., of Georgia, who will speak on "Economy in Government," and George A. Sloan, of New York, president of the Cotton-Textile Institute, whose subject will be "Going After Business." Dancing will follow the banquet for which Walker's orchestra of Atlanta has been engaged.

The last session of the convention will be held on Saturday morning, and will consist of the usual executive business, including the various reports and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Special entertainment for the visiting ladies will be provided by a group of Atlanta women who are arranging some delightful affairs, including a luncheon at Friday noon and visits to many of the local flower gardens.

Many Prominent Guests.

Besides Mr. Sloan, of the Cotton-Textile Institute, other prominent guests who are expected to attend the convention are Irving Southworth, of Boston, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers: Walter S. Brewster, of New York, president of the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York; K. P. Lewis, of Durham, N. C., president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of North Carolina; W. S. Nicholson, of Union, S. C., president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of South Carolina, and T. Scott Roberts, of Anniston, Ala., president of the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

The meeting of the American Association in Atlanta this year is of particular interest throughout the state since Cason J. Callaway, of LaGrange, president of Callaway mills, one of the largest producers of cotton textile goods in the United States, is president of the association this year and was largely instrumental in bringing the meeting to this city. Other officers of the association are First Vice President B. B. Gossett, of Charlotte, N. C.; Second Vice President Donald Comer, of Birmingham, Ala., and Secretary and Treasurer W. M. McLaurine, of Charlotte, North Carolina.

Since the convention is being held during the National Cotton Week the visiting mill executives will be accorded a hearty welcome in this city, for Atlanta merchants are co-operating in a tremendous merchandising campaign in the interest of National Cotton Week and the entire downtown section will be decorated with posters and cotton banners calling attention to the extensive displays of cotton products.

Citizenship Essay Awards Won by Atlanta Students

MISS HELEN RUSK AND GUY LICHLYTER.

Miss Helen Rusk, of Commercial High school, and Guy Lichlyter, of Tech High, Saturday were announced as winners of the first and second prizes in the citizenship essay contest of the Civitan Club.

The subject of the essays was "What Constitutes Good Citizenship?" Miss Rusk's paper, which was the unanimous choice of the judges, was sent immediate to Civitan international headquarters at Birmingham, where it was entered in the international essay contest. The winners in this contest will be announced at the international convention at Baltimore, Md., June 19-22.

The local contest was conducted under the supervision of a committee of the Civitan Club and with the co-operation of schools officials. The committee included Clark Harrison, chairman; George Campbell Jr., W. L. Beyer, W. R. Dashiell, J. L. Edwards, Horace Russell and Fred Shaefer.

Roosevelt To Attend Dedication Of Warm Springs Airport Today

With Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt as the guest of honor and with a number of Georgia and Alabama airmen on hand for the ceremonies, the recently completed Warm Springs airport will be officially dedicated today.

Governor Roosevelt, Georgia's "favorite son" for the democratic presidential nomination, has given his official approval to the dedication program and has informed Warm Springs aviation officials that he would be present at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The dedication will inaugurate use of the landing field by the flying public and arrangements have been made, it was said Saturday, to have a large number of visiting planes take part in the occasion. The plot of ground on which the airport has been constructed was first used as a landing field several weeks ago, when Davis Merwin, pilot, and publisher of the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph, a daily newspaper, carried his daughter, a victim of infantile paralysis, to Warm Springs by air.

The program today, starting during the morning and continuing until late afternoon, will include stunting exhibitions, parachute jumps and passenger flights, it was announced. Beeler Blevins, James T. Williams Jr. and T. F. Johnson Jr. were among the Atlanta airmen who are planning to fly to the resort for the ceremony.

Officials of the Warm Springs Foundation believe that construction of the airport will result in the taking of many patients to the health resort by air, thereby greatly speeding the journey and eliminating the strain imposed by other modes of travel. It also was pointed out that Governor Roosevelt may make use of the field on later visits to the Foundation, of which he is president, when saving of time is expedient.

BY JOHN F. CHESTER.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The fastest of modern telegraph machines today flashed a special message from President Hoover, commemorating the conception by Samuel F. B. Morse 100 years ago of his laborious ticking original instrument.

In pressing a gold-studded wire key near his office, the president opened officially a worldwide centennial celebration of the creation of the Morse code and the means of transmitting its dots and dashes.

All of the speed of present day communication was brought into contrast with the slow methods of old at the initiation of today's ceremonies.

Exactly at 1:02 p. m., E. S. T., Mr. Hoover in the White House, placed his finger upon the gold telegraph key, itself a chapter in communications history. His touch started a modern machine, flashing words in praise of Morse to the capitol building a mile away.

There, in the United States supreme court rooms from which the inventor, with infinite pains, ticked out his first public message in 1844, the same message was repeated.

While a telegrapher ticked it out again—"What Hath God Wrought"—a modern microphone picked up the dots and dashes and broadcast them instantaneously to listeners in the far corners of the country.

Simultaneously, newspaper organizations, keyed to the flashing of important news almost instantaneously in all directions, were transmitting millions of words almost at the speed of speech over vast wire systems.

Miss Leila Livingstone Morse, granddaughter of the inventor, played her part in the ceremonies. She described the sending of that first message, made possible by a $30,000 grant from congress to set up the first telegraph line extending from the capitol to Baltimore, Md.

During the day, not only in the United States, but also abroad, the story of Morse's invention was retold—how he, a successful artist, conceived the plan while crossing the Atlantic on a sailing ship in 1832, and then labored for 12 years against hardship and near-starvation before flashing out publicly his striking first message.

Bride Is Convicted Of Beating Husband

NORFOLK, Va., May 14.—(AP) Mrs. Nettie Harney, married January 25, last, was convicted of beating her husband and sentenced to serve 60 days in jail and pay a fine of $20. She denied the charge.

"Did the blows hurt much," Harney was asked when he appeared against her.

"My head didn't feel right for a week," he said.

"Is this your first venture on the sea of matrimony?"

"My first," Harney said, "and my last."

U.S. CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM IS URGED

Fulton Board Asks National Bond Issue To Aid Employment Crisis.

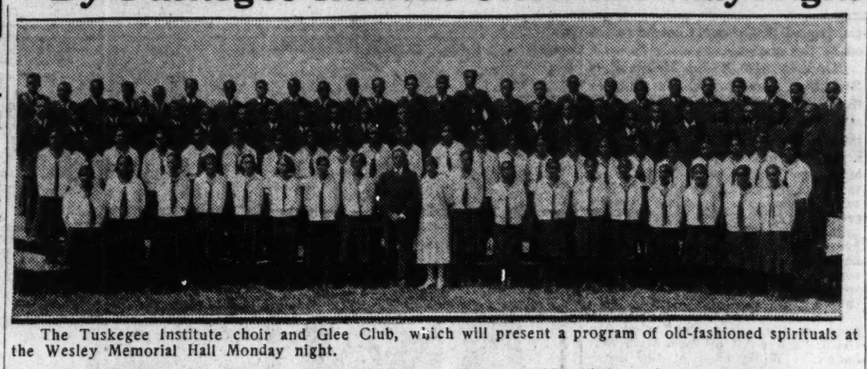

Resolutions urging congress to issue bonds for a program of public works to aid in relieving unemployment were adopted Saturday by members of the Fulton county commission at a special meeting called for the purpose of considering a proposal to close a road by county school property.

The memorial was introduced by Paul S. Etheridge, chairman of the commission, and was seconded by Dr. W. L. Gilbert. The vote was unahimous without discussion. The paper pointed out that a large program of public works, relieving unemployment, would tend to restore the country's economic stability.

A Steve Nance, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, Saturday expressed himself as in favor of a federal bond issue of sufficient magnitude to put on an extensive program of public works all over the nation. Nance, a member of the Emergency Relief Committee, said that congress should move swiftly to restore jobs to millions of persons who have been thrown out of employment.

Resolutions urging a national construction program through legislation were adopted Friday night by Atlanta Post No. 1, of the American Legion.

Old-Fashioned Spirituals To Be Presented By Tuskegee Institue Choir Monday Night

The Tuskegee Institute choir and Glee Club, which will present a program of old-fashioned spirituals at the Wesley Memorial Hall Monday night.

Increasing interest in the old-fashioned spirituals of the plantation negro, created largely by the success of "Heaven Bound" and similar local productions, is expected to attract a large audience to Wesley Memorial hall Monday night, when the Tuskegee Institute choir and glee club will present a program of these old songs.

The Tuskegee singers have become nationally famous through their phonograph records, and will be even more noted next year, when they will have a month's engagement in New York. They have been engaged by "Roxy," general director of the great Rockefeller music center, "Radio City," to open the main auditorium there, and probably will follow this by an extended tour. "Roxy" heard them in Tuskegee last year and pronounced the chorus "the finest singers of spirituals I ever heard."

The Tuskegee singers number 100 voices, men's and women's, and will be conducted by William L. Dawson, their music director, whose published collection of spiritual songs is considered authority on that subject. Five new numbers, discovered by him in remote sections of the south, will be included on the program.

Wesley Memorial hall will be equally divided between white and colored patrons. Seats for the former are on sale at the Cable Piano Company store and for the latter at Yates & Milton Pharmacy, 228 Auburn avenue. The concert will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

MISSISSIPPI HOUSE IN SATURDAY SESSION

JACKSON, Miss., May 14.—(AP)—A legislative precedent of long standing was broken today when the house of representatives met in a Saturday afternoon session and disposed of several pending measures as a prelude to the final drive for disposition of all major subjects before sine die adjournment Wednesday.

The session was well attended and worked along at a fast clip until a bill designed to chop fees of sheriffs and tax collectors was called up by the fees and salaries committee. Opponents of the bill moved to recess and were charged by the measure's advocates with "attempting to kill it." On a close division the house voted to recess until Monday morning.

SCHOOL HEAD, TEACHER DROWNED ON OUTING

TEXARKANA, Texas, May 14.—(AP)—L. W. Horn, 29, superintendent of schools at De Kalb, and Miss Anna Ruth Joiner, 24, teacher, drowned in Crystal lake, near Anona, Texas, 45 miles west of here, today when the boat in which they and two other teachers were riding overturned while Horn was attempting to bail water from it.

Herbert Lyons and a Mrs. Strout swam to safety after Lyons almost lost his own life in an attempt to save the others.

Resuscitation efforts for more than two hours by doctors and pulmotors rushed from Paris failed to revive the victims.

The teachers were chaperoning an outing of the junior and senior classes of DeKalb High school, celebrating the close of the school term.

Crash Hurts Fatal.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 14.—(AP)—John Welch, 76, Denmark (Miss.) farmer, died at a hospital early today of injuries suffered late Friday in an automobile accident south of Olive Branch, Miss. He was in a truck in which cattle was being driven to Memphis. The driver lost control of the machine when it skidded in loose gravel.

Where Does She Work, Me Man?

The hat check girl who wrote an article in Liberty about her experiences and said that she used to take Robert Montgomery's hat and "write the tip on the cuff," when he was a strugling actor, has nothing on a local hat check girl a reporter tells us about.

He never checked his hat for the simple reason that he had none. She asked him why he never checked a hat and his manly blushes told her the answer. She soothingly asked him what size he wore. And you may believe it or not but the next time the reporter passed she gave him a hat—just his

Now she would fain have you believe that she's hard-hearted and gave him the bonnet so she can collect the dime tip whenever he passes her place, but then one can never tell. Maybe she just suspected that he couldn't afford a hat. Who knows?

President Hoover Should Know This.

A few days ago clerks at postoffice substation B were all atwitter over money which had been placed in the mails in plain view of everyone.

The money in question was a shiny new dollar bill and was attached to an ordinary shipping tag. The bill was rolled tightly and tied across the end of the cardboard slip by a string passed through the hole in the end of the card. On one side was the receiver's address with a two-cent stamp, and on the reverse, the address of the sender. The "parcel" came from Macon and was delivered safe and sound to an address on Briarcliff road.

The money could easily have been taken from the card, but it was not. It would seem that this is a great test of the honesty of postal employes—especially when just at that particular time they were all facing the possibility of a 11 per cent salary cut.

POSTSCRIPT.

Someone remarked the other day that Talmadge should get a strong rural vote . . . "If he told the farmers that white was black, they'd believe him," said the man . . . if we remember correctly, it was about five years ago that he had them believing that Brown was black anyway . . . the drunk in Milwaukee who was arrested when he was found pushing his car through the street instead of driving it, told the arresting officer that he was in no condition to drive his machine, so he just pushed . . . that man was not drunk . . . he showed better judgment than a lot of perfectly sober Atlanta motorists . . . or maybe he had been reading of the Atlanta Jaycee safety and traffic campaign . . . it'll soon be graduation time . . . it would be a nice boost for National Cotton Week if all graduates would wear cotton dresses and suits at commencement . .

KENOSHA, Wis., May 14.—(AP)—Four men, armed with sub-machine guns terrorized the village of Trevor, west of Kenosha, at 2 a. m. today. They help up the Zmrzlys hotel, herded guests into the lobby and tossed tear gas bombs into the rooms before escaping with $400.

The robbers made an assault, almost military in its maneuvers, on the plant of the Western Livestock Company, then they laid siege to the hotel, where they obtained the loot.

In the office of the livestock company they shot at and then slugged a watchman, Frank Carney. Methodically and without any show of haste, they blew open two safes.

The robbers worked boldly and recklessly, secure in the knowledge that the community of 150 could not summon aid.

Yesterday, the Wisconsin Livestock Company held an auction. The robbers knew that somewhere there was a large sum of money. They could not find it in the safes, so they went to the hotel, with two captive watchmen.

TENNESSEEAN KILLED AS AUTO IS WRECKED

MICAVILLE, N. C., May 14.—(AP) Charles Whitson, 39, merchant of Erwin, Tenn., was found dead beside his wrecked automobile at Green Mountain, 12 miles from here, early today.

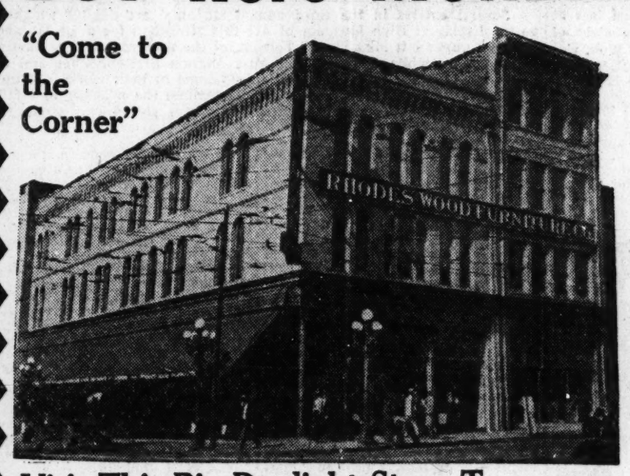

Whitson's head and chest were crushed. Apparently he had been thrown from his car as it wrecked and the car had rolled over him. The automobile's lights were burning when it was found at 5:30 a. m.

Sheriff M. C. Honeycutt and Coroner C. H. Morgan investigated and decided Whitson met death from an accident.

HERRIOT PLEDGES CO-OPERATION TO U. S.

Over-Sea

BY BYRON DARNTON.
Associated Press Cable Editor.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—European statesmen have but one fleeting month to find the financial answer to the question at the end of the Hoover moratorium.

For on June 16—unless tentative agreements fall through—the "big five" met at Lausanne, Switzerland, to tackle this great interrogation point.

There is evidence from international authorities in a position to know that the statesmen of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy have thus far failed to agree, even upon the terms to be referred to the conference.

Great Britain has taken the initiative toward setting a date for the meeting and issued the tentative invitations. Whether she has a program to offer has not been divulged.

Italy has announced her determination to go to Lausanne to write "finis" at the end of the volume Mussolini calls "The Tragic Bookkeeping of the War."

The first country to demand cancellation of debts, she will tell her European colleagues that she is willing to give up all reparations payments if her debts to the United States are lifted proportionately.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening of Germany has been just as emphatic in reiterating in emphatic language that Germany cannot pay.

"The world must realize it," he said a week ago, and he is going to the city on the Lake of Geneva with that message.

France is in the rather unusual position of having no cabinet to decide her policy, and no premier empowered to tell Europe what she will do. Premier Andre Tardieu is merely nominally in office until the newly-elected chamber takes its collective seat June 1.

Even then it is doubtful whether the victorious liberals can immediately take the helm. If they can, diplomatic leaders agree that they will take a somewhat softer attitude in international affairs than have M. Tardieu's conservative republicans.

But the French policy in any event cannot lean far from the often repeated "security for France." This, says France, in effect, we must have, for our borders have been overrun by invaders three times in the span of a single century.

But what of the United States? President Hoover proposed last June 20, to call a halt in all reparations and debt payments for a year ending June 30, 1932. That year is nearly ended, and the American policy has been stated.

It is: Europe, "settle your financial affairs. Then we will talk about collaboration."

President Hoover explained it to Premier Laval several months ago in Washington. American ambassadors since have carried that message to other European countries.

There has been but one opinion from an authoritative source. An official close to the Bank of International Settlements, where governments do their mutual bookkeeping, has predicted that the best that can be hoped for at Lausanne is another short moratorium for Germany.

This, he believes, will be of two or three years duration—a breathing spell.

There can be this year, he holds, with American elections and economic depression to be reckoned upon, no permanent solution of the reparations problem.

Uruguay Protests Capital Punishment

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, May 14. (AP)—The Uruguayan chamber of deputies last night voted to send cablegrams to the governments of Peru, the United States and soviet Russia and to the League of Nations against capital punishment.

The plan started as a motion to ask the Peruvian government not to execute any more communist rebels. It was an aftermath of the execution this week of eight naval men convicted of participation in the short-lived naval revolt at Callao last Sunday and was proposed by two communist deputies.

Two conservative deputies countered with an amendment to include a message to the United States congress asking that the death sentences of seven negroes in Alabama be commuted.

Other other conservatve deputies quickly followed with another amendment proposing to message the government of soviet Russia protesting against alleged execution of farmers.

Plane Frightens Horse And Mane Turns White

WREXHAM, Denbighshire, England, May 14.—(UP)—A horse was so frightened by the landing of an airplane in the same field that its black mane turned white, and there are streaks of gray in its tail.

Miss McAlpine, daughter of Sir Alfred McAlpine, the race-horse owner, said: "As the machine landed the horse suddenly took fright and galloped in front of it until it stopped.

"Four days later we noticed that the horse's mane was changing from jet black. It now is completely white."

SOVIET REVEALS MANY FAILURES IN ITS PROGRAM

Bad Results in Some Fields Reported Offset by Victories in Other Departments of Ambitious 5-Year Plan.

"FORD" BREAKDOWN IS WORST "DEFEAT"

BY EUGENE LYONS.

MOSCOW, May 14.—(UP)—Soon after disclosing the temporary breakdown of production at the Nizhni-Novgorod "Ford" factory, government and communist party organs also revealed serious failures at other plants and on construction jobs.

For a just appraisal of the gigantic work under way here it is essential to view it as a whole. If attention is focussed only on some striking example of failure—like the stoppage of the conveyor at the Nizhni-Novgorod plant—a lop-sided understanding of the situation is the result. The focusing of attention only on outstanding achievements—like the relatively good work at the Amo automotive factory in Moscow—is equally misleading.

Russians do not use the words failures and successes at all. They talk in terms of "defeats" and "victories." The language of war best expresses the country's mood in its final year of the Five Year Plan.

Zinc Combine.

Following close upon the central committee's sharp attack on mismanagement, which resulted in the cessation of production at the soviet "Ford" plant, came a report by the government on similar failures at the Constantinovka zinc combine. The facts set down in thee report are startling enough.

The zinc enterprise was opened prematurely, in November, 1930, when it was less than half ready for operation. The attempt to operate under those circumstances brought losses estimated at 10,000,000 rubles. The production program of the establishment for 1931 was carried out by only 18 per cent. The chief reason for the trouble was found to be bad leadership. Officials held responsible for the failure have been discharged and a thorough reorganization is under way.

At about the same time the builders of a locomotive plant at Lugansk came in for public chiding, its director, M. Danilenko, being dismissed. The construction work, Commissar of Heavy Industry Gregory Ordzhonikidse showed, was unsatisfactory. He set October 1 as an absolute limit for the completion of the whole plant.

The Victories.

The other side of the picture was provided by significant "victories" coinciding with these "defects." The first blast furnace began to produce its full quota of over a thousand tons of iron daily by the first of March.

The first large ball-bearing plant in Russia, and the largest in all Europe, was put into operation about the same time. It was built in record time, a single year, and with a minimum of foreign assistance.

Hindu-Moslem Riots Are Fatal to Three

BOMBAY, India, May 14.—(AP)—Three persons were killed and 70 injured in Hindu-Moslem clashes, which followed the beating of two Moslem boys by Hindus today.

Sporadic fighting broke out and spread until it became general and police fired on the rioting mobs in an effort to restore order.

The situation continued serious tonight and armed police patrolled the disturbed areas.

Alfonso XIII (right), exiled king of Spain, has made peace with his relative, Don Alfonso Carlos, pretender to the throne. They foresee restoration of monarchial splendor in Madrid.

BY ADELAIDE KERR.

FONTAINEBLEAU, France, May 14.—(AP)—Confirmation that Alfonso XIII and the Carlist pretender Alfonso Carlos, have joined forces in anticipation of a possible restoration of a constitutional monarchy in Spain, has been given here by an authorized spokesman for the former king.

"Yes, an accord has been established between Alfonso XIII and Alfonso Carlos to work together to defend Spain against anarchy and communism," the royal spokesman said.

The statement marked the first admission on the part of a member of the royal entourage of the authenticity of a manifesto published February 27 and purporting to be signed by the heads of the two opposing branches of the Bourbons.

The spokesman denied that either the former king or the pretender was formulating plans for a coup d'etat.

"We must wait for developments," he said.

The spokesman also denied that the former king had ceded his claims to the Spanish throne to the pretender Alfonso Carlos during the latter's lifetime.

"The king has ceded no claims to the throne," he declared. "He simply made this accord with Alfonso Carlos.

"This was in line with a wish ex-

DEATH OF OPERA FEARED IN PARIS

Fund Shortage Expected To Cause Death of Noted Institution.

BY MARY KNIGHT.

PARIS, May 14.—(UP)—Is death knocking on all the international doors labeled "Opera," both grand and concert, or has this veteran form of music merely sunk into a comatose state induced by lack of funds?

Visiting critics from New York indicate that the cold east wind also has struck the New York Metropolitan Opera, backed by the millions of millionaires. Should European opera not survive the coma into which it has sunk its death will have a radical effect upon the future history of world music.

Unless some modern Bourbons, Hapsburgs, Hohenzollerns, or Romanoffs rise to administer first aid, future generations only will have a dictionary definition of the word "opera."

The Paris Opera, designed in 1860 for the exhibition of Napoleon II's court and a monarchical society, already was an anachronism by the time it was opened in the 70's.

Pompous opera houses all over Europe are being filled with democracies instead of aristocracies, and the old order is giving place to a new one which threatens, not only the demolition of operatic arias, but also the magnificence of the monuments themselves.

England might take an operatic stand, in the opinion of many, for opera has been a sub-issue in music and entertainment there.

The arias of Bach, the adagios of Beethoven's sonatas and symphonies, while operatic in derivation, are not considered so in actual operation, as essentially contrasted with Handel's oratorios, the acme of operatic perfection.

Opera, in various countries, has suffered and survived strokes of temporary paralysis, but the malady now confronting it is of a more serious and sapping nature. It has found that it cannot live on love and unless transfusions of gold can be injected, specialists indicate their helplessness to keep it alive.

Japs 'Atrocities' Reported to League

GENEVA, May 14.—(UP)—The Japanese were accused of perpetrating "atrocities against all the principles of mankind in Manchuria" in a communication submitted by the Chinese delegation to the League of Nations today. The Chinese quoted a telegram from General Ma Chanshan, a former Chinese ally of the Japanese in Manchuria, and now supposed to be opposing them, in which he said Japanese troops entered the town of Tungho, about 105 miles east of Harbin, and ravaged the place cruelly.

Ma charged the Japanese "set fire to buildings, looted foodstuffs, disarmed police, arrested and imprisoned on a gunboat both the magistrate and director of public safety, killed women refugees with bayonets, sealed the mouths of pits where civilians had been hiding and burned them to death."

MEXICO AND PERU SEVER RELATIONS OVER MAIL BAGS

Peru Declares Communistic Matter Smuggled Into Country in Diplomatic Mail Pouches.

MEXICO CITY, May 14.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Manuel C. Tellez announced tonight that diplomatic relations between Mexico and Peru had been severed.

The Peruvian government, the foreign minister revealed, recently asked Mexico to withdraw Minister Juan B. Cabral and his staff from Lima, saying they no longer were acceptable as diplomatic representatives.

Peru's action, Senor Tellez said, was based on alleged charges made by Haya De La Torre, a Peruvian, that while in Mexico he had used Mexican diplomatic pouches to transfer private correspondence to Peru.

Peru charged that the Mexican mission in Lima had "intervened in internal politics and served plans of communistic elements to disturb the public order."

Orders were sent to the diplomatic mission in Lima today to withdraw from the country and passports were handed to Oscar Barrenechea y Raygadas, the Peruvian minister here, and to members of his staff.

Foreign Minister Tellez declared Mexican diplomatic pouches had not been used improperly and asserted that the Mexican minister at Lima had not been friendly with De La Torre, as charged by the Peruvian government.

"We wish to make plain that our relations with the Peruvian people always will remain cordial," the foreign minister said.

But the maintenance of friendly relations with the Sanchez Cerro government in Peru, Senor Tellez added, no longer was possible because of the attitude of that government toward what he termed a misunderstanding.

PERU EXPLAINS CAUSE OF DIPLOMATIC RIFT

LIMA, May 14.—(AP)—Dr. Alberto Freundt Rossell, minister of foreign affairs, announced tonight that his government had requested the Mexican government to recall the Mexican minister because he had visited Victor Raul Haya De La Torre, leader of the Aprista opposition, when Haya was being sought by the government authorities.

The visit occurred, the foreign minister said, when the opposition leader was staying at the home of the Plenge family, where he had "taken refuge and was escaping from justice."

General Juan B. Cabral, the Mexican minister, denied he had seen the opposition chieftain and later admitted it, Dr. Rossell said, when confronted by a statement from Senora Plenge.

"He admitted it while explaining it in a way not satisfactory in any sense," the foreign minister declared.

Another phase of the controversy between the two countries was understood to be based on documents, found by the police in a raid on the headquarters of the aprista party (populariists), which has been charged by the government with responsibility for the recent naval revolt that resulted in death sentences for eight sailors. The government also accused the communist party of participation in the revolt.

Among the documents seized in the raid, it was reported, was a letter from Haya saying that he had sent a communication into Peru in a Mexican diplomatic pouch.

Rural England Brings Quiet To Anglo-American Baronet

Sir Reginald and Lady Wolseley, newest members of Britain's titled class, find contentment in a thatched cottage set in the peaceful hush of an English countryside.

BY EDWARD STANLEY.

BERRYNARBOR, England, May 14.—(AP)—Sir Reginald Wolseley, who stepped out of his "lift" into a baronetcy, is finding it a little difficult to forget America and its "wonderful elevators."

But Lady Wolseley, who went out to Iowa, where he was an elevator man, married him and brought him back to England, would be glad to. The persistence of American reporters wasn't any fun for her.

Since their return they have sedulously avoided all publicity, except the mild spotlight their position in this tiny Devonshire village gives them, and have been living a life of calm and seclusion.

They live in a quaint, old-world cottage, perched on a hillside in a tiny winding lane hardly wide enough to admit a baby automobile.

A thick-spreading thatch roof overhangs its whitewashed cob walls and the front of the cottage is overgrown with rambler roses and trailing evergreens.

One reaches the cottage by climbing a series of rounded, steep steps, with grass and moss growing in the interstices of their slate-colored surfaces.

The hatch door is black oak and a hanging brass bell engraved with a Latin greeting adds to the quaint, old-world air of the place.

A ring brought Sir Reginald to the door, and Lady Wolseley soon appeared.

"We only desire to be left in peace," she said. "We are very happy and this is a home of peace. Our only wish is to be left alone, to live quietly just as other people do."

But if the exterior of the cottage is old-world, the interior is distinctly new-world. It has a lounge, dining room, a study, a new bathroom and bedrooms on the first floor. The walls are paneled in dark oak and solid beams intersect the ceilings.

Oil paintings, a great deal of brassware and old-fashioned china are

ARGYLE CAPTURES AUSTRALIAN VOTE

United Party Forges Into Lead as Labor Premier Faces Defeat.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 14. (AP)—The united Australian party, headed by Sir Stanley Argyle, tonight appeared to have defeated the labor government premier, E. J. Hogan, as returns from 65 constituencies voting in today's general election became known.

The standing at a late hour was:
United Australia party—31.
Labor—18.
Country party—15.
Independents—1.
Total—65.

Sir Stanley, closely following the returns as they came in, characterized the trend as a "decisive victory of a party standing for sound finance and political honesty over the forces of Langism."

Premier J. T. Lang, of New South Wales, was dismissed yesterday as a result of a long battle with the federal government which opposed his policy of defaulting state debts.

Ambassador's Wife Wins Italian Award

ROME, May 14.—(AP)—Mrs. John W. Garrett, wife of the American ambassador, was awarded a gold medal and a diploma at the national garden show today for the most decorative dining table arrangement of fruits and flowers.

MISSING FLIERS LAND SAFELY AT PT. BARROW

NOME, Alaska, May 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Edna Christofferson and two men, unheard from since May 4 on a flight to the Arctic ocean coast, arrived safely at Point Barrow today.

A message received here reported the Portland (Ore.) sportswoman, Pilot William R. Graham and George Laiblin, plane mechanic, were stormbound nine days at Point Hope, southwest of Point Barrow.

They are seeking the derelict trading ship Baychimo, deserted by its crew in the Arctic ocean last November, to recover any valuable furs that may have been left aboard.

KILLER IDENTIFIED AS RED COMMISSAR

Real Paul Gorguloa Was Slain in 1918, Declares Russian at Le Havre.

PARIS, May 14.—(AP)—Paul Gorgulov, the Russian who assassinated President Doumer, was identified as a former people's commissar of soviet Russia by a witness at a dramatic hearing today.

The identification came from M. Astakos, a Russian living at Le Havre, who swore he knew the real Paul Gorgulov and that he was certain of his facts.

"He's an agent provocateur or he's crazy!" shouted Gorgulov. "At least he's drunk."

Then the prisoner fainted.

M. Astakos had asserted that the assassin really was former Commissar Zolotanes. He declared he had seen the real Gorgulov killed in 1918 and that he had known Zolotanes from boyhood.

An extract from Gorgulov's diary, which was produced in court, told of plans to kill former President Paul Doumergue and the premier of Japan in 1930, but the prisoner told the judge this was just a fantasy.

Colonel Yelasiess, formerly of the Russian imperial army, said he was convinced from questioning Gorgulov that the assassin had served in the military forces of czarist Russia.

Austria Fast Drifting Toward Fund Crisis

VIENNA, Austria, May 14.—(AP) Distressed Austria drifted into another week-end without a government today and apparently was headed toward a transfer moratorium.

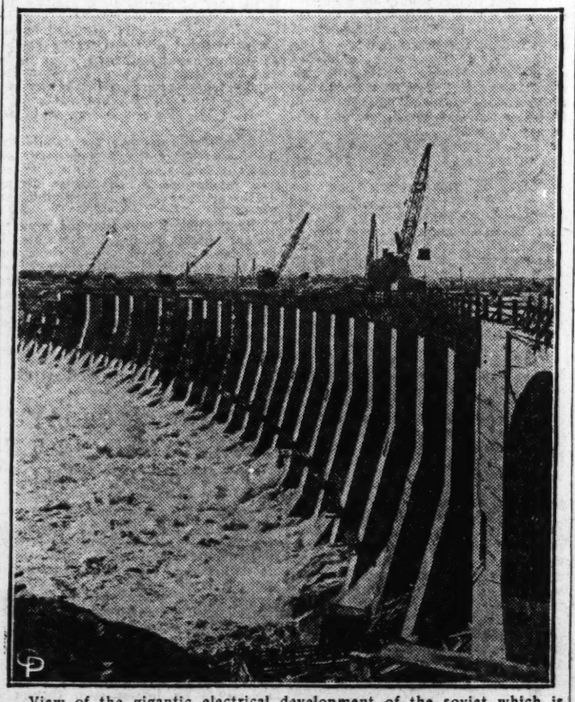

Before leaving Vienna for the Whitsunday holidays, political leaders made it clear it probably would be Wednesday at the earliest before a new cabinet is named to succeed the government of Premier Karl Buresch, who resigned May 6.

The text of the letter written to the League of Nations by Chancellor Buresch three days after his government resigned was made public. It allowed Austrian citizens to see for themselves that the national bank's foreign exchange available for interest payments on foreign debts, including the League of Nations loan, was practically exhausted and that Austria was at the end of her rope.

Russia in Transition

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 14.—When Lenin said, "Electrification plus soviet power equals socialism," he foresaw what a great part electricity would play in modern civilization as he charted the course of Russia's industrial and financial progress. He aimed to avoid the American experience, whereby electrification plus unbridled individualism has created private fortunes powerful enough to dominate municipalities and states and confident enough to challenge the federal government itself.

To a Washington reporter who has followed the Muscle Shoals controversy in congress for many years, the soviet program for electrification presents an interesting contrast of capitalistic and socialistic methods.

Industrial Vitamin Production Claimed by Cambridge Scientists

BY PHILIP H. MYRING.

CAMBRIDGE, England, May 14.—(AP)—Vitamins A, B, C and D may be produced on an industrial basis if the discoveries of two young Cambridge scientists fulfill initial expectations.

Dr. F. B. Bowden and Dr. C. P. Snow announced today completion of a series of experiments which Sir Frederick Hopkins, president of the Royal Society, pronounced of "major importance" in the study of vitamins."

The scientists were confident they had produced vitamin A from carotene, described as a reddish substance found in carrots, by treating it with ultra-violet rays.

They gathered evidence which led them to believe they had succeeded in identifying that part of the molecule of vitamin B which gives it its biological effects.

A method of distinguishing between opposing theories regarding the nature of vitamin C was another result of their work. This may determine whether the vitamin is made up of hexuronic acid or whether it is derived from narcotine by the action of light.

Increased efficiency in the present method of manufacturing vitamin D, known commercially as calciferol, was presaged by their statement they were in a position to offer vital suggestions from their research.

In the past vitamins have been produced by treating pre-vitamins with mixed rays of light but this method has its disadvantages in that the rays have decomposed the product almost as fast as it was made.

SECURITY DEMAND REPEATED BY HEAD OF LIBERAL PARTY

Probable Premier Reiterates France's Opposition to German Debt Cut Unless Other Powers Reduce Its Obligation.

FOREIGN POLICIES OF FUTURE MAPPED

Executive Council Called Wednesday To Perfect Details of Program and Draft Cabinet.

Edouard Herriot, who is expected to be the new premier of France, reveals in the following exclusive interview his hope for co-operation of the new government with leaders of liberal views in the United States. He also reiterates the French demand for security in arms reduction and for a "super-league" controlling the means of ware, and France's determination to permit no reduction of Germany's reparations unless Britain and the United States reduce France's debt accordingly.

BY RALPH HEINZEN.

(Copyright, 1932, by United Press.)

PARIS, May 14.—(UP)—The coming foreign policy of France will be based on closest co-operation with the liberals of the United States, Edouard Herriot, "man of the hour" in French politics, told the United Press in an interview today.

He said significantly that no reduction of Germany's reparations is possible unless the United States and Britain agree to equivalent reductions in the war debts.

Herriot is leader of the radical socialist party, which will be in virtual control of the French government's foreign policy. Carried into power by the recent elections, Herriot is the likeliest choice for premier. Even if another is chosen, Herriot is certain to exercise a dominating influence on French policies for the next four years.

Council to Map Plans.

An important meeting of the executive council of the radical socialists will be held next Wednesday to formulate a program and draft a possible cabinet.

"The radical socialists, who are entering parliament in great numbers, desire the closest and most confident relations with the liberals of the United States," he said.

"In accordance with our principles, we will abstain conscientiously from meddling with questions which concern the United States alone, and refrain from expressing opinions thereon.

"As soon as the exact situation in France is known, we will express ourselves with complete frankness to our friends across the ocean as well as to others. We will try to respond with scrupulous exactitude in every case, with perfect good faith, to any questions submitted.

France's Policy.

"By loyal and sincere discussion in the inspired name of liberty, we hope to put an end to the difficulties which beset us. We desire justice for all peoples. Of this justice we demand for France only its equitable share.

"Our foreign program is clearly defined. We are anxious to avoid extremes of provocative nationalism and blind internationalism.

"We see disarmament as a problem of international security. We see limitation or reduction of armaments only under control of the League of Nations, and progressively in proportion to the development of international security.

"We urge organization of an international force, internationalization of aviation, tanks, heavy artillery, and strategic railways and steamship lines capable of use for the mobilization and transport of troops.

"No reduction in Germany's reparations is possible unless the United States and Great Britain agree to equivalent reductions."

Bruening-Nazi Buffer Chosen for Ministry

BERLIN, May 14.—(UP)—General Curt Von Schleicher, advocate of peace between the Bruening government and Adolph Hitler, has been tentatively chosen by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening to replace Wilhelm Groener, resigned, as minister of defense.

The broad, strapping, bald undersecretary of defense has repeatedly acted as intermediary between Bruening and Hitler. He caused a stir recently when he induced Bruening to dine at his home with the former crown prince.

He has been offered the post informally, but will accept only if Bruening consents to a reconciliation with Hitler and later includes Hitler's nazis in the government.

Young British Princess Masters First Words

LONDON, May 14.—(UP)—Princess Margaret Rose, 20-month-old daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, and sister of Princess Elizabeth, now can walk and talk—a little.

Her conversation so far is rather limited; "Betty," her sister's pet name, is about all she can say, while her walking is a highly adventurous effort.

discontinued and the budget balanced without the levy of a single new tax upon our people.

"What a contrast between the Georgia method of balancing a budget and that pursued in the national government! In Georgia expenses were reduced to meet decreasing revenues. Some members of the national congress are undertnking to levy any and all kinds of new taxes on the people in order to increase revenue to meet tremendous national expenditures at a time when there is reduced ability on the part of the taxpayers to meet them.

"The staggering increase in the cost of our national government over the period from 1913 to 1932 has been brought to the people with shocking force during this period of depression. In 1913 the cost of the national government was something over seven hundred million dollars and in 1931 had climbed to over four thousand two hundred millions of dollars. If a halt is not called in our national expenditures, it is apparent that business and individuals are facing bankruptcy, and cannot longer bear the burden.

"Governor Russell believes that the first concern of the American congress should be the interests and welfare of the people of the United States. His views on international affairs are widely at variance with those of his announced opponent. Mr. Crisp's chief claim to distinction is his services on the war debt funding commission, which handled the settlement of the billions of dollars loaned the nations of Europe during and after the World War, which was raised by bonds sold the American people. This commission reduced or canceled the foreign debts to such an extent that more than ten billion dollars given to these nations must be paid by American taxpayers. Mr. Crisp also strongly supported the moratorium, waiving and postponing two hundred and fifty million dollars which they did promise to pay in 1931, and this must be immediately raised out of the taxpayers of this nation.

Opposes Cancellation.

"Governor Russell is unalterably opposed to the cancellation or reduction of one dollar loaned to Europe while these countries are at present spending millions on armament. This campaign gives the people of Georgia an opportunity to express themselves on the issue as to whether we prefer these debts should be paid by the people who received the money or by American taxpayers. Governor Russell believes that if the nations of Europe are able to spend hundreds of millions of dollars annually supporting huge armies and navies, they should pay the honorable debts they owe us.

"I have never been connected with a state-wide political campaign but I am fully convinced that this state needs a man fresh from the people, with the courage and ability of Governor Russell, in the United States senate and from reading the hundreds of letters he has received assuring him of support in all parts of the state, I am convinced that a large majority of the people of Georgia agree with me. Campaign headquarters will not be formally opened for some weeks yet but I wish to assure Governor Russell's friends of his appreciation of their activity in his behalf. In turn, I assure them that I will devote every effort and energy to the furtherance of his candidacy."

Scarlett is a graduate of the University of Georgia, Governor Russell's alma mater. He is a native of Glynn county and served, after entering the practice of law, as city court solicitor in Brunswick from 1920 to 1928. He has been active in politics for several years and for the past ten has been chairman of the Glynn county democratic executive committee. He was a delegate to the New York democratic convention in 1924 and will go to Chicago as a delegate again this year.

Rivers for Speaker.

Former Senator Rivers announced a few days ago that he would seek election to the house from Lanier county and again be a candidate for the speakership. He has previously been speaker and president of the senate and in 1928 and 1930 was a candidate for governor.

"My administration," Rivers said Saturday in commenting upon his speakership candidacy, "will be dedicated to a program that will make for economy and efficiency in our government and toward progress and prosperity for our people. It will be one of absolute fairness to every school of thought to the end that wise and wholesome legislation may be enacted and that bad and questionable bills may not pass. Every member will be treated with absolute fairness and every bill will be given impartial consideration upon its merits."

Indications were that Rivers would be opposed by L. Thomas (Pat) Gillen, of Bibb county. Gillen is now speaker pro tem.

In the race for speaker pro tem, of the 1933 house, Representative George Eckford, of Fulton, looms as a candidate. Eckford served his first term in 1931. Henry A. Beaman, of DeKalb county, and Carl Nelson, of Laurens, have also been mentioned as candidates.

Huddleston Pays Fee.

In state politics, Gus Huddleston, of Meriwether county, Saturday became the first qualified candidate in the race for attorney-general. Payment of his entrance fee was announced from Savannah by Miss Stella Akin, secretary of the state committee.

"I have," Huddleston said in a statement, "since announcing my candidacy for attorney-general, visited a great many counties and have communicated with friends all over the state. I have received very encouraging reports and have a great number of friends who are very active in my behalf.

"In my original announcement," Huddleston said, "my claim for this office was based on my ability to fill it. Sixteen years in active practice and six years of legislative experience have given me a thorough understanding of the duties of the office and, believing myself capable of discharging these duties, I am asking the support of the people. Based on these premises, I shall wage an active campaign until September 14."

Talmadge Is Praised.

The office of Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture and candidate for governor, made public a resolution adopted by the forty-fifth district state senatorial democratic committee commending him to "the electorate of Georgia as being eminently qualified" to fill the office.

A letter accompanying the resolution was sent by Drew W. Paulk, of Fitzgerald, secretary of the committee.

It said Talmadge had announced his candidacy "with the approval and good wishes of all of our people." He was commended to the voters as "eminently qualified" and "with the assurance that he will not only be loyal to the interest of the people of this great state but that he will fight to the last trenches in our behalf."

Louisiana May Build Highways With Cotton

BATON ROUGE, La., May 14. (AP)—Possibility of Louisiana using surplus cotton to build its highways depends on the result of a surfacing experiment under observation of the Louisiana highway commission on a half-mile length of road just south of Baton Rouge.

What is known as the "cotton method" of surface treatment is being applied on a piece of gravel road near the Louisiana State University to determine its value as a method by which thousands of miles of similar road in the state may be made free of dust.

The method consists of placing a thin coating of asphalt over the road; spraying a layer of cotton canvas over the asphalt; laying a thin spread of asphalt over the canvas; sprinkling finely screened gravel, and topping off with a coating of pea-sized gravel.

This method would use about ten bales of cotton to the mile, and cost $2,000 for that distance, says the contractor's estimate.

JOE H. SMITH SEEKS SEAT IN CONGRESS

Congressman Robert C. W. Ramspeck, of the fifth Georgia district, had announced opposition Saturday in the person of Joe Hill Smith, Atlanta attorney.

Smith announced he will seek the nomination subject to the state primary September 14 on a platform of economy in which he pledged his best efforts to agricultural and business interests.

Text of Smith's announcement follows:

To the people of the fifth Georgia congressional district: I desire to place my name before the voters of this district as a candidate for representative in congress subject to the democratic primary to be held September 14, 1932.

I have lived in this district 16 years and was reared in the adjoining county of Forsyth.

I worked my way through school at the Eighth District A. & M. school and the JOE HILL SMITH.

University of Georgia until the United States entered the World War, at which time I was working for the Georgia Power Company as a street car conductor.

When the United States entered the World War I volunteered and entered the military service and served under my flag 28 months, 13 months of which was in foreign service, and was disabled while in the service, and I am now a member of the Disabled American Vetererans of the World War and the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

After the war was over I returned to my service with the Georgia Power Company until my health improved sufficient for me to enter Emory University Law school, from which I graduated in 1925, and have been in the general practice of law since that time. Since leaving the power company, I have retained my membership with the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America.

I believe my experience and education qualifies me to serve the people of this district with a full realization of the needs of the farmer, since I was reared on the farm and educated in an agricultural school, and also with a full realization of the businessmen, since I have lived in Atlanta for 16 years and have been engaged in the general practice of law that gave me a general knowledge of the needs of the business people. I believe I can represent the laboring man's interest because I have always been a laboring man and fully in sympathy with all of his needs, having made a careful study of the laboring man's needs when I was a laboring man myself, and having made equal effort to serve them in my profession since I have been a lawyer. I believe that I can sufficiently understand the status of the various government activities to vote wisely for the best interest of both the government and the people.

I shall stand for strict economy in government in all departments, thereby reducing the burden of the taxpayers and shall use my influence to place the burden of taxation on those classes of business and people who are most able to bear the same and who benefit most by the same.

I shall stand for a referendum on any subject that concerns all of the people, because I believe that the people are the best judges of what they need, and it shall be my purpose on all issues that concern the people directly to communicate with my constituents and find out what the majority opinion is on any subject that might confront me as their representative in congress and use my vote and influence accordingly.

Pittsburgh's Mayor Convicted With Aide

BUTLER, Pa., May 14.—(AP)—Mayor Charles H. Kline, of Pittsburgh, and Bertram L. Succop, former Pittsburgh city supplies director, were convicted of malfeasance in office today.

The mayor was convicted on one count of the joint indictment. Succop, a colonel in the 111th infantry, United States army, during the World War, was convicted on several counts.

The officials were indicted after an investigation of city buying methods. The state charged that contracts for city supplies were let to others than the low bidders and that some purchases were made without bids being asked.

Mayor Kline discharged Succop during the grand jury investigation in Pittsburgh. They were brought to trial in Butler county after the state supreme court granted them a change of venue.

M. M. FROST TO HEAD FLA. JUNIOR CHAMBER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 14.—(AP)—M. M. Frost, of Jacksonville, today was elected president of the state junior chamber of commerce at its annual convention here. Tampa was chosen as the 1933 convention city.

Other officers elected were: Loper Lowry, Tampa, first vice president; Ronald Y. Ware, West Palm Beach, second vice president; Harold E. Ryman, St. Augustine, third vice president, and C. L. Wheat, Miami, treasurer.

One resolution adopted at today's session requested congress to call a referendum on the eighteenth amendment.

RALLS WILL PUT VOTERS TO TEST

Amateur Politician, Professional Farmer Seeks Agricultural Post.

Hamilton Ralls, a leading citizen of Hogansville, Troup county, and a pioneer in teaching Georgians to live at home, is going to find out whether an amateur politician and professional farmer can be elected to lead the farmers of Georgia and develop the state's department of agriculture.

Ralls is a candidate for commissioner of agriculture to succeed Eugene Talmadge, who has entered the race for governor. He knows practically nothing about politics and admits he doesn't. But he does know a whale of a lot about farming and farm problems and is ready to prove that he does know.

There have been times in the history of Georgia when a professional politician and amateur farmer could forge into office. The same thing has occurred also in other states. Georgia, at least, is going to have the opportunity to decide, September 14, whether she wants at the head of a great department a man who has successfully spent his entire life in agriculture and out of politics.

Plan Is Widely Known.

Most people have heard about the Turner county plan, which afterwards spread to Grady and Colquitt and other counties, but outside the people directly concerned few Georgians know Hamilton Ralls. The leading citizens of Turner recently indorsed him after this fashion:

"We were gratified to see Hamilton Ralls announce as a candidate for commissioner of agriculture. Knowing how much he was and is interested in solving the farmers' problems and marketing their produce, and his ability to do this, we whole-heartedly and sincerely indorse him for the office in the firm belief that he will fill the place with much credit to himself and be of untold value to the citizens of the state."

On the top of a wooded hill in the middle of a 500-acre farm and orchard, Hamilton Ralls and his family live in a charming white house built of thick boards more than 100 years old. Here he directs his own farming operations and the Hogansville Farmers' Club.

"My work with Georgia farmers," he said in an interview at his house Saturday, "has been along practical, helpful lines. I have never been one to give advice or to follow after wild theories. Georgia farmers are drunk now with advice from every source. They know what to grow and how to grow it.

"In my judgment, what they need is dependable leadership from whom the truth may be obtained on which to plan their operations and on whom they can rely for trained assistance in carrying out their plans.

Has Never Held Office.

"So far as I know, I am the only candidate for commissioner of agriculture that has never held public office. I have had practical experience in the marketing of nearly all farm products grown in Georgia and a dependable marketing system must be worked out. I now live on and operate my own peach orchard and farm at Hogansville and am familiar with production problems by actual experience.

"Georgia's commissioner of agriculture should be able, especially at this time, to bring together, in a spirit of mutual helpfulness, all classes of our citizenship and bring them again to have confidence in each other and in our farming possibilities and then be able to lead them safely and surely into profitable paths again. I have been able to do this in the communities where I have lived and worked and if elected commissioner of agriculture I promise to do everything in my power to this end for the state of Georgia."

Top-Ranking Student

Mildred Eaves, of 627 Morningside drive, N. E., sophomore at Oglethorpe University, who finished the fall term at the head of all Oglethorpe students in grade standing. An average of 99 made by Miss Eaves was the highest term grading ever attained by a student at the university.

Press Criticizes Russell For 'Forsaking State Ship'

BY R. E. POWELL.

Georgia newspapers which rang with his praises when his reorganization program had been given a promising start by the 1931 general assembly and a press which echoed his statesmanship a scant few weeks later when he refused to be stampeded into calling an extra session of the legislature are now, with a few exceptions, adversely criticizing Governor Russell for "forsaking the ship of state at a critical juncture" and at the same time predicting he cannot win the senate race.

Dailies at Savannah, Macon and Albany, which urged that he be a candidate to succeed himself and complete the program he advocated in his successful campaign for the gubernatorial nomination, have been joined by scores of weekly papers which, even more emphatically, foresee his defeat at the hands of Representative Charles R. Crisp, dean of the state's delegation in congress and acting chairman of the powerful ways and means committee.

"Crisp Entitled to Job."

In the current issue, the Leader Tribune, of Fort Valley, reprints editorials with reference to the senate contest from four papers with approval. Quoting from the Walton Tribune, edited by Ernest Camp, at Monroe:

"The Tribune feels that it is entirely proper that Congressman Crisp should seek promotion after his long and illustrious record in congress, and Governor Russell has not yet proved that he is entitled to promotion.

"For these reasons, and others equally as sound, the Tribune will support Charles R. Crisp for United States senator from Georgia and it confidently looks forward to his nomination in the September primary."

The same paper quoted from the Oglethorpe Echo:

"Governor Russell is fostering a policy in our state political affairs of which the people are becoming quite wary. It is that of making stepping stones of state offices.

"This is a practice that should be decried and so far as possible obliterated from our state affairs. It takes different fitness to successfully fill different offices and we must admit that fitness for the performance of duties of public trust should be duly considered in placing those trusts."

Taking note of charges, made by Governor Russell, that there was a determined propaganda to confuse the public as to his intentions in politics, the Macon Telegraph the past week said:

Telegraph "Regrets Action."

"The Telegraph regrets Governor Russell's decision to remain in the senate race despite the urgings of his friends. His intention, conveyed in this statement he issued Tuesday afternoon is perhaps irrevocable, because he seems to have arrived in his mind upon the conclusion that the effort to get him out of the race against Representative Charles R. Crisp was merely an effort to give Mr. Crisp the place.

"That is in error. Henry McIntosh, editor of the Albany Herald and one Georgian whose integrity has never been questioned for an instant, has been a close friend and admirer of the governor's for a long time. He was a member of the board of the state college of agriculture and when that board was abolished Governor Russell appointed him to the board of control. It was a good appointment. The point is that Governor Russell has regarded him as a friend and he is a friend."

Commenting upon the reaction of the press of the state, the Oglethorpe Echo of Friday said:

"If Governor Russell has a clipping bureau to supply him with what the press of the state is having to say about his precipitate candidacy for the senate, he will reconsider. The press is a mighty good index of public sentiment."

The same paper, in an editorial paragraph, observed:

"More than one candidate who has entered the field is going to have egoism that one or two successes has given them knocked into a cocked hat."

Griffin Daily News Comment.

The Griffin Daily News, edited by Quimby Melton, state commander of the American Legion and a member of the delegation to the Chicago convention which is headed by Governor Russell, Thursday reprinted from the Savannah Morning News:

"Efforts of Governor Russell's friends to guide him at the forks of the roads were wasted. He put at an end yesterday the hopes of his friends that he would be controlled by a sense of duty rather than lured by ambition. . . . Few young men have had opportunities such as young Dick Russell has had and it seems a pity for him to make a mistake at the most critical stage of his career."

The Columbia News, published at Harlem, also said in this week's issue:

"It would be a creditable incident in politics if the people of Georgia would nominate Charles R. Crisp to the United States senate by acclamation and it would redound to the future prestige of Governor Russell if he joined in the movement."

The Telfair Enterprise, published in the home county of Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, made a dual editorial observation in its paper this past week. In one paragraph it said:

"The Russell-Crisp contest promises to equal, if not surpass, any that the people of Georgia have seen since the days of Hoke Smith and Joe Brown. We did not support Russell for governor, but somehow we feel that he has completed about all he promised to do and his record is such that we will just have to support him. He has made the best governor we have had in many years and would no doubt make good in the United States senate."

Crisp, Russell Both Hit.

The same paper also said:

"It seems to us that Crisp and Russell are about equal in deserting one office when they are badly needed and seeking another. Neither can criticize the other for doing the thing he has also done and both could have been returned to the office they now hold without opposition. A peculiar state of affairs."

Along the same line is an observation in the Calhoun Times:

"While the political 'drafters' are busying themselves with their efforts to 'draft' Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. out of the senatorial race into a campaign for re-election as governor we think it would be equally as much in the interest of the state and nation if they would turn at least a part of their attention to Congressman Crisp and 'draft' him for another term in the lower house of congress."

The Vienna News, published by Miss Emily Woodward, a former president of the Georgia Press Association, reprints from the Cordele Dispatch:

"It seems as though nothing can dissuade Mr. Russell from making the senatorial race. He just naturally wants that job. Well, let him try for it, but we are afraid he will have little success when his opponent is Charles R. Crisp. He will be hard to defeat."

A humorous turn to the editorial clipping is gleaned from the Greensboro Herald-Journal, edited by Colonel J. C. Williams, long a distinguished figure in Georgia journalism:

The Dalton Citizen said:

"We are of the opinion that Governor Russell is not serving his own cause to its best advantage in becoming a candidate for the senate against Congressman Charley Crisp."

The Augusta Chronicle, regarded as one of the papers particularly friendly to Governor Russell, advanced this argument:

"The prospects of Honorable Charles R. Crisp becoming speaker of the house have been greatly enhanced because of the insistent talk of Speaker John N. Garner being named candidate for vice president on the ticket with Franklin D. Roosevelt. Thus the chairman of the ways and means committee (Mr. Crisp is acting chairman now) would probably accede to the speakership next year, for a Roosevelt-Garner ticket would be sure to win."

Tifton Daily Gazette.

The Daily Gazette at Tifton said: "Governor Russell's announcement that he is in the race for the United States senate until the voters decide the question on September 14 is no surprise to this writer. His previous statements and the payment of the entrance fee left no question of doubt as to his intentions. Our preference would have been for another Russell administration but the governor has his eye on a senatorial toga."

The same paper, quoted in the Quitman Gazette, said:

"We haven't seen all the Georgia papers, of course, but so far we have not seen a single one that approved of Governor Russell retiring from the governor's office to enter the senatorial contest. The papers we have seen, with one accord, agree that the governor has made a mess of gubernatorial politics."

The Savannah Morning News, in an editorial May 7, said:

"The Morning News believes that Judge Crisp stands head and shoulders above any Georgian in fitness for the senatorship. It believes that Georgians will warm to his support. It believes that no man so admirably equipped has been presented for their consideration in recent years. It feels confident that when Georgia speaks that Charles R. Crisp will become Georgia's next senator."

In an editorial May 12, the same paper said:

"If ever it was the duty of an official to carry on, it is Governor Russell's duty to continue as governor and not force Judge Crisp to defeat him in a contest for which there is no excuse."

From the Sandersville Progress:

"Lots of advice is being handed to the aspirants for political office in Georgia but when a candidate is hungry for an office he does not give much attention to advice."

HOMER H. HOWARD SEEKS BOND'S OFFICE

Homer H. Howard, assistant tax commissioner of DeKalb county, Saturday announced his candidacy for the post of tax commissioner now held by

H. H. HOWARD.

W. H. Bond, who will be on Mr. Howard's ticket as assistant, Mr. Bond having decided not to seek re-election as head of the office.

A lifelong resident of DeKalb, Mr. Howard has been identified with civic and fraternal interests there for many years. He is a member of the Harold Byrd post of the Legion, and he is vice president of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Howard is an active member of the Decatur Methodist church, the Decatur Civitan Club and other organizations. Mr. Howard has served as assistant in the tax office for the last 12 years.

Mr. Howard's announcement is as follows:

"I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of tax commissioner of DeKalb county, subject to the rules and regulations of the white democratic primary to be held September 14, 1932.

"If elected, I will have as my assistant Mr. W. H. Bond, with whom I have been associated as assistant for the past 12 years. I will endeavor to render impartially to all of the citizens of DeKalb county the same prompt, courteous and co-operative service which has marked the work rendered in the tax office for many years.

"Your influence and vote will be very much appreciated.

"H. H. HOWARD."

ELIZABETH BRODY JOINS WITH CIRCUS FOR BOOK 'COLOR'

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—Under the "big top" of a circus on tour, Elizabeth Cobb Chapman Brody, only daughter of Irvin S. Cobb, hopes to gather the "local color" she needs for her latest book.

For several weeks, she will live and travel with professional circus performers, appearing herself as a costumed rider in the parade opening the performance.

"I am not going to perform," she said today, "mostly because I can't do stunts on horses even though I have ridden them most of my life."

Mrs. Brody, known as "Buff" to her famous novelist father, will make her first appearance with the circus at Washington Monday afternoon. She was detailed to a stateroom in the circus train leaving Jersey City, N. J., tonight.

She lives in a Fifth Avenue residence here with her husband, Alton A. Brody, a real estate dealer. They have an 11-months old boy.

Mrs. Brody, whose first husband was Frank Michler Chapman Jr., of Englewood, N. J., is 28. Her first book was published in 1927.

MANNING ENTERS RACE FOR COMMISSION POST

Atlantan Announces Candidacy for Unexpired Term of Late Calvin Parker.

Hunter A. (Ham) Manning, traffic manager of the Atlanta Paper Company and a registered practitioner before the interstate commerce commission, Saturday announced his candidacy for the unexpired term of the late Calvin W. Parker on the Georgia public service commission.

Mr. Manning is a past president of the Traffic Club of Atlanta and served five years as president of the Traffic Study Club of Atlanta. He is a member of the membership committee of the Associated Traffic Clubs of America, a member of the newsprint paper committee of the Southern Traffic League, a member of the pulp and paper committee of the Southeast Shippers' Regional Advisory Board, and secretary-treasurer of the inter-city Civitan Clubs of East Point, College Park and Hapeville. He also is a Mason, Woodman of the World, a steward in the East Point Methodist church, and chairman of the East Point democratic executive committee.

A resident of East Point for 16 years, Mr. Manning is 42 years old and a native of Douglasville. He is married and has one son, Phillip V. Manning, a senior at Georgia Military College. Mr. Manning lived in Spalding and Butts counties during his youth. His father was the late John A. Manning, Spalding county farmer.

Mr. Manning's announcement follows:

In what I sincerely believe to be a worthy and laudable ambition to serve the people of Georgia in the way I am best qualified, from training and experience, to serve them, I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for a place on the Georgia public service commission for the unexpired term of the late Calvin W. Parker, subject to all the rules and regulations of the democratic white primary of September 14.

For a number of years there has been a conviction on the part of shippers and manufacturers over the state that at least one member of the Georgia public service commission should be a man who has had actual experience in traffic and transportation matters. The public service commission is one of the most important branches of the state government. Its rulings and decisions vitally affects every man, woman and child in the state, yet not one single member of the present commission has had actual traffic or transportation experience.

I believe that I am qualified to serve capably and well on this very important body. I am a registered practitioner before the interstate commerce commission, having been admitted to practice before that tribunal shortly after the establishment of the Interstate Commerce Commission bar. I have had 20 years' experience in traffic and transportation work, eight years of which was spent as an employe of the carriers and the past 12 years as traffic manager for the Atlanta Paper Company, one of the south's largest manufacturers of paper boxes and bags. I know the problems of both shipper and carrier, and honestly believe that my experience will enable me to render a valuable service to all shipping interests.

I have never before offered for any public office. I am not a politician, but a plain, every-day citizen with an intimate knowledge of the problems now faced by every merchant, manufacturer and carrier, and a sincere desire to be of service.

I have no magic formula by which I can promise to revolutionize conditions overnight, nor any infallible panacea for the commercial ills of the day, but I promise the people of Georgia, that if elected, I will serve them efficiently, faithfully and conscientiously.

I am under obligations to no one, politically or otherwise, and if elected I can and will decide all issues coming before the public service commission in fairness and equity.

MURRELL ANNOUNCES FOR LEGISLATURE SEAT

Kenneth R. Murrell, attorney, Saturday announced his candidacy for representative in the legislature from Fulton county to succeed William G.

K. R. MURRELL.

Mr. Murrell's announcement is as follows:

"After mature deliberation I have come to the conclusion that I am in a position to render a service to the people of Fulton county as a member of the coming legislature and because of that belief I hereby announce my candidacy for the house of representatives of the state of Georgia, to succeed William G. McRae and subject to the white democratic primary. In times of prosperity little attention is paid by the average citizen to the personalities who offer for public office and it is the rule that only candidates offer who are placed before the people by some clique or special interest. When a depression follows a period of prosperity the burden of the support of governmental agencies then becomes the predominant factor in the individual and community life and the people awaken to a responsibility in the solution of these problems, by the exercise of their God-given right of suffrage. I believe that now as never before the professional politician should be asked to step aside that men with no ulterior motive but actuated by a desire to serve, may be elected to the public office for the common good. I am not at this time placing before you an analyzed platform as I believe that in the near future, when the time for campaigning begins the wishes of the people will become felt and predominant and these alone will guide me in the building of my platform.

"If elected to the office which I seek, I pledge that I will be ever mindful of the mandates of the people and when their wish is expressed to me by a majority, I will prepare and introduce measures in strict accordance with their wishes, looking to the uplift and betterment of the people whom I seek to represent."

Ruth Owen and Foe Will Meet in Debates

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 14. (AP)—A series of joint debates between Representative Ruth Bryan Owen, of the fourth district, and her opponent, J. Mark Wilcox, West Palm Beach city attorney, during their campaign for the democratic nomination to congress is in prospect for the voters of the fourth district.

Challenged by Mrs. Owen to debate, Wilcox replied by telegram that he would gladly meet her on the issues "on which we are not in accord," and added that he took it she was taking issue with him upon his avowed proposal for repeal of the 18th amendment.

R. F. SMITH TO OPPOSE LEATHERS IN DEKALB

R. Frank Smith, who served in the general assembly from 1913 to 1917, Saturday announced that he would be a candidate for the seat in the legislature now held by Roy Leathers, of DeKalb. Smith is the first candidate to include in his platform a plank advocating capital punishment for kidnapers. He also is opposed to a merger with any other county.

His announcement said:

"I desire to announce that I will be a candidate for representative from DeKalb county in the next general assembly to succeed the Honorable Roy Leathers. I had the honor of representing my county in that body several years ago.

"I was one of the 'brave ninety-seven' when the great prohibition fight was on but I voted for the referendum.

"I taught school 22 years and have lived in DeKalb county all my life. I worked in the state senate 12 years.

"I believe in and practice rigid economy and favor the administration of state affairs on an economical and business-like basis.

"I favor a limitation of taxes on farm lands.

"I favor capital punishment for kidnapers.

"I will vigorously oppose any legislation intended to dissolve or abolish DeKalb county. It is one of the best counties in Georgia and among the wealthiest, most densely populated and an educational center. My only purpose is to make it better.

"I will favor an act prohibiting oil trucks or any other trucks hauling or transporting freight on Sunday.

"I will greatly appreciate the vote and influence of all the voters of DeKalb county, both male and female.

M. D. COLLINS SEEKS TO SUCCEED DUGGAN

M. D. Collins, supervisor of Fulton county schools and former school superintendent of old Campbell county,

M. D. COLLINS.

Saturday announced his candidacy for state superintendent of schools to succeed M. L. Duggan, in the September primary. Mr. Collins, in his announcement, promised co-operation with educational forces and members of the general assembly, and expressed himself heartily in favor of the equalization fund.

Mr. Collins said that he realizes that the office of state superintendent of schools is one of exceeding importance and that a candidate for the position should have experience as an administrative officer, as well as a knowledge of the needs of the schools of the state. He has been actively engaged in school work for 28 years, teaching 17 years and serving as superintendent in Campbell county for 11 years.

Mr. Collins is a graduate of Oglethorpe University, and attended Mercer University, the University of Georgia and Columbia University. His interest in putting the educational opportunity of the child first has been demonstrated, and was proven conclusively when he championed the cause of the county merger and voted himself out of a position on the basis that Fulton county could offer a bigger and better educational opportunity for the children, his announcement pointed out.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR MISS. POSTOFFICE

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The contract for construction of a new postoffice and courthouse at Meridian, Miss., was awarded by the treasury today to Ralph Sollitt & Sons, South Bend, Ind., at $314,000. The work must be completed in 440 calendar days.

WIDE INTEREST SHOWN IN STILL'S CANDIDACY

Friends Laud Record and Service of Veteran Fulton County Legislator.

Not only Fulton county but state political circles found interest Saturday in the announcement that Luther Still, veteran member of the general assembly, would be a candidate to succeed himself in the house of representatives.

Ordinarily speaking, a Fulton county member, usually from Atlanta, is just another representative of the biggest city in the state. Not so with the picturesque Still, who was indorsed Friday night by organized labor.

There is no man in the house—or senate, for that matter—better known than Still. He is seeking to round out his fourth term as a representative of the people and to serve a constituency which, in the last year, has grown larger and more diverse because of the merger of Campbell and Milton counties with Fulton.

Luther Still is one of the legislative veterans. There are members who have served longer than he has but there isn't one who enjoys wider friendships with his own people or the people of the state. This is partly on account of his own innate personal popularity and partly on account of the fact that he is the recognized legislative spokesman for organized labor in the legislature.

Labor, Commerce Chairman.

During the last session, Still was chairman of the house committee on labor and commerce. Many members of this committee were manufacturers, representing interests located outside of Atlanta. They found, and so attested, that Still in his consideration of legislation, was uniformly fair with all groups.

Because of his previous service in the house, Still became a member of the small group which, in the last days of the assembly, controlled legislation. He was a member of the rules committee of which the speaker is chairman. He was also a member of the important ways and means committee and very active in the work of framing revenue legislation.

Still was recognized as a particular friend of the public schools and while his concern was for the general advancement of the state's educational program he paid especial attention to the particular county he represented. His record in this connection has been generally praised.

Discussing his campaign, in which it appeared Saturday he would have no opposition, Still emphasized the fact that there must be a revision of taxes.

Record Is Well Known.

"Industry and so-called big business," he said, "must be nurtured in these critical days but, at the same time, it is highly important that we not lose sight of the little man who has bought a home and is trying to make both ends meet and keep it.

"My record in the general assembly is well known to the constituents I have been serving. I am especially gratified, however, since we have acquired the counties of Milton and Campbell, that I can also point to my record in the legislature in behalf of the agricultural interests of the state. I recognize, and have recognized, that any state-wide legislation must be considered from the standpoint of the farming people."

Still is one of the most colorful figures that ever sat in legislative halls. He is, usually, calm and disinclined to speak unless the bill under consideration be one affecting the interests of his county. But when he does speak he gets the closest attention. If it is known in advance that he is to take the floor for or against a measure, whether local or state, the house galleries are usually quickly filled.

Tennessee Income Tax Held Unconstitutional

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 14.—(AP)—Tennessee's new general income tax law, estimated to yield $3,000,000 in annual revenue, was held unconstitutional today by Chancellor R. B. C. Howell. The state will appeal the dicision immediately to the supreme court.

The court held that the graduated income tax was a levy on property and therefore violated the provision of the constitution directing that all property shall be taxed uniformly and equally.

The tax, enacted by the legislature last December, provided for a levy ranging from 1 to 5 per cent on the net incomes of individuals after all exemptions and of 4 per cent on the net earnings of corporations, with credit allowed for the 3 per cent corporation excise tax paid.

THREE BISHOPS ELECTED BY A. M. E. CONFERENCE

CLEVELAND, May 14. — (AP)—Three new bishops were elected by the African Methodist Episcopal church today after balloting that started yesterday and continued throughout the night.

Those elevated were the Rev. Noah H. Williams, of St. Louis; the Rev. D. H. Sims, president of Allen University, located in South Carolina, and the Rev. H. Y. Tookes, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Rev. Williams was elected on the third ballot and Rev. Sims on the fourth. Two more ballots were taken before Rev. Tookes obtained the necessary majority of 335 votes.

COUNCIL TO SEEK PLAYGROUND FUND

Millican Seeks To Find $4,500 To Insure Supervision for Summer.

Allocation of about $4,500 for operation of playgrounds for the summer months probably will be one of the major matters to face council at its meeting Monday, it was indicated Saturday, and at the same time Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of the school committee, prepared to initiate a move to place operation of schools under a special citizens committee through abolition of the board of education.

Alderman G. Everett Millican, chairman of the parks committee of council under which playgrounds will be operated and also chairman of a subcommittee of the finance committee, was busy Saturday attempting to find a fund from which the $4,500 fund may be taken. Other members of the subcommittee of the finance group are Alderman Alvin L. Richards and Councilman William T. Knight.

Many other routine matters are slated to face the council as reports from various committees are filed.

"This time of all times, the children of the city should be given the protection and benefits of a supervised play program," Millican said. "Mothers of hundreds of children are at work trying to make ends meet in this trying time of economic want.

"If we permit the children to roam the streets or to be without some systematic program, we are doing them and the future citizenship of Atlanta an irreparable injury. We should do everything possible to insure a supervised play program as a protection of the children themselves and as an investment in future citizenship. Our committee will make a painstaking study of the finance sheet and attempt to find the money. We can not anticipate it out of thin air, but if it is humanly possible to get the money, we shall recommend that council allocate it."

Gilliam, the administration, headed by Mayor James L. Key, and many others are back of the plan to revise operation of schools in order to curtail expenses and also to insure elimination of factionalism in the board and institute a harmonious conduct of that division of the municipal government.

The move for playgrounds, one of the items deleted from the January finance sheet when the economic ax was wielded by the administration, is backed by civic organizations, including woman's clubs, and there was every prospect Saturday that it would get the indorsement of council if it is sent to that body.

Gilliam probably will offer a measure providing for abolition of the board at Monday's session, he said Saturday, and ask that it be referred to the charter revision committee. The present board is a chartered board and can not be abolished except by legislative act and since the assembly will not meet until 1933, there is ample time to evolve a definite plan.

COMMISSION GRANTS 7 BUS CERTIFICATES

The public service commission has approved seven applications for certificates to operate busses or trucks over the highways of the state for hire, and has revoked four licenses.

Chairman James A. Perry of the commission Saturday announced also that the commission suspended the certificate of the Aaron Motor Freight line of Blakely for 90 days to be revoked automatically at the expiration of the 90 days unless the operator complies with all motor carrier rules of the commission.

The certificates approved were for the following concerns:

C. H. Maeger, Dalton; F. A. Sims, Lawrenceville, and L. W. Evans Taxi Service, Shannon, certificates approved for operations within 50 miles of the towns in which the concerns operate.

W. O. Bowden, Roswell, granted a certificate to operate a private carrier for the transportation of property between Roswell and Flint Stone, via Marietta, Cartersville and Oglethorpe.

Tolbert and Adrine Taxi Company of Rockmart was also granted the right to operate for the transportation of property within 50 miles radius of Rockmart.

The licenses of the following operators were revoked:

J. G. Chandler, Crawford; A. J. Fuller, owner of Gainesville Transfer Company; Carolina-Georgia Motor Line, Ridgecrest, N. C., and J. F. Jackson Transfer, Thomaston.

Rules nisi were dismissed against the Calhoun Transfer of Calhoun and S. S. Sale, Lincolnton, Ga.

The commission reassigned the motion for a re-hearing on the application of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Coast railroad for authority to discontinue trains No. 13 and 14, operated between Nicholls and Brunswick. The hearing will be on June 1.

A rule nisi also was dismissed against J. G. Chandler, Crawford; W. E. Protho, Aiken, S. C., and J. D. Ivey, Milledgeville.

The commission withdrew its approval of the application of J. H. Sheram, of Tennille, to operate a motor carrier to transport property over the highways by no fixed route.

The certificate of John L. Brigham, of Girard, Ga., was suspended until further notice. He operated over no fixed route.

County Commissioners Open Annual Conference Monday

Charles M. Upham, of the American Road Builders' Association, and Walter B. Stewart, Fulton county commissioner, who will be two of the leading figures at the annual convention of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, which will open here Monday.

County commissioners from all sections of the state will gather in Atlanta Monday for a three-day session of the 18th annual convention of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, bringing a total of more than 600 people here for the meeting.

The convention will be held at the Ansley hotel and registration will begin at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the lobby of the hostelry. The first day's meeting will be in conjunction with the county highway officials' division of the American Road Builders' Association and will be attended by officials of the latter organization and engineers from southeastern states.

Luncheon Meeting.

Beginning with a luncheon at the Ansley at 12:15 o'clock Monday, the opening session will feature speakers of note. Walter B. Stewart, Fulton county commissioner, will preside and speakers will include prominent road men from various cities.

The county highway officials will arrive in Atlanta today, having come in a motorcade that started in Washington Friday. The caravan traveled south through Richmond, Va., and Columbia, S. C., where overnight stops were made. Among those arriving will be Charles M. Upham and C. E. Brubb, of the American Road Builders' Association; J. A. Bromley, of Annapolis, Md.; A. P. Shaw, of Wilmington, Del., and Howard B. Keasbey and Hal G. Sours. Several of the prominent men will have places on the program of speeches.

At 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon an open meeting will be held, with Captain J. W. Barnett, chairman of the Georgia highway board, acting as chairman and C. E. Burleson, of Clearwater, Fla., as vice chairman. Speeches on the subject of highway expenditures, maintenance and organization will be made by several of the visiting highway officials.

The first session of the county commissioners' convention will open at 8 o'clock Monday night with Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. and Mayor James L. Key and Chairman Paul S. Etheridge, of the Fulton commission, making speeches of welcome.

First business session will be held at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning when speakers will include L. M. Clarkson, state sanitary engineer; Paul Doyal, state tax commissioner; Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, and George B. Hamilton.

Barbecue Planned.

Tuesday afternoon a barbecue will be given the visitors, and Tuesday night the annual banquet will take place, at which time speeches will be made by Captain Barnett and John N. Holder, former chairman of the Georgia highway board.

The annual "shop talk" session will be the feature of Wednesday's meeting, when visitors and officers of the organization will make informal speeches.

Officers of the association are G. B. Baggs, president, of Camilla; M. W. Tift, Albany; Lee M. Happ, Macon; J. H. Griffith, Athens; F. M. Cates Jr., Waynesboro, and George W. Tiedeman, of Savannah, vice presidents, and Fred Houser, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer.

How United States Senators Collected Unearned Mileage

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.
(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(UP)—The senate often is referred to by some of its members as the greatest deliberative body in the world. Outsiders sometimes complain that it is too deliberative. Yet, on occasion, it is able to act with decisive and instant accord.

Take the senate's speedy and unanimous action on senate resolution 329 in the previous congress. Action was instantaneous. And then the senators flocked around to the pay window of the senate disbursing clerk and collected about $45,000 in mileage fees for traveling expenses which few of them actually incurred. They previously had drawn mileage fees to cover their expenses for the regular session of congress.

This was for the special session of the senate in 1930 to ratify the London naval treaty. It met immediately after the regular session of congress adjourned so that senators did not go home between sessions. They got no further away from Washington than Burning Tree golf course. Yet every single one of them collected 40 cents a mile to cover traveling expenses to and from his home to Washington.

Brookhart Gets $416.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, republican, Iowa, came racing in from a chautauqua tour—he had been out three months—got in on the last day of the session and served six hours. For which he collected $416 in railroad mileage. His railroad fare from his home in Washington, Iowa, to his job in Washington, D. C., would have been $97.48 for the round trip and lower berth.

The absolute unanimity of the senate in voting the mileage to itself probably will discourage the senate economy committee from dealing with this subject in its present effort to reduce governmental extravagance.

Senators sometimes complain they need the extra mileage fees to move their families, but in Senator Brookhart's case, he has a son and a daughter working in his office—the son was at that time working for the federal trade commission—and another was working for the department of commerce so that he had no occasion to move his family.

Brock Also Gets Gravy.

The Brookhart family, incidentally, is on the federal pay roll for about $25,000, according to statements made in the Iowa primary fight and verified here. He draws $10,000, regular salary. His son and daughter work in the office—they are not absentee employes, it should be emphasized. Two of his brothers have court jobs in Iowa.

Brookhart went out on chautauqua duty early in May, 1930, while congress was still in session. Then followed the special session of the senate only. On the last day of the special session, the Congressional Records opens with this notation: "W. E. Brock, a senator from the state of Tennessee, and Smith W. Brookhart, a senator from the state of Iowa, appeared in their seats today."

This legalized their mileage. They had not been present at any session previously and this permitted them to present signed mileage certificates for the indorsement of the vice president.

Late the day before, anticipating final adjournment, Senator Watson, republican leader, introduced senate resolution 329, which said:

"Resolved, that the secretary of the senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the appropriation for expenses of inquiries and investigations, contingent expenses of the senate, fiscal year 1930, to senators their mileage for the present special session of the senate."

Record Time Passage.

It was referred to the committee on audit and control and Senator Borah then moved an adjournment.

The next day, the matter was disposed of, according to the Congressional Record, as follows:

"Senator Deneen (Ill.)—I report back favorably from the committee to audit and control the contingent expenses of the senate, senate resolution 329 and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

"The Vice President—Is there objection?

"There being no objection, the resolution was read, considered, and agreed to."

As a result of which every senator drew railroad mileage—in one case as much as $1,300—for having traveled not one mile beyond the District of Columbia line.

The money involved may be comparatively small for congress, which deals chiefly in large figures.

Some Comparisons.

Here are sample comparisons between the amount of mileage drawn by some senators and the round-trip railroad fare which they would have paid had they actually gone home:

Senator Hale, Maine, mileage collected, $227.20—would have paid for round-trip and lower berth $54.88.

Senator Oddie, Nevada, collected $1,225.60—would have paid $260.88.

Senator King, Utah, $960—would have paid $212.96.

Senator Jones, Washington, chairman senate economy committee, collected $1,347.20—would have paid $272.98.

Senator Borah, Idaho, collected $1,058.80—would have paid $239.56.

Senator Johnson, California, collected $1,292.80—would have paid $274.76.

Senator Goldsborough, Maryland, collected $16—would have paid $4.38.

Senator George, Georgia, collected $301.20—would have paid $78.10.

ATLANTA IS PRAISED IN L. & N. MAGAZINE

Three articles concerning Atlanta and written by Atlanta men are published in the current issue of the Louisville & Nashville Employes Magazine. The cover of the magazine contains a reproduction of a section of the cyclorama of the painting of the Battle of Atlanta, which is in Grant park.

The first of the three articles heralds the city as "A Monument to Railroads." It is written by Slater Marshall, editor of the City Builder, official publication of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and tells of the good done by the railroad trunk lines operating into Atlanta in the general building up of the city.

The second article concerns the railroad's silver anniversary of service to Atlanta and depicts its growth with that of Atlanta which had at the time the L. & N. began operating here a population of only 100,000. The article is by H. C. Bradford, one of the magazine's division editors. The third article is on "The Spirit of Atlanta," and includes a detailed description of the city's public buildings and beauty spots. It was written by W. C. Matthews, the magazine's agency correspondent here.

Relief Entertainment To Be Held Wednesday

Funds for continuance of the work of the woman's division of the emergency relief committee will be raised with an elaborate program of entertainment Wednesday night at the city auditorium, Mrs. M. H. Margeson, chairman, announced Saturday. Tickets will be on sale at Cox's Prescription shop, Paramount Theater building, beginning today.

The Community theater will contribute a Booth Tarkington playlet, "The Trysting Place," directed by Janet Millis Shepherd. The Emory Glee Club will offer a number, and Oglethorpe University will provide Vaughan Oxmer, tenor, and J. T. Pittman, pianist. The Tech Y. M. C. A. singers will appear on the program, with Miss Frances Croft as accompanist. Mayor Key will welcome the audience. Proceeds will go to the making of garments for children in families of the unemployed.

Atlanta Tax Books To Stay Open Monday

City of Atlanta tax books, scheduled to close today, will be kept open Monday for payment of the first installment of 1932 taxes, it was announced Saturday at the city tax offices.

Saturday was a good day for the city tax collector, more than $250,000 being received during the short time the offices were open. One feature of Saturday's tax payments was the receipt from S. H. Kress & Co. of $1,984, practically all in $1 bills.

Payment of first installment city taxes Monday will entitle taxpayers to the discount of 1 1-2 per cent. The taxes are due in three installments.

Prompt payment of taxes enabled Comptroller B. Graham West to meet Saturday's semi-monthly payroll without borrowing from the banks. Taxes and other receipts made up the $100,000 in salaries.

Graham Jackson and Glee Club To Appear in Concert on May 26

On Thursday night, May 26, one of the greatest programs ever presented in Atlanta by a group of colored artists, will be offered at the auditorium.

It is a benefit for the extra-curricula activities of the Booker T. Washington High school, Atlanta's splendid institution for the education of the young negro citizens. Taking part in the program will be the Washington High Glee Club, numbering 100 fresh young negro voices in the choruses and spirituals that only their race can properly sing. There will also be Graham Jackson, the young colored musician whose organ playing has thrilled the few privileged to hear him in the past and who, on this occasion, will demonstrate his unique technique at the console of the auditorium organ for the benefit of the general public.

There will also be the jazz orchestra of 12 or 15 pieces, which Graham Jackson has created and with which he has won tremendous popularity by playing for dances at the larger private clubs and in the better homes of the city.

The program is offered to help supply the Washington High school with needed funds for the purchase of equipment and necessities that do not come under the listing of things that can properly be supplied by the city. The kind of things that are furnished at most schools by the P.-T. A. They have been so furnished for Washington High, in the past, but now that the depression has arrived, it is difficult for the colored citizens to give as generously as they have in the past.

The auditorium will be divided into sections for white and for colored patrons for the concert on May 26. Prices will be in line with present-day conditions and the best seats in the house, including the boxes, will only be $1. Other seats will be as low as 50 cents for white and 25 cents for colored. Reserved seats will be put on sale for white patrons at the Cable Piano Company several days before the concert while there will be a reserved seat sale for colored at a convenient point.

Graham Jackson has played the organ on a number of occasions at the Fox theater, after the show is over at night, for a few friends. He has also played in several private homes of the city where there are pipe organs installed. Everyone who has heard him has raved about his marvelous ability. He plays everything from the classics to the moaningest blues with a rhythm and sympathy that only has race can create.

His program for May 26 includes several of the lighter classics, the "Rhapsody in Blue," "Poet and Peasant Overture" and the "St. Louis Blues."

Polish Girl Gets Life On Espionage Charge

WARSAW, Poland, May 14.—(AP) Pana Majewska, a dancing girl, was sentenced to life imprisonment today on a charge of espionage "in favor of a neighboring country." The identity of the country was not disclosed, but it was generally believed to be Russia.

Two men alleged to have been in league with the dancer were sentenced to death. They are an engineer named Bonkowski and General Stoff, an employe of the engineer.

Daniel MacDougald New President of Society. New Yorker Speaks.

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—Alumni of the University of Georgia Saturday served notice on opponents of the board of regents that they will stand by the latter in any fight that may be planned upon it in the next Georgia legislature.

The alumni society "extends its congratulations to the board of regents for the work which has been done so far—and extends its wholehearted support and co-operation in all movements looking toward additional improvements in the university system," runs the closing paragraph of a resolution unanimously adopted at the annual meeting here.

Introduced by Harrison Jones, Atlanta, vice president of the Coca-Cola Company, the resolution asserts, on behalf of the alumni society, that creation of the board of regents "was a wise and beneficial piece of legislation," and commends the efforts of the regents to improve the state university system.

The resolution was brought out by Mr. Jones as a result of publication in newspapers last week that what appears to be an organized movement is underway in several communities where branches of the system are located, designed to destroy not only the board of regents, but the state board of control and the state purchasing agency, parts of the reorganization program begun by the present administration. This fight, it was reported, is predicated on belief that some localities will lose political and commercial control of university branches because of the regency which has brought about centralized control of the system.

MacDougald Elected.

The society Saturday elected Daniel MacDougald, Atlanta lawyer, president, succeeding Pope F. Brock, Macon; Barry Wright, Rome; A. O. B. Sparks, Macon, and Lee Morris, Athens, vice presidents; Dr. George S. Smith, Rome, and Charles H. Cox, Atlanta, to the board of managers, three-year term.

A luncheon was given in Dawson hall at 1 p. m. In the afternoon the alumni were guests of the university at the annual horse show on the cavalry field, and at the baseball game between Georgia and Georgia Tech at Sanford park.

The memorials committee presented four portraits of men who have been outstanding in the history of the university. Those remembered by presentation of portraits were Josiah Meigs, first president; Abraham Baldwin, founder; Henry Tucker, past chancellor, and Dr. Crawford W. Long. The portrait of Dr. Long was presented at the observance of National Ether Day, but the memorial committee included it in its report since it was responsible for the presentation. Dr. Phinizy Calhoun, Atlanta, is chairman of this committee. Reproductions of the four portraits are in today's gravure pictorial section of The Constitution.

Portraits Presented.

The first portrait to be presented the university was the large, life-size oil canvas, in a magnificent frame, of Abraham Baldwin, who founded the institution in 1785. This painting, the work of Charles Frederick Naegele, noted Atlanta artist, was the gift of Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun, prominent Atlanta specialist and graduate of Georgia in the class of 1900.

The second portrait to be presented was of Josiah Meigs, the first president of the University of Georgia. It was painted by Lewis Gregg, another well-known Atlanta artist, and was given by Harold Hirsch, Atlanta businessman, who was graduated from the university in 1902.

The third painting to be presented during the alumni meeting in Memorial hall was that of Dr. Henry Holcombe Tucker, who served as second chancellor of the university, and which was painted by the eminent Frenchman, L. M. D. Guillame. The portrait of Dr. Tucker was the gift of his daughter, Mrs. Hunter P. Cooper, of Atlanta.

Dr. Frank K. Boland, prominent Atlanta surgeon and member of the graduating class of 1897, was donor of the fourth portrait—that of Dr. Crawford W. Long, which was unveiled at the university on the occasion of the anniversary of Dr. Long's first use of ether as an anaesthetic. The Long painting, which also was executed by Lewis Gregg, was officially presented to the university as part of the initial presentation exercises of the memorial committee.

The permanent committee on memorials was formed last year for the specific purpose of determining the manner in which former members of the faculty and alumni should be memorialized, and all details of selection of such men as were considered eligible for this honor were left entirely in the committee's discretion. It is composed of Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun, Atlanta, chairman; Federal Judge W. H. Barrett, Augusta; Dr. Craig Barrow, Savannah; Harold Hirsch, Atlanta; John W. Grant, Atlanta; Dr. Ulric B. Phillips, professor of American history at Yale University, and Dr. John D. Wade, professor of English, Vanderbilt University.

Boykin Wright Speaks.

Boykin C. Wright, New York attorney, delivered the annual alumni oration, declaring that in his opinion, "Among all our problems, that of national prohibition calls loudest for clear-thinking and an articulate and insistent public opinion. How much longer," he asked, "shall we persist in this so-called noble experiment which has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that it does not prohibit and never can prohibit?"

Wr. Wright also attacked the tariff, the proposed two-billion-dollar cash payment of the soldiers' bonus and declared that the problem of international relations demands clear-thinking unhampered by emotionalism, prejudice and politics. He said that if material reduction or entire cancellation of debts will help bring about better conditions, then "let us demand that our representatives and our government courageously adopt that solution." His subject was, "Are We On the Road to Recovery."

In its resolution supporting the board of regents, the alumni society pointed out that in December, 1929, the board of managers of the society under the leadership of Dr. Craig Barrow, Savannah, then its president, and Robert B. Troutman, Atlanta, then chairman of the board of managers of the society, created a committee to be known as the alumni committee to survey higher education in Georgia. That committee was composed of Philip Weltner, Atlanta, chairman; Pope F. Brock, Macon, and Gordon C. Carson, Savannah.

Cites Earlier Report.

"At the meeting of the alumni society in June, 1930, this committee, through the board of managers, returned a report to this society. That report, comprehensive and forward-looking, advocated centralized control for the entire university system. In accepting and approving the report the society resolved that it be referred to the trustees of the University of Georgia for their consideration.

"As a result of the interest created by this committee with its recommendations a board of regents for the university system of Georgia was created by the general assembly of Georgia in 1931. This board assumed control of the entire university system on January 1, 1932, and since has proved by the tireless efforts of its members that the act of the general assembly creating the board of regents was a wise and beneficial piece of legislation.

"Be it resolved, therefore, That this society extend their congratulations to the board of regents for the work which has been done so far; and be it further resolved, that this society extend to the board of regents its wholehearted support and co-operation in all movements looking toward additional improvement in the university system."

Four-Legged Chicken Shown at McDonough

McDONOUGH, Ga., May 14.—A four-legged chicken, four weeks old and thriving, was exhibited today by I. J. Cardell, of Henry county. The fowl is a Rhode Island Red and was hatched from an egg laid on Mr. Cardell's farm. All four legs are well-developed. The extra pair is fastened just behind the two normal legs and is not used for locomotion.

DOCTORS OF GEORGIA TO MEET IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—Delegates to the eighty-third annual convention of the Medical Association of Georgia will begin arriving early next week for the three-day meeting, which starts at the Hotel DeSoto on Wednesday. There will, however, be a session of the association house of delegates Tuesday. An attendance of several hundred doctors is anticipated.

Social features of the convention will include dinners for the alumni of the University of Georgia and the Emory University medical schools Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock, and the annual banquet and ball Thursday evening. Dr. John K. Train will preside at the banquet.

Dr. A. A. Morrison is general chairman of arrangements. Dr. R. V. Martin will make the address of welcome, and the response on behalf of the visitors will be by Dr. S. T. R. Revell, of Louisville.

The program of papers and discussions of subjects connected with the science of medicine has been arranged by Dr. James F. Paulin, of Atlanta.

The address by the president, Dr. G. Arthur Fort, of Atlanta, will be delivered at a luncheon on Thursday. His subject will be "The Economic Drift of Modern Medicine." Dr. William R. Dancy will present the Crawford W. Long memorial prize to the winner thereof. Among the visiting speakers will be Dr. Dean Lewis, professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. Dr. G. Y. Moore, of Cuthbert, will preside at the session of the Georgia council for child health and protection, at which the principal speaker will be Dr. W. A. Mulherin, of Augusta.

DISTRICT COMMITTEE MEETS AT MONROE

WINDER, Ga., May 14.—The democratic executive committee of the twenty-seventh senatorial district met at the courthouse in Monroe on Thursday to fix rules and regulations governing the nomination of senator for the district in the September primary. The district is composed of the counties of Barrow, Oconee and Walton, and the members of the committee are W. H. Quarterman and W. M. Holsenbeck, of Barrow; C. C. Parsons and J. H. Langford, of Oconee, and Morris Kelley, H. C. Cox, H. B. Launius and D. M. Pollock, of Walton, with W. H. Quarterman, chairman, and W. M. Holsenbeck, secretary.

This is Barrow's time to furnish the senator. The primary is to extend over the three counties instead of being confined to the county furnishing the senator, as is done in practically every district of the state.

The entrance fee for making the race for nomination is left to the executive committee of each county. H. A. Carithers, of Winder, has already announced, and others mentioned are W. D. Wall, L. M. Arnold, W. M. Holsenbeck, J. W. McWhorter, W. H. Quarterman and J. W. Carrington, mayor of Winder.

REV. ACREE TO ADDRESS GAINESVILLE HIGH

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—The Rev. G. M. Acree will deliver the baccalaureate sermon for the local high school commencement at the First Baptist church. Dr. Acree is pastor of the Methodist church here. His subject will be "Good Citizenship."

Seventy-nine pupils are in the graduating class. Professor W. P. Martin, superintendent of the schools, will be in charge of the service.

Three one-act plays, written and directed by the students, will be given Tuesday evening. This has been designated as "class night." Thursday, May 19, a farce comedy will be presented at Brenau college.

Dr. H. J. Pearce Jr., professor of history of Brenau college, will deliver the baccalaureate address Friday night, May 20, at which time diplomas will be presented.

BALANCED BUDGET IN HOME IS CALLED MOST VITAL NEED

WAYCROSS, Ga., May 14.—"The business fabric as a whole cannot be balanced until the individual units of business reach their balances," said D. N. Stafford, vice president of the First National bank, Friday before the Kiwanis Club.

"The most fundamental unit of business is the home. The home has its business side and it is necessary that each home attend to its business affairs so as to present society as a whole with a well-balanced unit. In the home are two business partners, the husband and the wife. Both must understand the business; the income and the expenditures; the difference between things of necessity and things of desire. It is through the business balance of the home we broaden out into the balanced budget of a nation.

"This year bears evidence that budgets are being balanced. The failure of banks in the southeast has practically ceased, proof that individuals and businesses and homes are getting expenditures within income. England sets the balanced-budget example for all the nations. Truly we are facing facts as facts, learning to accommodate ourselves to facts, and readjusting our affairs in accordance with facts."

DAWSON, Ga., May 14.—The Terrell county board of commissioners, who adopted a program of rigid economy the first of the year, took further steps at their May meeting to reduce the expenses of operating the county government.

The commissioners began in their own board the work of applying the pruning knife to expenditures. The salary of the chairman, which was cut from $1,000 to $700 the first of the year, was reduced by another $100 and the salary of the clerk of the board, which was reduced in January to $30 per month, received another $5 cut.

The salary of the warden and road superintendent was reduced from $200 to $175 per month and that of the courthouse janitor was reduced from $40 to $35 per month.

Under a new ruling adopted by the commissioners at their May meeting the county will pay for only one telephone in the courthouse, this phone to be placed in the lobby for the use of all officials. Those courthouse officials who have telephones in their respective offices will bear the expense of same.

BROTHER-IN-LAW HELD FOR FARMER'S DEATH

CLAXTON, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—C. T. Gordy, farmer living about four miles from Claxton, is dead and Walter Kirby is in jail here charged with murder.

Gordy was killed in a fight with Kirby yesterday afternoon. The men are brothers-in-law and lived near each other. They had some differences brought about by Gordy insisting that Kirby get to work chopping cotton. A dispute arose and ended in a fight in which Gordy was so badly cut with a knife that he died in a few hours. He is survived by a widow and one child. The dead man was 36 years old and Kirby is 26.

The two men lived on the place owned by Mrs. George Kirby. Kirby, who was brought to Claxton and placed in jail, claims he acted in self-defense.

FUNERAL RITES HELD FOR R. RALPH DUNWODY

MACON, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—Funeral services for R. Ralph Dunwody, former secretary-treasurer of the Macon Telegraph Publishing Company, were attended by many friends here today. The services were conducted by Dr. W. R. McKay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

Mr. Dunwody was a Spanish-American War veteran, a Mason, Shriner and a member of the Presbyterian church. Offices of the Macon Telegraph and the Macon News were closed during the hours of the funeral and employes of both papers attended in a body.

Stage Coach Card of 1853 Found As Old West Point School Is Razed

WEST POINT, Ga., May 14.—A time-worn card, found between the joists of the former West Point school building, torn down to give place to a modern dwelling, gives confirmation of the age of the old structure.

January 1, 1853, is the date printed on the card. This fits accurately with local tradition as to the time when the sturdy frame building was erected.

It was a year after the Western of Alabama Railway reached West Point from Montgomery. Not until a year later did the Atlanta and West Point Railroad complete its line to the city.

I. M. Scott, who was one of Ed Sharp's pupils in 1865 in the old school house, remembers hearing the late John R. Scott, his father, tell of the excitement in West Point in 1852 when the first train arrived from Montgomery.

Many of the citizens, including Mr. Scott's father, journeyed to Cusseta, 10 miles away to experience the thrill of speeding back home on the train. The 10-mile journey behind the pioneer locomotive was accomplished in one hour and 30 minutes.

The card, evidently printed in Montgomery, tells of the omnibusses which meet the trains in that city, assuring travelers of a separate bus for each hotel.

One side of the card reads:

"J. R. Powell, long established line of omnibusses, with a separate omnibus for each hotel in the city. Passengers are assured that with us there is no confusion with baggage which sometimes occurs when one omnibus runs to several houses. When you go to Montgomery, call for Powell's regular line. J. L. Ables, agent. We have a stage office at each hotel. (T. H. Reynolds.) January 1, 1853."

The reverse of the card tells of a stage coach service which connects with various points in Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee.

"J. H. Powell & Company's Great Western United States Mail Line. Four and six-horse post coaches leave Montgomery, Ala., daily at 10:30 p. m. on arrival of the express mail train of cars from the east, for Benton, Selma, Marion, Greensboro, Tuscaloosa, Eutaw, Bridgeville, Pickensville, Ala.; to Columbus and Aberdeen, Miss.; thence to Pontotoc, Holly Springs and Memphis; also Tuscumbia and Eastport.

"Tri-weekly line of four-horse coaches leave Greensboro Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays on arrival of Montgomery stage for Livingston, Ala., Herbert and Jackson, Miss., via Withers' Landing and the Fork; avoiding the Prairies almost entirely, and running over the finest natural road in the south. The superior merits of this through route—established at much expense, without the aid of mail pay—can only be appreciated by those who have tried the prairie and flat land routes. J. L. Ables, Exchange hotel; J. E. Simpson, Montgomery Hall; S. H. McMaster."

Three of the cards were placed together on one of the timbers of the old school house, where they remained for 79 years. The influence of the elements made the top and bottom card illegible. Only the center card could be read.

When those cards were deposited Franklin Pierce was president of the United States and Jefferson Davis was his secretary of war. The builder of the old school was Terry Collins, who also built the old Schaefer house and a number of other old West Point buildings. He was the father of E. J. Collins, mayor, and for many years prominent in business and civic affairs here.

The old timbers cut by old time saws from long leaf pine are still good and will be used by J. W. Jones, the owner, in the construction of the modern bungalow which will occupy the old school site.

LAWYERS STAGE RACE TO TIE UP BANK FUND

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—Two groups of lawyers figured in spectacular races this week for court orders to enjoin the state superintendent of banks from paying out funds of the defunct Bank of Thomasville to depositors until the status of the $400,000 estate of the late Arch M. Watson is established.

One group, representing Mrs. Ella Watson, third wife of Watson, legality of whose marriage is being contested, seeks receivership of the property so that Mrs. Watson and her daughter, Gloria, may establish priority claims and obtain annuities. This group got an order from Judge J. E. Thomas at Jesup on May 12 and filed it today.

Judge Roscoe Luke, of the court of appeals, whom Mrs. Watson is seeking to have ousted as executor of the estate, through his attorneys, filed suit against the defunct Bank of Thomasville to set up as a preferred claim this same fund and seeking direction for the administration of the property. This was signed by Judge B. C. Gardner, of the Albany circuit, on May 13 and filed the same day.

It was a race to see which side got precedence and is now a question of law as to where the precedence is. The Luke attorneys got service on the bank first.

ROSE MADE DELEGATE BY G.O.P. 'RUMP' GROUP

MACON, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—In a harmonious session a faction of Georgia republicans met here today, selected 16 delegates to support President Hoover and announced they would carry to the national convention in Chicago their fight for recognition over a slate of delegates chosen at another republican convention in Atlanta last month.

Today's convention was called by several members of the state central committee of 1930 who dissented from the action of the March convention in Atlanta.

A new state central committee was set up with C. E. Donnelly, of Savannah, as chairman, four delegates-at-large and 12 district delegates to the national convention were chosen.

J. G. Lemon, Savannah attorney, and one of the leaders of the convention, said little attention was paid to district lines in selecting district delegates, as the convention was a mass affair with any republican voter permitted to participate in the deliberations.

Although pointing out their intention of refraining from any open fight with the other republican faction, Lemon said the Macon gathering was opposed to any "lily-white" faction in Georgia.

The convention selected Josiah T. Rose, chairman of the opposing state central committee and one of the opposing delegates-at-large, as one of their delegates-at-large. Other delegates-at-large chosen today by acclamation were T. N. Hendricks, Edison; Mamie Williams, Savannah, and J. H. Watson, Albany. The latter two are negroes.

Alternates for the delegates-at-large were D. M. McKee, Moultrie; Frank Doughman, Atlanta; J. L. Grant, Darien, and Dr. R. H. Cobb, Columbus. The latter two are negroes.

The district delegates were chosen as follows:

First District—J. G. Lemon, Savannah, delegate; C. E. Donnelly, Savannah, alternate.

Second—H. H. Nichols, Albany, delegate; M. U. Kent, Montezuma, alternate.

Third—E. J. Williams, Dawson, negro; W. A. McKenzie, Marshallville, alternate.

Fourth—L. B. Toomer, Savannah, delegate; Dr. A. M. Wilkins, Griffin, negro, alternate.

Fifth—B. F. Cofer, Atlanta, negro, delegate; J. B. Parks, Atlanta, alternate.

Sixth—Sol C. Clemons, Macon, negro; Sam Purvis, Macon, alternate.

Seventh—Albert N. Tumlin and Garnett Andrews Jr., delegates; Charles Satterfield and A. T. Atwater, alternates.

Eighth—J. C. Dubignon, Brunswick, delegate; T. C. Williams, Waycross, negro, alternate.

Ninth—T. A. Chastain, Talking Rock; T. W. Morse, Helen, delegates; George A. Curtis and A. M. Kitchens, alternates.

MACONITES TO SPEAK AT COCHRAN COLLEGE

COCHRAN, Ga., May 14.—Two prominent Macon men will be the principal speakers during the commencement exercises of Middle Georgia College here.

Dr. William Mackay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will preach the sermon Sunday morning in the college auditorium. Dr. Mackay is one of the best known preachers in the state.

Dr. Edwin M. Poteat, educator and orator of Mercer University, will deliver the literary address to 75 graduates Monday evening at 8:30 in the auditorium. Dr. Poteat is well known throughout the south for his able and learned addresses and his inspiring sermons. It is expected that 1,200 people, the seating capacity of the auditorium, will hear Dr. Poteat's address.

MARYLAND GIRL CHOSEN AS IDEAL BRENAU STUDENT

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—Miss Dorothea Reynolds, of Hagerstown, Md., has been elected by the student body as "Brenau's Ideal Girl." She will be awarded a cup which was offered by the Nashville (Tenn.) Brenau club to the girl most nearly personifying the president's interpretation of the ideal girl. The president's interpretation is:

"To find satisfaction in being rather than in seeming; to find joy in doing rather than dreaming; to be prepared for service, thereby earning the right to be served; to be pure in heart, vigorous in mind, discreet in action; to love deeply, fear nothing, hate never; to enjoy that freedom which comes from knowledge of the 'Truth;' to be modestly conscious of the limitations of human knowledge and serenely confident of the limitless reaches of human endeavor—this is the ideal of Brenau."

Miss Reynolds is president of the senior class, and her most recent honor is that of May queen. She is also president of Zeta Phi Eta and a member of Alpha Delta social sorority.

Veterinarian Answers Farm Commissioner's Statement on Serum Sales.

Charging Commissioner of Agriculture Eugene Talmadge with misrepresenting the facts which form a basis of the litigation that has resulted over control of the veterinary division of the Georgia department of agriculture, J. M. Sutton, state veterinary, has written a letter replying to statements made by Commissioner Talmadge, as published in The Constitution on May 8. The letter follows:

"When Mr. Talmadge says in his recent published statement: 'What they wanted was to keep me from stopping profiteering on serum,' he deliberately misrepresents the facts which form the basis of the litigation between him and me.

"On February 2, the day the injunction was served, Mr. Talmadge told Colonel Roy Leathers, a member of the general assembly from DeKalb county: 'Roy, I'll spend that $75,000 allocated to the state veterinarian or I'll resign,' to which Mr. Leathers replied: 'Well, Gene, you may have to resign.'

"This is the real cause of litigation between Mr. Talmadge and me.

"Because specific charges of extravagance and illegal expenditure of money were brought and proven against Mr. Talmadge, the general assembly cut his nearly half-million-dollar annual appropriation to $225,000 and set aside $75,000 to the state veterinarian for the operation of his division. This enormous cut in his appropriation forced Mr. Talmadge to reduce the number of his political satellites and he determined to take care of the money ($75,000) appropriated to the state veterinarian. When I refused to acquiesce to this he attempted to discharge me and he wilfully and deliberately held up all salary and expense accounts, though there was plenty of money available to pay every outstanding obligation. He continued this policy of unlawful obstruction even after the injunction, granted by the superior court, had been served on him and wilfully disregarded the final interlocutory order of Judge Jones; he continued these obstruction tactics up to and including the day before the hearing on contempt, on Friday, May 6, 1932.

"Judge Jones, reviewing the case prior to rendering his decision, said: 'The evidence introduced in this case proves conclusively that the defendant, Mr. Talmadge, has deliberately planned and attempted to hamper and destroy the service of the veterinary division. The evidence presented in this court leaves no doubt in my mind that the defendant, Mr. Talmadge, has wilfully, flagrantly and repeatedly disregarded and violated the orders of this court, etc., etc.'

"The judge, very properly, held him in contempt of court.

"I am not a politician, but a veterinarian, primarily interested in performing the duties imposed on me by law; that is, to foster, protect and promote the live stock industry of the state. The general assembly, years ago, determined that politics should not enter into the discharge of the state veterinarian's duty. Both the state veterinarian and the commissioner of agriculture are statutory officers; neither is subordinate to the other; each has separate and specific duties to perform. If Mr. Talmadge will devote as much time to the duties of his office as I am devoting to the duties of my office, he will not have time to run to the newspapers with false statements and will have little or no time to play cheap politics.

"Mr. Talmadge says in his statement: 'What they wanted was to keep me from stopping the profiteering on serums in the state of Georgia. This runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars, and the farmer has to pay it.'

"As a matter of fact, during 1931, less than 3,000,000 c. c. of serum, costing less than $15,000, were used by veterinarians in the employ of the state veterinarian and less than half of this amount was purchased from the Albany Serum Company, which, by the way, is the only serum company in Georgia making serum out of Georgia hogs bought from Georgia farmers at premium prices.

"Since the state has not appropriated money for this purpose, the state veterinarian does not buy nor furnish his men with hog cholera serum. Since I have been in office—July, 1927—it has been the practice for the field veterinarians to keep on hand small supplies of serum and virus, which they buy where they want to and pay for with their own money; the only orders I have ever issued in regard to serum are that it must be furnished to the farmers at cost, plus actual expenses of administration, such as refrigeration, disinfectants, syringe repairs, needles, thermometers, loss of serum due to breakage or virus going out of date, and last, but not least, to take care of occasional bad account or worthless check given to field veterinarians in payment of serum and virus used in hog cholera control service.

"It is easy, reasonably safe and contemptible to cast insinuations; an honest man will only make specific charges against specific individuals in order that the truth or error of his charges may be proven.

"If Mr. Talmadge believes that anyone in the veterinary division is profiteering at the farmers' expense, he will, if he is sincere in his belief, without delay, present the facts to the respective grand juries for investigation and they, if the evidence justifies such course of action, will promptly indict each offender. But Mr. Talmadge will not do this because he knows his charges will not stand the test of the truth.

"Any farmer, believing it to be to his interest to do so, may at any time furnish his own serum. Our field veterinarians, when called on to do so, will administer the serum and virus furnished by the farmer, but he cannot assume responsibility as to the results, since in addition to the condition under which serum is produced, its quality depends very largely on the way it has been handled and kept.

"Under the pretense of an economy program, Mr. Talmadge attempts to make a political issue out of the state veterinarian and his service for his gubernatorial campaign. It's a pity that Mr. Talmadge did not put this noble impulse into practice during the three years prior to his—Mr. Talmadge's—investigation by the senate and house of the last general assembly; during this period, according to the records published in the House and Senate Journal, Mr. Talmadge, his father, and his stepson, collectively, pulled down $40,748.14 of the taxpayers' money for the meager services rendered by them. According to those same records, Mr. Talmadge, during the year 1929, spent a daily average of $12.35 of the taxpayers' money as traveling expenses—for every working day in the year—notwithstanding the fact that he spends most of his time in Atlanta. (See Senate Journal, 1931, pages 758-763.)

"My official record is an open book, one that I am willing to compare with Mr. Talmadge's official record anywhere, at any time, and let the good people whom we both have served be the judges."

EDITORS PLEDGE HELP TO 'TOWARD GEORGIA'

Eighth, Ninth District Press Association Meets in Cornelia.

CORNELIA, Ga., May 14.—Wholehearted support of the Eighth and Ninth District Press Association was pledged to the "Forward Georgia" movement by delegates attending the annual meeting here today.

Roy Le Craw, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, introduced by Jack Williams, of Waycross, president of the Georgia Press Association, told of the aims of the capital civic body in promoting the sale of "Georgia to Georgians."

Editor Williams, of the Waycross Journal-Herald, indorsed the ideals of the "Forward Georgia" movement in behalf of the state editorial group. Each editor present pledged his individual effort to insure its success.

Austin Dean, of the Gainesville Eagle, is president of the association and presided at the business sessions. The host was J. Brien Keiley, publisher of the Northeast Georgian, Cornelia.

Editor Cook, of the Winder News, invited the association to meet in Winder next, and his invitation was accepted.

President Dean was re-elected president of the organization, B. H. Graves, of Clarksville, editor of the Tribune, county advertiser, was elected vice president, and Mrs. B. T. Trawick, of the Commerce (Ga.) News, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

A resolution banning free publicity from national advertisers, unless accompanied by a paid advertising contract, was adopted. Disguised national advertising in the form of news was opposed.

Approximately 35 of the 44 newspapers in the two districts were represented at the meeting.

MRS. E. K. LUMPKIN SR. SUCCUMBS AT ATHENS

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—Mrs. E. K. Lumpin Sr. died tonight at the family residence here from a heart attack. Funeral services had not been announced tonight.

Surviving besides her husband are the following children: Mrs. S. C. Upson, Athens; Mrs. J. K. Walbridge, Sarasota Springs, N. Y.; Mrs. H. C. Todd, New York; E. K. Lumpkin Jr., Richmond, Ind.; Joe H. Lumpkin, Gerdine Lumpkin and Bryan C. Lumpkin, Athens.

Mrs. Lumpkin's maiden name was Mary Bryan Thomas. She was the daughter of Major John G. Thomas, a prominent citizen of Milledgeville, who served in the Civil War. She was educated in Athens, where she married Mr. Lumpkin in 1878.

Mrs. Lumpkin was the organizer of the Ladies' Garden Club in 1891, which later became the Athens Garden Club. It is recognized as the oldest garden club in the United States. She was a member of the Episcopal church. She was president and organizer of the Georgia Iris Society.

The funeral services have not been completed, but burial will be in Athens.

FIVE MACON BUSINESS WOMEN HURT IN CRASH

MACON, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—An automobile containing five women from the Macon Business and Professional Women's Club, en route to Brunswick, overturned when it left the pavement just south of Eastman, Ga., this afternoon.

Miss Marie DuBose, member of the party, was reported seriously injured and was brought to a hospital in this city in an ambulance from Eastman.

The women were en route to aid in the delication of a tablet to Sidney Lanier, tomorrow, when the accident happened.

Mrs. Cora Boterweg, president of the club, and who was to make one of the principal addresses tomorrow, sustained an injury to her arm, but continued on to Brunswick with a party of Atlantans after being taken to Hawkinsville.

Three other women in the party, not seriously hurt, were brought back to Macon.

GRADUATES AT BRENAU TO HEAR JUDGE TERREL

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—Announcement is made today that Judge J. R. Terrel, of Greenville, Ga., has accepted the invitation to deliver the commencement address at Brenau College Conservatory on Monday, May 30, at 11 a. m. in Brenau auditorium. Jurge Terrel, who is judge of the superior court in his district, has had four daughters as students at Brenau, three of whom have already graduated and the fourth and youngest, Miss Pauline Terrel, is now a freshman there.

Girls From Honolulu, Philippines, Canada Tell Why They Attend Brenau College

Some of the students at Brenau college who come from far distant parts of the world and of the nation. Left, in the grass skirts of their home lands, are Betty Bacchus, from the Philippines, and Amy Deas, from Honolulu. In the picture at the right are Beatrice Whiting and Helen Steele, of Ridgewood, N. J., who were at school in Canada when the promise of a warmer climate tempted them to come to the Gainesville institution.

BY TALLU JONES FISH.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—A survey just completed reveals that 36 different states and countries are represented at Brenau College. The report, which was made by Miss Ella De Tong Winfield, head counselor, shows that a large number of the students learned of the excellencies of this famous woman's college through advertising channels. President H. J. Pearce advertises Brenau in the better magazines, the larger newspapers, and through a wide distribution of circulars, bulletins and catalogs.

In the graph made by the committee the next largest classification given was "I wanted to come south." The alumnae played a most important part, too, in directing students to the college, as did the influence of friends. Other features that attracted the attention were the splendid dramatic art department, the famous conservatory, the excellent riding academy, and the fine vocational courses and natural sciences.

The sororities, too, were considered in the graph as one of the great assets to the college, as they are to any college. Many of the students commented on the unexcelled wooded area, Takeda park, where 350 acres are at the disposal of the students for recreational purposes. It contains two lakes, boats, and a bunch of the finny tribe, for the Izaak Waltons. In summer a girls' camp is enjoyed.

"Why did you come to Brenau from so far away?" she was asked, and replied:

"I read about it in a nationally-known magazine and on inquiring further I like it and came." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Deas, and her father is a steamship manager. Her mother is an Englishwoman, and educated in London. She has traveled practically all over the world and stated that it took her 11 days to make the trip from Honolulu to Brenau.

The girls interested in grass skirts asked her about them. She brought one with her to the college and she demonstrated the native dance.

It takes 45 days for Miss Betty Bacchus to go home from Brenau. Her father is an army officer in the Philippines and is now temporarily located in Shanghai. Miss Bacchus will not be able to go home this summer but will attend the university and visit Lieutenant and Mrs. T. L. Dunn, at Fort Benning. Miss Bacchus has lived also in Panama, Honolulu, Porto Rico, New York and New Orleans. She was born in Harbor Springs, Mich.

"I liked the name 'Brenau, as gold refined by fire,'" said Miss Beatrice Whiting, of Ridgewood, N. J., who came to Brenau with 14 other girls from New Jersey. She explained also that she and Miss Helen Steele were attending school in Canada and the weather was so cold they wanted to get just as far south as they could, so they chose Brenau. They are members of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Misses Adelaide and Bert Smith hail from East Aurora, N. Y., made famous by Elbert Hubbard, and his Roycrofters. However, the Smith sisters have attained fame on the campus by their physical prowess. They are Alpha Delta Thetas.

Mississippi has the largest number of students except Georgia, and Miss Catherine Williams said "I came to keep up the family tradition. I am the fourth sister to come to Brenau."

Miss Jekyll Treadway, of St. Maries, Idaho, and a typical western girl, came to Brenau because she admired southern girls, their manners and customs. "I wanted to be like them," she declared.

Miss Treadway lives in the Coeur d'Alene mountains, and she recently presented to the college museum two deer horns. She killed both deer. She has killed cougars, or mountain lions, coyotes and bears, and says "I only brought one pistol with me to Brenau, but I have several at home."

CLOSING DATES, FEES IN CHATHAM PRIMARY

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 14.—(AP)—August 10, at noon will be fixed as the closing date for entries in the state primary on September 14 of candidates for the general assembly from Chatham county and for the Chatham county democratic executive committee, which the county executive committee meets next Tuesday night following the closing of the polls in the county primary.

The committee will promulgate the rules for the state primary in Chatham after consolidating the returns of the county election. David S. Atkinson, chairman of the body, said today.

Closing dates for entries of candidates for congress and state senator will be as fixed by the congressional and senatorial committees of the first district, respectively.

In accordance with the regulations set down by the state democratic executive committee, the county body will set June 3 as the closing date for the qualification of candidates for judge and solicitor-general of the eastern judicial circuit.

The committee will fix the entry fees for the primary in Chatham as follows: Judge, superior court, $300; solicitor-general, $300; representatives in the general assembly, $75 each; congressman, $50.

State house officers will not be assessed locally, while the entry fee for candidates for state senator will be that fixed by the senatorial committee.

CHILD NEAR DEATH WHEN HIT BY TRUCK

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 14.—Evelyn Damon, age 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Damon, was knocked down and perhaps fatally injured by a truck driven by Morven Blackman on River street early this evening. Blackman was later arrested and is being held in custody pending the result of the child's injuries.

Blackman was driving a truck and when passing the home of the Damons he said the little girl ran around a wagon which was ahead of the truck, and that he could not avoid striking her.

Blackman came back to the city, he said, to get a doctor and in the meantime the child was hurried to a local hospital, where it was found that one thigh was broken and that there was a possible fracture of the skull.

Dying Negro Abandoned On Courthouse Lawn

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 14.—County authorities are seeking the identity of a white man who brought a negro, Roy Williams, to this city Wednesday and left him ill and helpless on the courthouse lawn.

Williams was later carried to the home of a negro family where he died and application was made to county authorities to bury the body as a pauper. The negro was unknown here and it is believed he was brought from a turpentine camp in a neighboring county and left on the public here. The county authorities desire to properly punish the person responsible for bringing the man here when he was evidently in a dying condition.

5 ARRESTED IN ROME IN COUNTERFEIT CASE

ROME, Ga., May 14.—Five men are under arrest here today charged with passing counterfeit money, following a round-up made by local police and G. T. Kilner, of the United States department of justice of Atlanta.

The men under arrest are all residents of Rome. They are Cecil and Forrest Craven, brothers, Robert Berry, Reo Dobson and George Griffin House. The ages of the men range from 17 to 30, House being the youngest.

The arrests climaxed a long investigation by authorities. Officers state that the men have been passing spurious dollar coins and that there is a possibility that other arrests may follow. No trace has yet been found of the machinery for making the "bad" coins and whether or not they were manufactured in Rome has not been determined.

A number of the coins were almost perfect, passing through several hands of innocent persons before they were finally detected. Police estimate the coins have been distributed for fully two months.

VALDOSTA HIGH SCHOOL FINAL EXAMS MONDAY

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 14.—Commencement exercises begin at the Valdosta High school Monday morning, with final examinations.

The commencement sermon will be delfered by the Rev. L. R. Scott, of the First Presbyterian church, on Sunday evening, May 28, at the First Methodist church.

The literary address will be delivered on Friday evening, June 3, at the high school auditorium by Dr. A. G. Cleveland, superintendent of the city schools.

PUTNAM BACKS WALL FOR STATE FARM POST

EATONTON, May 14.—A mass meeting held in Putnam county to support the candidacy of J. O. Wall for the position of commissioner of agriculture, unanimously indorsed him. The meeting was largely attended.

A petition, signed by 800 citizens of Putnam county, indorsed the resolutions. L. M. Pennington, mayor of J. O. WALL.

Eatonton, presided at the meeting. Several addresses were made by members of various civic organizations, including the newly elected county commissioners, and by the president of the Kiwanis club, all pledging wholehearted support to Mr. Wall, who states that he will make his formal announcement during the coming week.

The resolutions adopted by the meeting follow:

Whereas, the people of Putnam county madge, commissioner of agriculture for the state of Georgia, having declined to offer for re-election to the position he now holds, it is incumbent upon the people of the state to choose some other citizen for his position, and

Whereas, the people of Putnam county believe that they have in an adopted son a man who can and will administer the department of agriculture with credit to himself and satisfactorily to the citizens of the state, now therefore be it resolved that we, the citizens of Putnam county in mass meeting assembled, do hereby present to the people of Georgia, subject to the democratic primary of September 12, 1932, J. Oscar Wall as a man who is well qualified to properly discharge the duties incident to the agricultural commissionership of Georgia for the following reasons:

First—Born the son of a farmer, and having as a youth attended and in 1896 graduated from an agricultural college, he is by heritage and education well equipped for the business of practical farming. Soon after coming from Baldwin to Putnam county he commenced to farm and gradually increased his operations until he was running more than 60 plows. Giving to this branch of his business his personal supervision, the returns from it in both products produced and net income were under normal conditions eminently satisfactory. He did much experimental farming, seeking better yields from the common variety of plants and new varieties which might be profitably grown by the average farmer.

Second—In addition to his farming interest he was also a warehouseman, a dealer in fertilizer, an operator of public gins and a cotton factor. These varied business operations brought him in direct contact with our farmers and their problems, and in everything that he has done throughout all of the years that we have known him, Oscar Wall has been the outspoken, open and above-board friend of the farmers of Putnam county. Because of his courtesy, fair dealing, generosity in prices paid for farm products, and reasonableness in prices charged for commodities sold by him, he is held in high regard by our people. We believe that he will carry into the agricultural department the same fearless loyalty to the farmers of the state that has marked his dealings with his home folks.

Third—During the more or less recent past Putnam has sent directly from the farm as her representatives in the lower house, E. C. Humber, John T. Dennis, J. T. Humber, John S. Reid, N. C. Walker, R. A. Reid and W. E. Rainey, and as senators from the twenty-eighth senatorial district, J. T. DeJarnette and H. R. DeJarnette and Joe Duke. Georgians who served with them know the type of men they were. To these must be added J. O. Wall, who has been four times elected to represent Putnam county in the general assembly, the last two times without opposition. He has always been placed on the committee on agriculture, again evidencing his abiding interest in farming and farmers. When our highest authorities advocated the use of calcium arsenate as the best means of fighting the boll weevil, and the combination of selfish interest had so increased its price as to make it unobtainable at a reasonable price, Oscar Wall introduced and pushed to its passage a bill setting up $10,000 as a revolving fund to be used by the commissioner of agriculture to break the combination, thereby making it possible for Georgia farmers to obtain this economic life-saver at a fair price, thus saving for them hundreds of thousands of dollars. Again when during the last session of the legislature the farmer members, believing that the agriculture department was being unjustly attacked, united for self-defense as they saw it, J. O. Wall was made chairman of the farm bloc, and under his leadership the matters in hand were so handled as to save the state an enormous expense and the unpleasant notoriety emanating from charges of improper conduct in the department of agriculture, which charges the state authorities have abandoned.

Fourth—As a Spanish War veteran, Mr. Wall is in close sympathy with all of our veterans and has sought at all times to advocate and support such measures as would be to their interest.

Highlights of Week in Savannah

BY W. G. SUTLIVE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 14.—Confederate Veterans and Sons of Confederate Veterans of Savannah are concluding plans for attending the general reunion of Confederate veterans at Richmond early next month.

Dr. William R. Dancy, of this city, it is anticipated, will be elected commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans at the reunion of that organization which is to be held at the same time and in the same city as the reunion of the veterans. Dr. Dancy is now the second in command and it is anticipated he will be promoted.

General William L. Grayson is the Georgia commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans. He is to attend the reunion with members of his staff and a number of attractive Georgia girls whom he has named as maids of honor, attendants, etc. These young ladies come from all sections of the state.

The Confederate reunion proper is to be attended by some well-known Savannahans who are members of the Confederate Veterans' Association. General William Harden, the commander of the state division, is one of those who will go and he is to be accompanied by a delegation of representative Savannahans. It is possible General Peter W. Meldrim, a past state commander, will go with his Georgia comrades, but this has not been definitely announced.

Nurses Graduate.

The hospitals in Savannah have been holding graduating exercises this week. Large classes have been graduated by St. Joseph's and the Savannah hospitals, and on Tuesday of next week there is to be a class graduated by the Oglethorpe sanitarium. The Savannah hospital on Thursday held an interesting service in honor of Florence Nightingale, the trained nurse who is looked upon as the patron saint of the nursing profession.

To Entertain Troops.

Savannah is preparing to take care of some more soldiers. It has been doing this at intervals since the days of the Revolution. It is a great military town and is proud of it. The troops who are now coming are a detachment from the eighth infantry, numbering 16 officers and 336 men. They are en route from Fort Benning to their home post, Charleston, and Mayor Haynes has been asked to arrange quarters for them in Savannah overnight and probably longer. Colonel Sheftall Coleman, of the local infantry regiment, has been asked by the mayor to make the plans for the visiting militia. The visitors will either be billeted in tents in Daffin park or housed in the large military armories of the city.

Rifle Association Frolic.

The Savannah Rifle Association is getting ready for its annual frolic. It announces that its yearly banquet will be held at Bannon Lodge, at Thunderbolt, on next Tuesday night. This is always a gala time with the members of the association, which is one of the livest bodies of its kind in Savannah. The speakers and their toasts are to be H. E. Wilson, "Our Anniversary;" "The Rifleman," Captain M. H. Patten; "Hits and Misses," Stephen N. Harris.

Russia in Transition

An American Newspaperman Sees Russia as It Is Today

gigantic Muscle Shoals plant as a war-time measure. When congress sought to authorize its use for peace-time production the privately owned power interests were strong enough to confine government distribution to the Alabama Power Company at 2 to 4 mills a kilowatt hour. The company in turn retails the power to domestic users at prices ranging from 4 to 13 cents a kilowatt hour. Municipalities which gladly would buy power direct from the government plant are denied that privilege. Opponents of government operation of Muscle Shoals rarely neglect to call the plant a "white elephant."

Mammoth City in the Making.

Russia, under soviet rule, is deliberately building a hydro-electric plant for peacetime purposes on the Dnieper river at Kichkas in the Ukraine. Like Muscle Shoals it is being built with public funds. Instead of being a white elephant it will be a tireless dog on a treadmill, generating power for a series of large primary industries. It will be the nucleus of a socialistic city of a million people. The government promises to sell the power at 1.2 kopecks—6 mills—a kilowatt hour. There will be no capitalization of franchise, no inflation of securities, no exorbitant engineering, legal and financial fees. The profits will accrue to the state.

At Dnieprostroy the bolsheviks have not merely taken a page from the capitalistic book; they have taken entire chapters, but always after carefully editing out the private profit. Progressives in and out of the American congress have insisted that Muscle Shoals under government operation would furnish a yardstick for measuring the rates charged by the electric power industry. At Kichkas, the Dnieprostroy operations will furnish more than a yardstick; they will be models for similar operations throughout the union.

The total cost of the dam, power house, industrial plants and housing will amount to 815,000,000 roubles, more than $400,000,000.

The dam, locks and power plant, now rapidly nearing completion, will cost more than $100,000,000; the industrial plants will cost more than $250,000,000, and the housing scheme calls for expenditures of more than $50,000,000. Russian engineers have estimated that $150,000,000 worth of materials could profitably be bought abroad. It is estimated that the 40,000 workers employed in the industrial plants will require in the near future a socialistic city of 200,000 persons. The plans for this model city are being drawn so that it can be scientifically enlarged to take care of 1,000,000 persons in 1938.

Metals, Chemicals, Cement.

The Dnieprostroy projects gave the soviet planners an opportunity to build a model industrial community on the grandiose scale the Russians love. At Kichkas the Dnieper river, second only to the Volga in European Russia, narrows in a swift, deep channel. Catherine the Great realized that if locks were built around the rapids at Kichkas the rish grain growing regions of northern Ukraine would have an outlet to the Black sea. She did not get around to the installing of the locks. Under the last czar there was talk of building a dam, locks and a hydro-electric plant at the rapids, but nothing came of that.

Lenin had great expectations regarding the electrification of Russia. He was willing to spend hundreds of millions of roubles on various projects throughout the union. When he died, his disciple Stalin carried on the plans. At Dnieprostroy they are materializing and by next year the wheels will be turning.

The power plant will be the heart of the model development. Around it will cluster a combination of industries, which the Russians with their aptness at abbreviations call the "combinat." The principal plant will be a blast steel furnace of 1,050,000 metric tons annual capacity, costing many millions. The other industries include a $45,000,000 aluminum plant of 200,000 tons annual capacity; an $8,000,000 ferro-alloy plant of 105,000 tons capacity; a coke and chemical plant costing $17,000,000 with an annual capacity of 1,413,000 tons; a mechanical repair shop costing $5,000,000; a slag cement plant costing $3,000,000; a fire brick plant costing $4,000,000; a slag brick plant costing $1,5000,000, and a magnesium plant that has not yet been designed.

Three Daily Shifts.

These plants and the new city will require 32,000 of the 850,000-horsepower maximum capacity of the hydro-electric plant. The remaining power will be shipped to the Donetz coal mines and the steel mills of Krivoi Rog. Later some of the power will be used on the nearby farms.

All these industries are being planted on the Zaporozhian plains where five years ago Kichkas was a farming village and the nearest town, Alexandrovsk, eight miles away, had a population of only 36,000. The soviet planners could build from the foundation up. They started from scratch.

The writer arrived at Alexandrovsk, which has been renamed Zaporozhie, at 3:30 a. m., and was driven to the American quarter at Dnieprostroy. The dam was a blaze of lights. Cranes were raising and lowering buckets. Donkey engines were puffing about. Engineers walked around with blue prints. The midnight shift was at work. The job goes on around the clock in eight-hour shifts.

After a few hours' sleep the writer was shown over the dam and power plant by Rockwell Smith, who worked three years in St. Louis with the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad. Smith is in charge of the concrete work on the dam and power house.

Peru Quits Gold To Check Outflow

LIMA, Peru, May 14.—(UP)—Peru has abandoned the gold standard temporarily, it was announced today. The decision to declare the Peruvian sol incontrovertible followed a heavy outflow of gold during the past month which, it was charged in some quarters, was caused by speculators purchasing dollar credits in anticipation of today's developments.

$46,089 RETURNED TO STATE COFFERS BY FARM DIVISION

A return to the state treasury of $46,089.76, representing unused appropriations in the several divisions of the department, was noted by State Auditor Tom Wisdom in the annual audit of the office of Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, filed with Governor Russell Saturday.

Expenses for the department for the year 1931, the audit showed, amounted to $377,758.28. A complete list of salaries and traveling expenses of all employes of the department is recorded in the audit.

Total receipts of the department were $407,847.13. This includes the money withdrawn from the treasury, internal income of $1,433.89, and balances on January 1, 1931, of $1,052.23.

The department collected in various fees a total of $297,097.85. This money was paid into the state treasury.

Greatest expenditures during 1931 were made by the fertilizer inspection division. Its expenses for operation and for laboratory improvements and equipment totalled $131,926. This includes $50,438 in salaries, $19,217 for travel expenses, $13,208 for laboratory supplies and $7,568 for fertilizer tags.

The bureau of markets was the next heaviest spender. Its operation cost $89,960.

MILLS TO AVOID BAN ON RUSSIAN GOODS

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(UP) The treasury does not propose to ban soviet Russian goods from the United States nor urge the adoption of legislation which would result in an embargo.

Secretary of Treasury Ogden Mills has turned down a number of pleas by domestic producers of natural resources asking that Russian goods be barred under the section of the tariff law providing that "products made by enforced or indentured labor shall be excluded if there is sufficient domestic production to meet the demand."

Olo Junior High.

McDONOUGH, Ga., May 14.—Aldene Moss won first honor at Ola Junior High school, and Mildred Shaw was second, it was announced at the closing exercises today. Rev. Ansley C. Moore delivered the literary address and diplomas were issued by Professor G. Ashton Smith to Aldene Moss, Mildred Shaw, Helen Nail, Howard Lee Rivers, Mardelle Hooten, John Turner, Alice Elliott, Ruby Lewis, Loree Piper, Robert English.

"Don Jaime requested that all Carlist followers should support Alfonso XIII after the death of Don Jaime's successor, the present pretender Carlos, who leaves no heirs."

Asked whether Alfonso XIII had issued an appeal to Spaniards to overthrow the republic and restore a constitutional monarchial government, the spokesman said:

"An appeal was made to all loyal Spaniards to rally to the support of the king and Alfonso Carlos and to defend Spain against anarchy, but it was not intended for publication.

"The burnings of old churches and convents which have occurred under the republican regime caused great sorrow to all loyal Spaniards. They all wish to defend Spain against anarchy."

The reconciliation between Alfonso XIII and Alfonso Carlos marked the end of a hundred years' family feud which caused two wars. The feud began in 1830 when King Ferdinand VII, having no male heir, abolished the law prohibiting women from inheriting the throne, so that his daughter Isabella II might have the crown.

His brother Carlos claimed the throne and some of the later Carlists waged bloody wars in vain attempts to drive their relatives off the seat of power.

Excessive Mother - Love Blamed for Delinquency

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—(AP) Excessive mother-love was blamed today by Dr. David M. Levy, of the Institute for Child Guidance, New York, for producing delinquency among children.

Addressing the National Probation Association, which is meeting preliminary to the National Conference on Social Work opening tomorrow night, Dr. Levy declared that "excessive mother-love and indulgent over-protection of the child produce personality traits which lead to delinquent behavior among children."

"The father is an accomplice," he said, "because he gives the mother free rein in the care of the child, allowing the over-protection to go unchecked."

Yogi Alpha Returns!

Because of tremendous demand to have questions answered it has been deemed advisable to resume Yogi Alpha's popular column of questions and answers. Simply address Yogi Alpha, Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

M. R.—The reading you sent me has been of great assistance. Will you please tell me when and where I shall meet my future husband?

Ans.—You will meet your future husband in Savannah when you go there on your vacation the latter part of this coming August.

E. K.—I received your reading some time ago and so far things are turning out just as you said. I refer to the reading all the time. Where will I meet the man I will marry?

Ans.—You will meet the man you will marry in Augusta the early part of July, 1933. You will be living in Augusta at that time.

B. G.—My friend was financially benefited from your reading. Will I take the trip I am thinking seriously of?

Ans.—You will be able to take this trip, but not as soon as you expect. It will be advisable the first part of July, and you will return to Atlanta early in September.

Z. D.—You gave me an astrological reading several years ago and nearly all you told me has come to pass. Is there any paying mineral on my homestead?

Ans.—It seems that there are minerals in small quantities on your homestead, and it would be wise to keep it, as its value will increase during 1932.

M. B.—I have one of your readings and am much pleased with it. How long will I stay where I am, and will I get work again?

Ans.—You will be employed here in about six weeks and the work will be quite steady throughout the balance of this year. You should by all means remain in this city.

A. M.—I find your column very interesting. Will I ever realize anything on this investment I have made?

Ans.—You will realize on this investment, but not until the early part of September, and will receive fair returns from that time on.

H. E.—I have been reading your forecast and think it wonderful. Will you please tell me if I will have steady work this year, and will I prosper?

Ans.—You will have fairly steady work this year, and will find it profitable to remain in Georgia.

A. C.—I am very interested in your column. Will our finances be any better this year, and when will we leave the valley?

Ans.—Your husband will get a business connection in Atlanta about the middle of July and this will make it possible for you to move to the city to live. This new arrangement will be much more satisfactory than living in the country.

L. M.—I take the Atlanta paper and am interested in your work. Where will I find a good, steady job?

Ans.—Your work between now and the summertime will be more or less unsteady, but you will be successful in finding steady work in your own line the first part of July.

D. A.—I have been a constant reader of your column and am well pleased. Will you please tell me when I shall marry, and when will I meet her?

Ans.—You will meet the person you will marry in Atlanta early this coming October and marry here in March of next year. Your business connection will be in the city and you will make it your permanent residence.

M. P.—I have been reading your forecasts and they are wonderful. Will my two sisters, who went away two years ago, ever come back to Atlanta?

Ans.—These sisters are at present living in the city of Savannah, and each has a fairly good position there. They will come back to Atlanta on their vacation the latter part of this coming July.

M. A.—I have been reading your column and am very interested. Will you please tell me if I will ever go to Mexico City, and when?

Ans.—You will be able to make the trip to Mexico City the first part of August of this year, and this will prove to be of financial benefit to you, as well as recreation.

A. W.—I have been reading your forecast and am interested in it, and think it is wonderful. Will you please tell me how soon I will go west?

Ans.—You will make the trip west, leaving Atlanta about the middle of July, and will spend the summer on the Pacific coast. You will, however, return to Atlanta in September.

PERMANENT RELIEF NEEDED.

The opportunity presented by the back-to-the-farm movement to put unemployment relief on a permanent basis is stressed by W. M. Hicks, general manager of the Sterchi Brothers' Stores, in a communication appearing on the opposite page. In another communication on the same subject, Dr. Wiley King, of Atlanta, stresses the renewed opportunity of prosperity offered by the farm as the result of the change in rural conditions.

The diversion of state highway funds suggested by Mr. Hicks is not now feasible since that could be authorized only by general assembly, but no such barrier exists with regard to support of the back-to-the-farm movement by the federal government.

Congress now has before it unemployment measures calling for the appropriation of millions of dollars. If this money is appropriated certainly a portion of it should be made available for the back-to-the-farm movement.

In many communities throughout the country groups of families dependent for months upon public charity have been set up on abandoned farms, where they have become independent of further aid, and where, at best, they have found shelter and food.

Thousands of families now dependent upon public bounty for food and shelter could be supplied with sufficient ground upon which to raise all necessary food, a suitable dwelling and the necessary equipment for little more than it takes to support them now in the city. The government could protect its investment by retaining title to the land and equipment, giving these new home owners opportunity to purchase on long terms.

Cities would be relieved of a large part of the burden they are now bearing in the care of the unemployed, the value of farm lands would be enhanced, and villages and towns would be benefited by the increased rural population around them.

We must have a better balance as between urban and rural life and the back-to-the-farm method of relief for the unemployed offers an ideal opportunity to achieve that end.

China collects taxes years in advance. The United States spend 'em years in advance, and then takes a long chance on collecting them.

ALDERMAN MILLICAN RIGHT.

Alderman Everett Millican should be successful in his effort to obtain from council an appropriation which will make possible a supervised program of recreation at the larger city playgrounds during the coming summer.

While it is necessary to guard carefully the expenses of the city government at this time, the amount needed for this program is so small and its benefits will affect so directly the mass of the people that there will undoubtedly be general approval of his position.

The soundness of the suggested appropriation is assured by the support of so conservative a member of council as Alderman Millican. He is one of the most valuable members of council and his entire service has been marked by the demand that full return should be received for every municipal dollar spent.

No member of council labored more efficiently and faithfully towards balancing the present budget and he has been a stalwart champion of safe and sane administration at all times. He knows the full necessity for economy at this time and his record proves that he would not favor the special appropriation for the parks unless a maximum benefit for the masses were assured.

For years each summer has seen the city's playgrounds thronged from early morning until darkness with children, many of whom would otherwise be playing in the streets. Unemployment conditions now existing will cause these throngs to be increased and the need for supervision will accordingly be greater.

The appropriation asked is small, only about half of the $7,500 spent last year, and council should, in some way, provide it.

William Allen White says the country is stiff from fright. Not altogether, Mr. White—its upper lip isn't stiff.

DEATH ROBS LIFE OF ITS STING.

Gone forever is the Eaglet from the nest where once he was cradled, and at rest is the broken little body. But his spirit, freed from its mortal frame, is one with eternity and his memory will be cherished in every heart that has known love or sorrow.

Grief-stricken are the youthful parents, all too-cruelly tried, but their anguish is no longer filled with the terror of an uncertainty which for weeks has tortured with the despair of doubt or tantalized with the joy of hope.

No longer crushed by harassing anxiety, Charles and Anne Lindbergh cannot but find, in the sad certainty so suddenly revealed to them, a balm for the poignant suffering which has burdened their brave young hearts. No longer now are their aching, empty arms extended toward every whispered word or vaguest rumor. And if their arms be empty until some happier day, their souls can find a comfort in the knowledge that death has taken the sting of life from their tragic experience. For the dramatic finding of their slain son has saved them from harrowing hours and devastating days in the years to come.

Death is kinder than life when life arouses hopes which are hopeless of fulfillment or afflicts the helpless with burdens too great for their strength. For when Death clasped the Eaglet to his breast, he removed the doubt and despair which had fallen like a pall on the Lindbergh home.

With the passing years, Charles and Anne will find new comfort when they discover, as many, many others have whose first-born fell asleep in childhood, that the Eaglet will be to them eternally their little one. Other children will come to bless them, but these others will grow into men and women, with their own joys and sorrows, and leave the family circle.

But never the Eaglet. In the hearts of his now stricken father and mother he will ever be the lovely child who never grew up. In their thoughts and in their dreams, these two will live their youth again with this child, forever young, on whom they lavished their love and their grief. His little hands will never leave theirs, and his little head will nestle always on their shoulders. He will be enshrined in their love and their memory—the child who was lost and never left them.

A politician asks, "What is the worse thing that can happen to this country?" Gosh, hasn't it already happened?

WHERE HIGHWAY DOLLAR GOES.

A recent report by the bureau of public roads of the federal department of agriculture presents figures showing the wide distribution of money spent in highway development.

The report traces the highway dollar through the various industries effected and figures the per cent paid for wages and salaries both for actual work on the highways and for labor in the factories and mines from which materials are secured. Since the materials with which highways are constructed are of little value in their original state, a large portion of the expenditures for roads goes into the pockets of workmen.

Cement producers, steel mines, mills and equipment manufacturers benefit, while banks and investment brokers profit through necessary financing and the sale of bonds. Insurance companies secure business of various kinds in connection with highway construction.

Railroads secure a large revenue from hauling the component parts of the materials and the later shipment of the finished materials.

Although job labor receives only a little more than 15 per cent of the sum expended on the construction of a concrete pavement, the labor involved in producing the materials of which such pavements are constructed, in transportation and in obtaining the necessary fuel is so large that the distribution to salaries and wages on account of these phases of highway building is well in excess of half the total cost.

The bureau finds that between 80 and 85 per cent of the total expenditures for road construction at the present time may be directly traced into the hands of labor.

"Beyond this," the report continues, "there is still to be considered the fact that a part of the money paid to owners is immediately reinvested or expended, and since of the money so reinvested in productive industry labor again receives the major part, it is not unreasonable to suggest that as much as 90 per cent, and probably more, of the original expenditure for a concrete pavement ultimately finds its way into wages and salaries."

It would seem that this over-reduction of prices should remedy the over-production of commodities.

LEGISLATIVE WHEEL-HORSES.

Announcement that former Councilman Wiley L. Moore will consent to stand for the state senate from this district gives opportunity to the voters to send to the upper house of the general assembly a man of outstanding and conservative business ability and of long and meritorious public service.

As chairman of the finance committee of council Mr. Moore took the first step in years toward having the city operate within its revenue. His entire service in council was marked by a sound grasp of public problems.

He is the type of businessman that the state needs in public office, especially at a time like this, and he probably will not, and should not, have opposition.

Representative Luther Still, who contemplated asking for promotion to the senate after a long and creditable service in the house, has, in deference to the wishes of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, of which he is an outstanding member, consented to again offer to succeed himself in the house.

It is customary for labor to be accorded one of the three representatives from Fulton county and certainly no man of wider legislative experience than Mr. Still could be chosen. He has made an excellent record, ranks high on all committee appointments, and an outstanding feature of his legislative career is that while just to labor his conservatism has won for him the confidence of the business interests of the city. His record justifies the belief that he will be named as his own successor.

Pity the poor college graduate of 1929, who started in at the bottom of business and went down.

THE IMPOTENT NICKEL.

There is no doubt that the purchasing power of the dollar is mightier than at any time since the World War. Even the most confirmed calamity howler will concede the truth of such a contention. In monetary value and economic soundness the American dollar today will purchase more essentials of life and at the same time bear the brunt of insidious foreign exchange manipulation to a far greater extent than any other unit of barter in the world. As an integral unit the United States "cartwheel" or "greenback" is powerful and invulnerable.

Divided into its equivalent in "change," however, the American dollar loses strength. Its half, its quarter and its tenth do not maintain the relative strength of the whole in daily trade. And, reduced to the low estate of the nickel, the dollar is somewhat like a regiment of shock troops scattered over a 20-mile front.

Shaken from its popularity by the World War, the lowly nickel has never been the same individual coin it was prior to the European calamity which produced the purse-sapping war tax, removing the welcoming 5-cent price tag from thousands of articles as essential to the American home as the ordinary, bulkier staples of every-day life. It banished the 5-cent cigar and the economical nickel package of cigarets. It routed the nickel price tag from the humble bar of soap and boosted the price of a scoop of ice cream. It necessitated the "breaking" of the dime before a householder could go to town by street car. Once so important in the eyes of children, who could find dozens of exciting uses for the occasional nickel they importuned from fathers and mothers, it was placed in ridicule even in the eyes of youngest America, and a dime became, in their estimation, the smallest dependable unit of coinage.

Now the dollar is back to its pre-war level in purchasing power. But the nickel is still only a shame-faced little coin with a tiny voice on the market, unable to demand, of its unaided power, but a few desirable commodities in trade. With the dollar able to command astonishing values—even greater, perhaps, than at any time in the last two decades, the nickel has been forgotten still by those who sell.

Where is the 5-cent ice cream soda? On drug store and confectioners' price lists it can not be discovered for less than 10 cents, and in most places it is offered at 15 and 20 cents. A bar of ordinary toilet soap can no longer be bought for a nickel. Grocers offer it at 7 and 8 cents, and the corner drug store at 10. There is no standard loaf of bread to be had for a nickel, though the warehouses and elevators bulge with unused golden wheat and children in squalid tenements cry because they are hungry. The cheapest plug of tobacco does not recognize the nickel, but has arrogated to itself a higher plane of importance. The 5-cent sandwich has disappeared, the street car ride has scorned the nickel fare, and the milkman must have 7 cents for a pint of milk—while fresh country eggs sell for 15 cents a dozen.

The impotence of the nickel well represents the attitude of Americans facing the depression: They are willing enough to abide by the greater purchasing power of the dollar, consent to wage-reduction on a general scale, reducing living to a standard of essential luxury. But in the smaller matters, the pinching here and there off the corners of luxury and the habit of modest thrift are alien to their customs. So they go on, attempting to meet 1914 conditions with 1932 ideas of economy, most of which are influenced strongly by memories of 1929 prosperity, and the result is that they defeat their own purpose.

What the country needs is not so much a good 5-cent cigar, but a return to nickel consciousness.

A politician complains that there are too few conservatives. And we complain that there's not so much left to conserve.

NATIONAL COTTON WEEK.

Twenty-five thousand retail merchants of the United States will this week spend more than $2,000,000 in advertising cotton products, incident to the nationwide observation of the second anniversary of National Cotton Week.

Retailers large and small, including department stores, men's and women's apparel shops, drug, grocery and specialty stores, will participate in the drive to make America more conscious of the benefits to be derived from an increased use of articles wholly, or partly, made from cotton.

Every interest of the cotton industry is co-operating and the movement is receiving the joint effort and financial support of cotton farmers, shippers, manufacturers, finishers, converters, selling agents, wholesalers and retailers.

President George A. Sloan, of the Cotton Textile Institute, in emphasizing the broad field presented for the increased use of cotton, comments that there are—

Nine hundred and thirty-two major uses and there are countless additional articles of manufacture in which cotton plays some part. Saturate cotton with nitric and sulphuric acid and it becomes a violent explosive. Spin cotton into thread and it can be woven into cloth of spider-web fineness. Believe it or not, cotton insulated containers are used to keep dry ice cold! And cotton overcoats are used to keep mohair goats warm in spite of their natural coat of wool!

Tire manufacturers spend as much money for the heavy cotton fabric used in tires as they do for the rubber which encases it. At the same time cotton fabrics of special construction are used advantageously in the construction and improvement of automobile roads. The rapid development of aviation is opening entirely new fields for cotton. Parachutes of cotton, highway markers, flying suits, covering for fuselage and wings, compressed cotton for propellers — the great U. S. S. Akron is covered with a silvery envelope of cotton and its inner gas cells as well are made of cotton. Furniture castors as well as upholstery are made of cotton. Many acres of so-called shade-grown tobacco are covered by tents of cotton.

Increased use of cotton must be the basis of the solution of the problem now faced by grower, broker and spinner and no effort should be left undone to make the country more cotton-conscious.

Especially in the south should there be full participation in National Cotton Week. The cotton trade is the foundation of our agriculture, commercial and financial structures and if cotton is not prosperous they cannot be.

Every retail store in the south should bring its cotton goods of every kind to the front during this week, and attract buyers for them through liberal use of advertising. By aiding the cotton industry they will be aiding themselves, and in bringing about a greater use of articles made of cotton they will be serving their patrons by creating a wider knowledge of the superior suitability and adaptability of cotton for many uses for which other materials are now being used.

The trouble seems to be that we can't expand without blowing up and can't deflate without becoming flat.

We see no cause for optimism in the constantly repeated statement that the depression can not last always. Neither can we.

A number of businesses which were going concerns several months ago have gone.

Because a lot of smokers do not own a roll these days, they're rolling their own.

Soviets Threaten World Catastrophe.

Noted European Diplomat Thinks Europe and America Must Choose Soon Between Liberty or Slavery.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

GENEVA, May 14.—Soviet Russia is a subject that cannot be ignored. The implications resulting from the transformation of a fifth part of the habitable globe into a socialist state are forcing men in all walks of life to pay close attention and to take a stand either for or against the experiment.

In the western hemisphere the subject of Russia may still seem distant and remote. But there is no Atlantic ocean between Germany and Russia and the journey from Paris to Moscow takes less time than the New York-Chicago trip. To Europeans the soviet union is like a next-door neighbor, who is building a big house and who is making the chips and mortar fly all over his neighbor's stoop, veranda and vegetable garden. That is the difference.

Count Koudenhove-Kalergi, the tireless champion of a Pan-Europe, a federation of all European states, from whom Briand borrowed his idea of a United States of Europe, is one of the most interesting figures of the continent. He is the confidant of half a dozen prime ministers and foreign secretaries. No important international conference takes place without his presence. He is always hovering in the wings, so to speak, frequently in conference and even more often sought out for his opinion on important decisions to be made.

I found the count in a reflective mood. "What is the most important problem facing the nations?"

"It isn't disarmament, although that is very important," he said. "The most important thing is soviet Russia. I sincerely believe that Europe is on the verge of a tremendous catastrophe.

"Russia is systematically and inexorably digging the grave for our entire economic and political fabric. Communism is perfecting its armory, the rest of Europe does nothing. It forges ahead economically, for the five-year plan, it must be admitted now, is a success. What have we done in the meantime? We have done nothing. Russia completed that plan in four years instead of five. The League of Nations couldn't even find the money to build a new palace in the same time.

"We must come to realize that we are face to face with a formidable adversary. If the nations do not wake up we will discover some day, and it will not be so long at that, that the only thing left to do is to let the soviets take over the running of the old continent. All we do is scheme and quarrel and think of election results. It's the same in France, in Germany, all over.

"The soviets are working, orderly, systematically. They have managed to inspire the vast millions in their territory with a tremendous inspiration which is called hope. We, on the other hand, are rapidly losing hope. Stalin is giving us a great example. What are we going to do in the face of Russia, surrender of resist? That's the question that is facing our statesmen.

"And this does not solely apply to Europe. America and the British empire are equally deeply involved. It's one thing or the other: Liberty or slavery, despotism or human dignity.

"We haven't long to make up our minds now. Just a few more years. Later the game will be lost, irremediably and irreparably. For the soviets are preparing themselves for the final struggle.

"And what does Europe do, and Britain and America? Are they preparing, too? No," said the count, "they are asleep! They don't see the danger."

Count Koudenhove then reviewed as he saw the development of the soviet union. First there was a hope that the revolution would sweep beyond the borders of Russia and set the entire world aflame. This expectation failed to materialize.

The next step was intensive propaganda. This did not work either. Agitators were promptly squelched. Communist literature was confiscated. The party was made illegal in several countries. There was no progress for the red doctrines in that direction.

Then a new scheme was devised. It was this: Russia went to work.

"No need today of sending propagandists all over the world. Observers flock to the soviet union. They see Russia at work. They write about it. The soviets furnish them with statistics. Statistics enjoy an infallible reputation in the world at large, especially among Anglo-Saxons. Every new collective farm started in Russia is a piece of propaganda far more effective than reams of articles and volumes of critical survey.

"The five-year plan, gigantic as it is and virtually completed at the present moment, is the greatest piece of propaganda Stalin ever put over. It has staggered the human mind, bludgeoned the critical intellect of our economists and sociologists."

"If it is a great thing as you say, what's your objection to the soviets?" I asked.

"My objection is that it was accomplished at the cost of enslaving millions of human beings," he replied.

Thinks Congress Has No Right To Pass Upon Tariff

Editor Constitution, Dear Sir: I notice the Constitutionality of the flexible tariff is being litigated. It will be interesting to see how the brilliant minds of Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Roberts and Cardozo react to this proposition.

It always seemed to the writer that there was no such thing as a tariff tax which would equal the cost of production at home and abroad, as soon as you deal (as you always must) with a multitude of producers all producing at different costs, or deal with his products and joint products the separate costs of making which can not be determined. In other words "cost difference" is not merely difficult to find but impossible to find.

We seem fond of dealing with unreal, mystical things nowadays.

How can a policy of government be constitutionally delegated to do something which actually can not be accomplished. As the findings are merely guesses in the dark they can not truthfully be said to carry out a policy of government.

In reality, therefore, the tariff commission must determine the policy of their findings instead of congress. That is plainly executive legislation which the constitution forbids.

My Note-Book

Thomas Craven writes in Scribner's Magazine: "It is not enough that the painter, equipped with a technical apparatus manufactured in Europe, should sit before an object and record it in the manner of the camera."

Mr. Craven says, in effect, that it is possible for a painter to sit before an object and record all of the lines, planes and surfaces of that object with the veracity and comprehension of a modern camera.

Eleven biographical works, for and against, have been written about Herbert Clark Hoover. Eight books interpretative of Henry Ford are available for those who wish to read about the flivver king. Each of these books is a memorandum giving the viewpoint of one man. Two of the books about Hoover might have been written by blackmailers.

The latest appraisal of Ford begins and ends with a prejudiced argument against him, with six of the leading episodes of Ford's life falsely proportioned. In one of the episodes the author makes a bully yarn, leaving out essential details which would blur the picture. In another episode he leaves out essential facts which, on the face of the narrative, he is unaware of.

I know three men who could make out a much worse case against Ford, if that is what the public wants. Few who have written about him have sufficiently studied his remark, "Words are a camouflage for what is going on in the mind."

Ford is as elusive as greased lightning or a greased pig. No two-cylinder biographer can sneak up on an eight-cylinder mechanic.

Some of the fast copy boys do not realize that an American billionaire is as lonely as Stalin or Mussolini, or that a Dempsey-Tunney contest is a cheap fight to witness in points of powerful punches and quick thinking as compared with the daily, hourly, unending combat between Ford and General Motors.

I have been through six biographies and sixty sketches of Ford. Of these the best measure of his personality was taken in an article in Mencken's "Mercury," titled "The Case Against Henry Ford."

When Ford said, "What do I care about Napoleon? History is Bunk!" he may have been paraphrasing Voltaire's remark, "History is a fable agreed upon."

Van Wyck Brooks' "Emerson" is a human and lovable portrait of one of the great Americans. The prophet comes off the pedestal and becomes a good next-door neighbor lighted by many strange lanterns. There is no arguing. We get Emerson very much as though we, too, raised apples in Concord, Mass., and carried armfuls of wood from the wood pile to the stoves in the houses.

A Georgia Spring

I went up to the hills today,
I fancied that their purple peace
Would ease this tearing ache for you—
Give some small measure of release.

Skies were blue as tropic water,
As your eyes seen now in memory.
Birds trilled forth their wooing love calls,
O, lovely, liquid taunts to me!

Mid bursting bud and mating music,
I stood ungiving, unrenewed.
Last spring our hearts beat together
In surrender to this joyous mood.

The parson says that you are glad
To be away: can this be true?
You left love and spring in Georgia
What has heaven to offer you?

The Law of Growth

Living in a machine age inevitably tends to make us think in terms of manufacturing. We want results, and want them quickly and in quantity. This is all right in the factory, but when we attempt to carry over this attitude into the home, the schoolhouse, and the church, its effect is tragic. We must learn the essential difference between the commercial and the social realms—the difference between material and spiritual objectives—in order to understand how radically different our methods must be. In the comercial world the task is to make things, while in the social world the purpose is to grow ideas. In the commercial world we are dealing with wood, stone, metals, and other material things. In the social world we are dealing with ideas and sentiments, motives and affections.

It was for this reason that Jesus of Nazareth, the greatest of all social teachers, when he desired to establish a spiritual kingdom on earth, adopted the method of seed-sowing. He was constantly explaining both his social ideal and his method for realizing it, in terms of the planting and the growth of seed. His kingdom is a seed thought planted in the spirit of a man, where it takes root in the convictions, the sentiments and the affections.

The Principle.

And being a seed, it is subject to the laws of growth. He illustrates with the picture of the farmer, who has planted and cultivated, and who is now waiting. Patiently but expectantly he watches for the first verdant promise of his harvest. After a while there appears the tiny tint of green, then, after long waiting, the immature ear, and then comes the fruit of patience in the full corn. It means a faith which will constantly and intelligently plant the truth in the minds of men, and after carefully cultivating these implanted ideas, will be able to wait in controlled confidence for the harvest.

How we do need this attitude in our social tasks. We must have a willingness to wait, born out of our faith in the vitality of ideas. We need to be free from that nervous impatience, which seeks for the harvest the morning after the planting of the seed, and a patience and sympathy with immaturity. One who gets this standpoint will deal more intelligently and successfully with the social conditions around him. If he desires to right a wrong, alleviate some social suffering, advance a great cause, he will understand that he must plant his seed ideas, and then wait for them to root themselves in the understanding and convictions of the people, before he can see the results of his labors. We are too prone to seek to manufacture social results by organic mechanism, or to secure them by the force of group control. Often our impatience has sent us into the field to reap a harvest of green leaves or immature fruit.

Each of us may study this principle in his own experience. Some day a truth is intellectually accepted by your reason. It is abstract, without any particular application to your daily decisions. It lies dormant in your mind, until one day it awakens in questioning challenge, in some business decision. You yield to its conviction, and act upon its principle. Now the same truth reveals itself in some social question, or fronts you in the home, or in the political realm of life. How slowly it grows and takes possession of your entire personality.

Its Application.

Take the great, big, revolutionary idea that God is Father of all men, and all men are brothers. Most of us accept it as an abstract, intellectual truth, but how slowly and imperceptibly it finds any vital expression in our lives. It would be folly to challenge the sincerity of one's belief in the idea, because of the immature growth of its ideal in his life. This will explain many inconsistencies in people whom we are tempted to call hypocrites. A man so often professes loyalty to some high ideal, and expresses it in one relation of life, while utterly denying it in another. The truth is that the acceptance of an ideal is only the beginning—the planting of a seed. The working out of that ideal in terms of daily decisions and conduct, in all the varied experiences of life, is the slow process of the growth of life itself.

Now this same principle of growth applies to society, as well as to the individual. We are prone to forget that society is not only made up of the sum total of its individual members, but it is the complicated relationships and reactions of those individuals to each other. So our best service to society will not be accomplished by manufacturing methods, nor by those sporadic revivals, which seek to blast out results, as if we were mining. It must be by the sowing of seed, "in season and out of season." There will be progress but by the slow law of growth. And from this standpoint there is not a hopeless individual nor a hopeless situation in any community. "In due season we shall reap, if we faint not." "God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Thinks Russell's Decision To Stay in Senatorial Race Will Be Widely Regretted

Editor Constitution: The declination of Governor Russell to accede to the request of numerous friends and supporters to withdraw his candidacy for the senate and again stand for the governorship is cause for serious regret to them, as well as to the supporters of Congressman Crisp.

Here was an illustration—and the first, by the way, in many moons of the adage that the office should seek the man—not the man he office; and it was for the dual reason that the public feel Russell has made a good executive, though has not yet carried out all the pledges and reforms to which he originally committed himself, but which they desired to give him the opportunity of doing.

The attitude of Governor Russell will prove a matter of deep regret to the state generally—inevitably alienating the support of many of his erstwhile political friends; for they will construe it as putting political ambition above political duty; and feel that he has failed to heed the admonition, given centuries past by the Bard of Avon: "Cromwell, I charge thee, put away ambition. By this sin fell the angels. How can man, then, hope to prosper by it?"

In the candidacy of Congressman Crisp the people have an opportunity, which they will readily and gladly utilize, of honoring a man who, for more than a quarter century has served them with rare and distinguished ability—honoring them as they have honored him; and in the attainment of the position now sought, will have the opportunity to serve them in a far larger field, and in a much broader way than he has hitherto done.

It is no idle flattery, nor so intended, to say that for a number of years Crisp has been not merely a national, but an international, figure who possesses, and is exercising, great influence for good, and the advancement of the best interests of humanity. Georgia is to be congratulated upon the fact that she now has an opportunity to secure his services in the broader and higher arena to which he aspires; and to which the sense of duty, the pride and self-interest of the people will see that he attains.

The Weaver

Fair Spring, the magic weaver,
In a loom of silver dew
Wove a mist of jeweled veiling
Softly draping twilight blue.

A wild, young wind of evening
In abandonment of care
Tore the fragile veiling
Casting jewels everywhere.

Peach trees found pink corals
Entwined within their hair,
Pear trees gathered diamonds,
Pearls, and emeralds to wear.

Earth awoke in sparkling robes,
The young wind fled, I'm told—
The weaver moved her shuttles
Lacing hours with threads of gold.

Virginia Balances Budget By Sweeping Reductions Of Expenses for 1932-34

Appropriations Cut Ten Per Cent Despite Agreement To Relieve Counties of All Road Construction and Maintenance Costs.

RICHMOND, Va., May 14.—While numerous other states are facing large deficits and can offer little hope of tax reduction, Virginia has balanced her budget for 1932-34, cut appropriations for that period almost 10 per cent, and by agreeing to assume construction and maintenance of all county roads has given her counties opportunity to reduce total property taxes as much as 20 per cent.

The comparative stability of Virginia's finaces dates from her governmental reorganization, which has been largely effected since 1926 under the leadership of former Governor Byrd.

Chief among the changes in Virginia's financial set-up during this period are the segregation taxation plan, whereby all taxes on real estate and tangible personal property with the exception of rolling stock of steam railroads are segregated for use by localities, with the state taxing incomes and intangible personal property; the Byrd plan taking over county roads into a secondary state system and thus offering to the counties the possibility of reducing local land levies by approximately $3,250,000; the increasing tendency to give greater state aid to schools, and the reduction of the present biennial appropriations of $98,080,391 to the 1932-34 appropriations of $80,640,463.

The 9.47 per cent reduction in state appropriations was made by the recent general assembly in response to a general demand of the Virginia electorate for decreased governmental expenditures and to Governor Pollard's legislative slogan: "Reduce expenses; increase no taxes."

Most immediate of Virginia's tax reforms is the Byrd road plan. If all the counties avail themselves of the opportunities afforded by the new road law, which is effective July 1, local property taxes should be reduced by an amount approximating $3,250,000, which is equivalent to a reduction of 20 per cent in the total property taxes now imposed in the counties.

Cuts in Local Property Tax.

While the increased state aid for schools, another major accomplishment of the 1932 general assembly, will not automatically cut local taxes, the possibility will be opened for reductions in local property taxes. To what extent the localities will avail themselves of this opportunity must depend upon the action of local officials charged with establishing local tax rates.

In the case of many localities which have in the last year been unable to balance their budgets, the increased state aid will simply mean an alleviation of the pressure of deficits resulting from increased delinquency in local tax collections.

Whatever the final effects of tax relief legislation as adopted by the 1932 legislature, no local taxes will be increased, in the majority of counties they will be noticeably decreased, and county schools will not have their terms shortened through inability of localities to support an eight-month school year.

Virginia's state government, which has been paying about 23 per cent of the total public school costs—a figure considerably in excess of the average for the United States—has increased its appropriations for elementary and secondary schools for the biennium 1932-34 from $14,706,186 to $15,569,055.

The general educational fund, distributable on the basis of school population, has been increased $400,000 for the coming biennium, and the equalization fund for the second year was increased by $500,000 beyond the amount provided for the current year.

In the increase in state aid to schools and roads no state taxes were increased. All state services will be maintained, but the localities, also continuing their regular governmental operations, will be allowed to reduce the most direct of all taxes, those on land and tangible personal property.

Status Constantly Improved.

The majority of these developments have either directly or indirectly grown out of the segregation plan of taxation which became effective in 1927. Since that time Virginia's financial status has constantly improved, and there have been at least four distinct developments which have operated to alleviate the burdens of taxation on real property.

1. Immediately upon adoption of segregation, property owners were relieved of a tax burden of $1,857,193 through the repeal of the 25-cent state tax. The annual net saving to such taxpayers since the adoption of this plan has exceeded $1,250,000.

2. Additional appropriations by the state for local education are definitely growing.

3. Since 1925, considerable mileage of county roads has been added to the state system, and the culmination of this development came in the Byrd road plan this year.

4. Increase in collections from the 5-cent gasoline tax has made it possible for the central government to extend aid to the localities so counties' land taxes may be reduced.

Notwithstanding the reimposition of certain taxes by some of the localities before 1930, there was in that year, as a result of segregation, a saving of $1,206,923 to the owners of real estate and tangible personal property.

The budget for the 1932-34 biennium was balanced with the general understanding that Virginia would emerge from the present biennium without a deficit and with a probable, though small, surplus.

Closed Year With Surplus.

Virginia closed its fiscal year June 30, 1931, with a net unappropriated surplus amounting to $2,046,443.69, whereas other southern states revealed an aggregate deficit exceeding $30,000,000. Since the last fiscal year for which some of these states have reported closed within the calendar year 1930, this figure is somewhat smaller than the actual combined deficits for 1931.

The per capita state debt of these states as of the close of their respective fiscal years averaged more than $18, nearly twice as much as the per capita debt figure for Virginia. Virginia's conservatism has paid well in the present economic crisis.

In the recent balancing of the 1932-1934 budget and the 9.47 per cent decrease in appropriations, a 10 per cent reduction in state employes' salaries played a substantial part. Of the $1,025,000 saved in this manner, $500,000 will revert to the general fund of the state and $525,000 to special funds.

After allowing for the increase for public free schools and for criminal charges, the budget for 1932-1934 shows a net decrease under that of 1930-1932 of $5,778,000, or about 15 per cent, in all other general fund appropriations.

Says Prohibition Exists Only in the Imagination Of the Wilfully Blind

Editor Constitution: It has long been noticeable that the less a person knows about conditions obtaining throughout the United States incident to the national prohibition law, the stronger he or she is for the continuation of the eighteenth amendment to the federal constitution. Like most perfect things, prohibition exists only in the imagination. In a contribution appearing in a recent issue of the daily press a correspondent says:

"We refuse to believe that there is any intelligent person who has given the question any study whatever who believes that the repeal of the prohibition law would be good for the country. The evidence is too overwhelming on the other side. Thinking people cannot be that blind."

It has been said that "there are none so blind as those who refuse to see." Likewise, there are none so dumb as those who blind their eyes to visible evidence, close their minds to official records and authentic facts and figures and ignore deplorable conditions.

Twelve years and $400,000,000 have been wasted in futile efforts to enforce an inoperative law.

Any man or woman who hasn't sighted a drunk in recent years should hasten to consult a reliable occulist. Not since the beginning of time has liquor drinking and drunkenness been as general as it is today. During the days of the licensed saloon drunkenness was confined largerly to the habitual "old soak." But under national prohibition boys and girls of school age and young men and women "pitch" liquor parties in hotels, in apartment houses, in restaurants, in trains, in automobiles and in the woods along the Georgia highways, to which fully 75 per cent of the state and federal officers will testify.

A survey of the situation will show that drunkenness has increased throughout Georgia—"bone-dry" Georgia—which has led in the manufacture and distribution of liquor since the enactment of the amendment in question. Here are some interesting facts and figures:

In 1907, the last year of the licensed saloon, there were 3,136 arrests for drunkenness in Atlanta as compared with 9,486 in 1929, an increase of 138 per cent per 10,000 population. In 1907 Atlanta had 220 licensed saloons as compared with many times that number of blind tigers and bootleggers in 1932. In 1931 more than 10,000 arrests were made in Atlanta on the charge of drunkenness.

Conditions have not "improved" under prohibition. Instead of being sold by responsible dealers under strict regulations, as was the case in the days of the saloon, it is sold in the back alleys and on almost every street by irresponsible men who regard no law. The federal prison, the state prison, the county and city chain gangs and the county and city jails are crowded with "drunks" and other violators of the liquor law. Crime is rampant throughout the nation, yet we foolishly insist that conditions are "improved."

MY SECRET.

BY FRANCES BARFIELD.

My life is like a wondrous garden,
Filled with flowers rare.
I have the golden daffodils
That blossom always there.
The daffodils all stand for joy,
And tho' I have but few
This bit of joy I've saved, my friend,
This one I give to you.

I have the lilacs blooming here.
They stand for faith alone.
And I will share this bit of faith
As I am passing on.

There are lilacs growing near.
They will bring hope anew,
And I will pluck a lily fair
And give to some one, too.

Behold, the loveliest of all:
The white rose growing there:
For I have loved and cherished long,
That flower sweet and rare.
A bit of sorrow there is told,
Suggesting some one dear.
But I won't give my sorrow, too,
For I must keep that here.

The Georgia Exile

(From the Washington Herald.)

Take me back to good old Georgia,
I no longer care to roam;
Take me back to dear old Georgia,
To my childhood's happy home.
Take me to her lofty mountains,
Where the winds blow, fresh and free;
Take me where her lordly rivers
Roll in grandeur to the sea.
Take me where the mellow sunshine,
Soft on Yonah Mountan glows,
To the cypress and the live oak,
Where the Swanee river flows.

Take me back to good old Georgia,
I no longer care to roam;
Take me back to dear old Georgia
To my sunny southern home.
Take me where the Chattahoochee
Rises 'mong the pine trees tall,
Sings farewell to tow'ring mountains,
Ripples down the vales of Hall.
Take me where the broad Ocmulgee
Weds Oconee's turbid tide
Where the gray moss droops in beauty,
Fit adornment for a bride.

Then take me back to Georgia,
I no longer care to roam;
Take me back to dear old Georgia,
To my happy southern home.
So that, in a Georgia graveyard,
In the land I love the best,
When the angel trumpet summons,
I may gather with the blest.
But, in all of heaven's glory,
Nothing sweeter shall I know
Than the glow on Yonah Mountain
And the Swanee river's flow.

While the light on Yonah glows,
While the Swanee river flows,
My heart belongs in Georgia
Where the white magnolia grows.

The Need of a Nation

From the sighing of a people,
From a nation's deep unrest,
Comes a cry—Give us a leader
Who will lead us to the best.

There are idle millions pleading,
"Give us labor for our hands;"
There are millions who are hungry
In the richest of God's lands.

From the boundless rolling prairies,
With their lavish wealth of grain,
From the cotton fields of Dixie,
From the coast and from the plain,
Comes the cry—"Is there a leader
Who will feel the people's pain?"

One with vision who sees clearly,
One who places honor high,
One who holds we move together
Hand to hand and eye to eye;
One who knows if base be crumbling
Soon in ruin all will lie.

There is such a one among us
In the stars his name is spelt;
He will be our chosen leader,
And his name is—Roosevelt.

The Happenings of the Church World

BY HERMAN L. TURNER,
Pastor, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

The church-wide evangelistic campaign is being planned by the Southern Presbyterian church for 1933. The idea was born in earnest prayer and is being carried out in the same spirit of humble supplication. Without haste, with thoughtful attention to plans, and with hopeful zeal, the entire denomination is to be enlisted in the campaign.

The first contingent of the 1,700 or 1,800 refugees from Russia left their temporary haven at Harbin, Manchuria, early in February. Three hundred Mennonites sailed from Shanghai for Marseilles February 13, to be transported after an overland journey to Bordeaux, to Buenos Aires, Argentina, thence up the Paraguay river to Asuncion and Puerto Casado, Paraguay. After several days' journey by rail and wagon, the refugees will be permitted to settle in the "Chaco" and upland prairie country west of the Paraguay river, not unlike the steppes of Russia.

Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald fund, recently declared in an address before the Tennessee College Association that the south is "far below other sections of the country in those items that make up a civilized state." He sees the section, in spite of its romantic past and future possibilities, handicapped because of its lack of material wealth, its high record in crime and disease, and its low standard of education. Dr. Embree suggested that the south build at least one university of the highest standard and urged that the brains now dissipated over a hundred mediocre colleges be concentrated in one institution of high grade. The five centers of education which have distinguished histories and possibilities for real greatness he named as the University of Virginia, the North Carolina center, including the State University and Duke University, Atlanta with Emory University, New Orleans with Tulane, and Nashville with Vanderbilt University and Peabody Colleges.—Christian Advocate.

Recent excavations in Pompeii have brought to light several election posters, which show that campaign methods haven't changed much. One reads, according to World Outlook, "Vote for Pansa, Who Has Never Inebriated," indicating that there was a liquor question even in Roman times.

The county-unit method of reviving and rallying rural churches is a well-established practice that is growingly made use of in various parts of the country. A notable experiment is being worked out by some Christian ministers in Jefferson county, Ohio. From friendly visitation, to the conducting of a season of revival in each church, and to the organizing of a county-wide revival later, are the steps to be taken toward a happier fellowship in the Lord's service.—Christian Standard.

Boy scouting is established under the flags of 42 nations and in more than 70 lands. The next world Scout jamboree will be held in Hungary, 1933.

The Hospital International at Santo Domingo City, Dominican Republic, was dedicated a few weeks ago. This hospital has been planned and built under the direction of the board of Christian work in Santo Domingo, with additional assistance from various other quarters. The board is an international agency representing the Methodist Episcopal, the Presbyterian and the United Brethern denominations.

The Presbyterian Advance, Nashville, calls attention to the world's ingratitude for its heroes, under the British Broadcasting Corporation's recent twentieth anniversary of the Titanic disaster brought to light the story of Charles Lightholder, second mate, who was on the bridge when the ship struck the sugmerged iceberg. He directed the rescue of hundreds of passengers and then took his post by the captain, going down with the ship. He was blown to the surface by the explosion of the boilers and was rescued. The twentieth anniversary of his brave devotion to duty finds him on a poor farm in Sonoma county, California, the helpless victim of paralysis. Meanwhile, the world has all but forgotten the Titanic disaster."

There have been some scathing things said lately, according to the British Table Talk, regarding the caption "The World Forgets:" "The attempt to gather information on family life by means of the circulation of a questionnaire on the subject. The promoters have been taunted with following unsound and unscientific "American" methods, and scorn has been poured on the fact that though 50,000 forms have been circulated, only some 7,000 have so far been returned. Sir William Beveridge, who is carrying out the inquiry on behalf of the London school of economics, however, is not dismayed. He expects to receive at least 10,000 replies, and, in a preliminary radio talk a few days ago, which he gave on the returns, the information so far received has, he says, been of the greatest value and importance. The chief point, he emphasizes, is that replies indicate that while there has been a loosening of many family ties and authority, there has been a strengthening of the deeper ties and greater economic and domestic freedom have made family and married life far more really successful and happy. It appears that the bulk of the replies have come from the educated middle class.

"Much is being said about our debts," comments the Christian Index, "little of which is complimentary. It is estimated that our local churches owe $25,000,000; that our state agencies and institutions owe $12,000,000 and that southwide boards and institutions owe $6,000,000, a total of $43,000,000, which is not so bad if our investments in church buildings, schools, colleges, seminaries, hospitals and missionary propaganda have been wisely made. So far as we know, there is not a state in the entire country with three and a half million population in as good shape as Southern Baptists. Our churches owe on themselves $25,000,000, but this is a small item when distributed among the 23,731 churches affiliated with the southern convention. The estimated value of church property in Georgia in 1931 was $17,137,043. Other states are equally as well off proportionately. The $6,000,000 debts on our south-wise boards and institutions, after allowance is made for defalcation in the Home and Foreign Mission Boards, is probably due entirely to a program of expansion taking place during the seventy-five-million campaign or immediately thereafter."

Editor Constitution: If the state could set aside 50 per cent of our road revenues for loans to city and small town residents, who would like to get back on the farm where they could be assisted by mother earth in making a livelihood, they would gladly work and would gladly make a good living if we could help them to the extent of say, $500 or give them that amount of credit to be taken care of with the state loans. This to be repaid in a period of years, after the first two years, without interest.

In other words, you might figure that in this state we would have something like $6,000,000, which would give 12,000 families $500. It seems that something must be done toward taking care of the situation by a more permanent basis. Temporary relief has to be repeated so often.

We could travel the old highways and help our fellowman back to a position of self-support. And my slogan is "Let's travel the old highways until everybody is self-supporting—back to the farm."

Changed Rural Conditions.

Editor Constitution: We are in need of a Moses to lead our splendid farmers back to our wonderful farms, where peace and happiness await them. Our great papers have the knowledge and ability to intelligently lay facts and figures in the nature of a comparison of the once fearful conditions that existed on the farms, and of the now wonderful opportunities that the farm offers. If our government will co-operate with our papers in an advertising campaign of this kind, we will soon find ourselves marching up the road that leads to true prosperity and financial independence. We lost our prosperity when our farmers lost out, and we will not get it back in full measure until we again reclaim and develop our greatest asset—our farms.

The Federal Land banks own or have claims on thousands of the finest farms in all sections and from which the government is receiving very little revenue. The lands are washing away and growing up and the houses are going to ruin and falling down. As a business proposition, to say nothing of the fact that our government would be developing and fortifying the very foundation upon which it stands, there should be an appropriation by our government to be used in buying advertising space in our papers, daily and weekly, and advertise the advantages that the farm now offers as compared with the time when our farms were abandoned.

Our Farm Land banks can well afford to allow their farms to be cultivated free of charge for two or three years. In this way our farmers would be given a chance to get ahead and not be dependent on others for assistance. An advertising campaign of this nature by our government would re-establish confidence in our farmers and as a result our wholesale and retail merchants, our banks and stock dealers would all join hands with the farmers.

When our farmers abandoned the farms to move to the cities and small towns farm labor was demanding $30 to $40 per month, corn was selling at $2 to $2.50 per bushel and all other essentials of life, flour, sugar, meat, were selling in the same high proportion. This condition together with the boll weevil completely swamped the farmer.

Conditions have changed materially since that time. In the cities jobs cannot now be had at a living wage, if at all. Today you can get farm labor at $8 to $10 per month, corn at 50 cents per bushel, land rents at your own price, fine cows at $20 to $25 and all other essentials of life in the same proportion. No gas, no water, no coal to pay for and you can buy a farm very reasonable and on the best of terms.

A man can now make a living on the farm, he can be more contented and happier than it is possible to be in cities and towns under present conditions. You hear many people say "We farmers cannot get anything for what we raise on the farm." That may be true to some extent, but they can get a living, and what are they getting in the cities besides trouble and torment?

If all of our federal, state and county governments will assist in perfecting a plan of this kind we will soon see the dawn of a brighter and better day.

State-Supported Colleges for Women

Conditions in South Following Reconstruction Period Largely Responsible for Establishment of Schools for Girls.

This is the tenth of a series of articles on women's colleges in America prepared by a committee from the Southern Association of Colleges for Women.

There are eight state-supported separate colleges for women. These institutions were established between 1884 and 1907. All are found in the southern states, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Texas, and one border state, Oklahoma. A former article discussed conditions peculiar to the south which likely caused this section to produce this distinctive type of institution. The present article will discuss other conditions in the south which largely determined the early work of these eight colleges for women.

During the early years of the history of the eight colleges for women, the so-called college work offered was little more than what would now be called high school work. Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina established state-supported colleges for women within a few years of 1890. At this time, these states had an average of only 10 public high schools to the state. The colleges, therefore, could hardly have offered other than high school work. Although the southern states at this date were much behind others in providing high school facilities, their progress in this respect from 1890 to 1910 was more rapid than that in the other states. The number of public high schools in the South Atlantic and south-central states increased during these two decades 775 per cent, while during the same period the number in the United States as a whole increased only 304 per cent. As the high school facilities in their states improved, the eight state-supported colleges for women gradually raised their level of work. During the period from 1915 to 1925 all of them attained a standard college rating.

Seven of the eight state-supported colleges for women expressed in their original charters their primary function as being industrial schools for poor girls. The Florida State College for Women alone, established in 1905, made no claim for being an industrial school. Four influences very probably accounted for this condition: (1) the stringent economic conditions prevailing in the south at the time most of the schools were established; (2) the popularity of industrial education in the United States at the time; (3) the existence of agricultural and mechanical colleges, open only to men in most cases, which had recently been established in this section; and (4) Miss Julia Tutwiler's recent account of industrial schools for poor girls organized and supported by private benevolences in France and Germany.

Followed Reconstruction.

That the economic and social conditions existing in the south following reconstruction had much to do with the establishment and early work of these state-supported schools for poor girls there can be little doubt. The south at this period was wretchedly poor. There was a pressing necessity for both men and women to engage in some form of labor to earn a livelihood. However, there was little opportunity for the women to engage in any other work than that requiring unskilled labor, because of the fact that opportunities for technical and industrial education had been for them practically non-existent.

Most likely, the fact that 10 southern states had established agricultural and mechanical colleges by 1890 and that most of these colleges were open only to men influenced a number of these states to establish, about this time, state colleges for women in which technical and industrial training was stressed. In 1879, before the establishment of the first of these colleges, Senator John T. Morgan introduced in the United States senate a resolution calling upon the committee on education and labor to investigate the advisability of establishing schools of "science and technics" in the various states for the education of women similar to the agricultural and mechanical colleges for men.

The middle class farming population began to assume political power in the south during the 80's and 90's. Farmers' alliances, granges, wheels and the populist party were organized and assumed control of state affairs. With the rise to power of the people of this group came a demand for the technical and industrial education of their children. The National Farmers' Alliance at its annual convention in 1887 demanded increased industrial and agricultural education. These farmers' organizations did much towards the establishment of the industrial schools for girls. The state-grange in Mississippi indorsed the movement for the woman's college of that state, recommending especially the industrial feature. To the Farmers' Alliance of Georgia, at the time of the establishment of the state college for women in 1889, was pledged the support of over two-thirds of the members of the legislature. Governor Ben Tillman, elected by the insurgent farmers of South Carolina, was instrumental in the establishment of the state woman's college in South Carolina. The first public agitation, in 1889, in favor of establishing a state woman's college in Texas was initiated by the Texas State Grange and Patrons of Husbandry. The bill establishing such a school in Alabama was passed in 1892 when the populist party, at the height of its strength, was in control of the legislature.

During the late 70's Miss Julia Tutwiler, of Alabama, studied in France and Germany. While there she came in contact with privately endowed industrial schools for poor girls. In 1882 she published in a national magazine an article setting forth her ideas about technical and industrial education for women. This article antedated by several years the establishment of the first state-supported college for women, the State Normal and Industrial School for Girls of Mississippi.

The establishing acts of seven of the state-supported colleges for women either made provision for or stated that one of the purposes of these institutions was to train teachers for the public schools. This was in response to a rather pressing demand for trained teachers in the south at that time. In 1880 only about 30 or 35 per cent of the teachers in the schools of the south were women, whereas in other sections from 60 to 70 per cent were women. In 1920 the south was using women teachers almost as extensively as were other sections.

Summary of Work.

In summarizing the early work of the eight state-supported colleges for women and the influences bearing upon this work, these points were made:

In their early years these colleges did high school work largely. This was necessary because of the poor high school facilities in the south at the time.

In the south, during the last quarter of the nineteenth century, there was urgent need for technical and industrial education for women as well as for men. This need was felt most keenly by the middle class farming population.

The land-grant agricultural and mechanical colleges of the south were closed in most cases to women.

The middle class farmers, coming into political power in the south during the eighties and nineties, began to demand better educational advantages for their sons and daughters. Because of the economic stress which this class was experiencing at the time, technical and industrial education made a strong appeal. It was not desirable for the daughters to attend co-educational colleges as was the case in other sections of the country. Wealth to establish privately endowed colleges for women was lacking. The state-supported college for women featuring technical and industrial training, as well as general culture training, was a solution.

The inclusion of "teacher-training" as one of the objectives set forth in the charters of these colleges was made in response to a demand for trained teachers in the south at that time.

Appreciates Constitution Editorial on Boy Scouts

Editor Constitution: Recently The Constitution carried a very fine editorial under the title "Boy Scouts Score Again." This editorial referred to the helpful activity of the Boy Scouts on the occasion of the national meeting of the Garden Clubs of America.

As president of the local Boy Scout organization, I want to particularly thank you for this splendid editorial, which, of course, I think is well deserved. I might also mention that one of the ladies who was a delegate to this convention wrote a very commendatory letter after her return to Boston, and enclosed a check for $15 to be applied to the camping activities of Atlanta Scouts.

It is a source of pleasure to all of us connected with this work to feel that the boys are helping build up the spirit of friendly hospitality for which Atlanta has been noted. We feel that The Constitution is one of the strongest friends of Scouting in this vicinity.

Need of Country Is More Bung-Plugging Statesmen, Holds This Atlantan

Editor Constitution: There are more than a thousand government workers in Atlanta. Many of them have bargained for homes, making monthly payments thereon rather than pay rents. They have bought housefurnishings and automobiles in the same way. Cut their salaries and they would be forced to give these up—cast them upon a sick and weak market causing real estate to go lower and business to become more sluggish. Shut off the steam and the engine stops. So it is with business, shut off buying power and it stops.

John A. Simpson, president of the National Farmers' Union, hit the nail on the head when he said: "If the farmers learn but one thing in this depression it should be that low wages and unemployment mean low farm prices. It is not what a few buy but what the great masses consume which makes farm prosperity. It is my position that farmers cannot pay their farm mortgages and high taxes by pulling other people down to their level. Our only hope is to rise to the level of business, professional and labor groups. For these reasons I am opposed to any reduction in the wages of government workers."

While living cost is much less so far as food and clothing are concerned, government workers have had to help jobless bread winners of their respective families. This has more than consumed their gain in living cost. Rob them of this ability to help and you increase suffering and the need for public help.

I agree that "all salaries should be based on work performed." That is a principle for which civil service workers have been contending for many years. As a result government work is better classified and co-ordinated, and is more economically done than ever before. Our governmental activities are greater than ever before, consequently government workers have more to do and are doing more than ever in the history of the service. This being true, why should their salaries be cut? Would the chief executive, or board of directors of any industry running at full capacity be so foolish as to cut the salaries of his employes?

As I see it the trouble lies, 1st, in our illogical and unjust economic and industrial systems; 2d, in extravagant and foolish appropriations on the part of our local and national government; 3d, in the billions and billions of tax-exempt bonds of these governments.

It is foolish to tinker with the spigot while the bung is wide open. First stop the bung then look after the spigot. What we need most right now is fewer salary-cutting spigot-tinkers and more courageous bung-plugging statesmen.

Suggests Convicts Be Used For Regrading Dirt Roads In New Parts of Fulton

Editor Constitution: I would like to make a suggestion in line with the retrenchment policy the county commissioners promise the taxpayers.

Since there is no money for buying road building material and machinery and the large crowd of convicts must be fed and cared for let the commissioners send them into our newly acquired territory of Milton and Campbell and put them to working, widening and straightening all the country roads over which all these people must travel to get to a hard surfaced road. This kind of road work would be appreciated by the people who are in the country on the worst kind of roads and who cannot get away from home if it rains or if they are away cannot get back. There would be no extra cost in this plan except the purchase of gas for tractors where they have to be used and bear in mind the convicts must eat whether working or loafing.

I am a member of the Taxpayers' League and it was my understanding from the beginning that the league would not be in politics. They merely want to inform the members by laying before them correct information in order that they may select and vote for qualified men to handle the affairs of our city and county.

There certainly is no good reason why the overburdened taxpayers should not have something to say about where the money they pay goes and to demand needed service only for the money paid.

There is another item the league might look into and it is this: A corporation or any going concern will pay a man $200 per month to work from 7 o'clock, a. m., until he gets done at night and when this same man gets a job with the city, county or state he must have twice as much to work from 8 o'clock, a. m. until 4 o'clock, p. m. and do less work. This is not right and should be corrected.

Deplores Lack of Audits Of County School Systems

Editor Constitution—I think we are in a critical condition as far as the schools in Georgia are concerned. I have no way, of course, of knowing about the school system except in my own county.

I believe that it would be a great thing for the school system if some representative or senator would introduce a bill and have same passed requiring the boards of education and county school superintendents to publish each month in their county paper an itemized statement of the expenditures of each separate school in their county.

I think that taxpayers have a right to know how the tax funds are being spent.

Speaking only of my county I find from investigation that there is no audit being made on the tax collector for the local school taxes. I can't understand what good it does the taxpayers for the state auditor to audit county school superintendents without first auditing tax collectors. I hope that the tax collectors will not think that I am trying to reflect on them for I believe, if they are honest, it is to their interest to be audited.

It is a question in my mind whether or not it is the duty of the state's auditor or whether it is the duty of the board of county commissioners to have this audit made.

I think that some bill should be passed regulating this matter. I don't think that any man should announce as representative of his county or senator from his senatorial district unless he first has a platform putting his constituents on notice what he stands for and what he expects to try to accomplish if he is elected to said office.

Of course quite a number of times we get disappointed in the men that we select. You know we all make mistakes, but if we do the best that we can I don't think that we should be criticized.

I really believe that education has gotten so free in Georgia that it is unappreciated. It would be better for our people and our taxpayers to put each one on their own merit. The best men that we have ever had in the south fought their own battles. I think that this is the only salvation for our country.

Abolition of World Tariff Barriers Would Stabilize Prices and Act as Bar To Panics, Writes Mercer Professor

When the ominous clouds that presaged the present depression were gathering in the background of our economic horizon, the party in power called together its doctors to diagnose the case. After long congressional discussion, they decided that the way to relieve economic congestion was to prescribe a still bigger dose from the old pill-box, high tariff. Consequently, the Smoot-Hawley bill was passed in opposition to or heedless of the advice of a convention of 1,028 of our leading economists, who advised that the old remedy would not work, that Uncle Sam is no longer in swaddling clothes, that he is no longer rocking the cradle of infant industries, borrowing money from the parent country, or unable to compete with the cheap labor of the world. Again, however, party polties rejected wise counsel.

What are the results? Is there any casual relation between our high protective policy and the recent tariff legislation in other nations? Like the wolf at the door in these hard times, has the Smoot-Hawley bill left to the world a litter of pups?

The grumbling undertones and the occasional audible outcries of big business, once the sole exponent of high tariff, against the Smoot-Hawley bill and retaliatory tariffs should give us cause to reconsider the policy we are pursuing. When we were a debtor nation, borrowing money from Europe to build railroads, factories and municipalities, we found no barriers to our exports which were shipped to Europe in payment of interest and principal. Our tariff wall was not at that time so obnoxious. Europe owed us nothing and sought our commercial good will. We were a good debtor with plenty of security.

But now that we are the creditor nation wishing to collect gold for interest and principal on war debts as well as for current exports, Europe regards the Smoot-Hawley tariff in a different light. Her only alternative is to retaliate with high tariffs, which she has done as a protective measure against the ever-mounting debt she owes us.

On March 1, 1932, England inaugurated a general 10 per cent ad valorem tariff, which will affect annually more than $150,000,000 in American trade. Canada, our most friendly neighbor and our best customer, found it necessary to erect a tariff, effective June 1, 1931, against our products. It is estimated that this tariff will affect about $200,000,000 worth of our exports to Canada, which is a little short of one-half of our trade with her.

Strange as it may seem, the United States does not have, among her many monopolies, one on tariff legislation. We cannot direct our ship of state so as to give the other fellow all of the wash all the time, neither can we use trade weapons which he cannot with equal justice and effectiveness adopt.

European Press Attacks.

Retaliatory tariff is not the only arrow let fly from the European bow against the Smoot-Hawley bill. The continental press is daily hurling diatribes at "Made in America," a phrase which is becoming a stigma rather than a stamp of recommendation. Though we have granted a moratorium on war debts, Europe still assigns us the role of Shylock since we made gold ducats the only welcome exchange for our exports.

During the World War and in the treaties that followed it, the United States further established good will in the hearts of the peoples of Europe. We sacrificed billions in surrendered claims, gave millions for the relief of the downtrodden, and spilled rich blood on foreign soil in a vain hope to free Europe and the world from another such catastrophe. Are we to surrender the ground gained, sacrifice the good will that has been established by continuing a policy that breeds contempt, ridicule and retaliation abroad with consequent losses at home?

In decreasing our exports, besmirching our good will, and driving our factories to foreign fields, the Smoot-Hawley bill has become a boomerang rather than a boon to American capital and labor. Again, like Shylock, we lose both the ducats and the pound of flesh.

In the face of these many reactions to our present policy, Senator Smoot, Matthew Woll and others attempt to defend the bill by reviving the old Three-H argument: High tariff, high wages and high living. The argument back of it is no stronger than the alliteration which had grown monotonous even in the time of McKinley, who changed it to "A high tariff and a full dinner pail."

For over 60 years the American public has swallowed that bit of euphony as sound food for both mind and body. The truth is that we had relatively high wages in this pioneer country before we ever had a high tariff policy. So long as a worker could lay an ax to the timber, a pick to a vein of ore, or a hoe to the soil and earn for himself $1 to $5 a day and more, he would not work for capital for less. It has been the abundance of our natural resources in the way of free land, timber and ore that has kept the standard of wages high.

False Remedies.

Out of the wilderness of depression and despair have come many voices directing the way out, such as the expansion of currency by the federal reserve banks, the riotous living campaign, anti-hoarding and the cheapening of the monetary standard. The fallacy in these proposals lies in assuming that high prices alone make for better times. Good business may produce high prices, but high prices will not produce good business. If this were so, Germany was in her golden age at the end of the war when a million marks were but a day's pay, and our own country should recall with joy the inflated greenbacks that made a week's grocery bill look like the sum involved in the purchase of an oil well. An expanded currency and consequent high prices may sound like good times, but any artificially inflated currency is but a mirage of better days. The ostrich with his head in the sand is no more secure.

Through a favorable balance of trade over a long period of time and through depicting war debts and the interest upon them, the United States has become the creditor nation of the world. Unless Europe pays for our products with her commodities, the ever-binding burden of the debt is increased. Europe cannot well buy imports and pay for them with tariff-burdened exports. Retaliation is as certain as the law of self-preservation.

If we were to dam the Niagara river, the Great Lakes would overflow their shores. Give their waters a way to the seven seas and their level remains constant. Let the nations of the world lower their trade barriers, let them make worldwide the field of market, let the world consume what the world produces, and prices will be more constant, panics less frequent.

Physically Fit.

(This is the 54th of a series of articles to be published in The Sunday Constitution, prepared under the auspices of the Fulton County Medical Society. They are being published by the society so that the public may have authentic medical information with special reference to health conditions in this section.)

Whether you are a bricklayer or "the big boss," you find that it is economical to be healthy. For loss of time on account of disease or loss of efficiency due to fatigue can be measured in terms of dollars and cents. Therefore, men should have an actual knowledge of their state of health, and this can be had by a proper physical examination. Granted that such an examination reveals no serious conditions demanding immediate correction, every one ought to know enough about personal hygiene to conduct his life to the best advantage.

The human body is a combination of cells bound together in various systems, including for example the muscles, the bones, the circulation of the blood, the nervous system and the digestive tract. These interlocking cogs of the human machine will usually get along satisfactorily if left largely alone, particularly since there is within the cells the power of repair—an ability that does not exist, for instance, in such machinery as can be found in an automobile or an oil-heating furnace. Then, too, man has the intelligence which makes it possible for him to realize when things go wrong and to take steps toward correction.

Regular physical examinations are important primarily for the detection of remediable defects or of diseases in their early stages, but secondarily such examinations may afford a feeling of confidence in one's state of health which means freedom from worry.

Without being able scientifically to measure the amount of damage that can be done to the human body by worry, high tension or irritation, the experience of ages has shown that these factors play a definite part in the onset of disease.

There was a time when worry was listed as a contributing cause to high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, diabetes and even many infectious diseases. Unquestionably worry does play a part in the causation of disease because of the secondary effects exerted on the functioning of the body.

When a man is tired he ought to rest. During the resting process the body cells recover from fatigue. Scientific investigations have shown that definite chemical changes take place during fatigue and others during rest. The amount of sleep necessary at different periods in life changes. It varies also for different persons. The average man ought to sleep eight hours every night.

Sometimes insomnia is due to physical conditions, but it may also be due to the establishment of bad habits. Falling asleep is a habit. If one establishes the routine of going to sleep easily at a regular hour and of relaxing the body at the time of going to sleep, he will probably have much less trouble than if he indulges in constant variations of the sleeping performance.

The man who begins to worry as soon as he goes to bed ought to have competent advice, since the tendency is toward a vicious circle. Almost every one knows that a walk or drive in the fresh air, a warm bath or a warm drink tends to induce sleepiness. People who are sensitive to caffein should avoid the use of tea or coffee before going to sleep.

The esthetics of eating have not yet been developed in our rushing civilization. A quiet, clean dining room, free from orchestral din and dancing is more conducive to good digestion than can easily be estimated.

Enough food should be eaten to provide energy for the daily work, but it is safe to say that all of us eat too much. A continuous and steady gain in weight is not advisable after middle age. For evidence indicates that obesity is associated with conditions which shorten life. Every man ought to find out what his optimum weight is for health and control his diet to the point at which such may be maintained.

A proper diet contains suitable quantities of proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral salts and the essential vitamins. If the diet contains sufficient milk, meat, eggs and fish to amount to 75 grams or 2 ounces per day of actual protein, the proportion will be suitable. For palatability, meat protein is superior to vegetable protein. Two ounces of meat provide 10 grams of protein, or one-seventh of the average daily intake. Butter provides no protein but is almost wholly fat.

Boy Scout Troop 65 Observes Fifth Anniversary

Fraudulent Service Claims Charged to Cheating Doctors

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Cheating doctors who betrayed the trust placed in them by the veterans' administration have been responsible in frequent cases for bogus claims upon which disability allowances are being paid, according to Representative Frank L. Bowman, of West Virginia.

Nearly $78,000,000 is being paid annually in disability allowances to veterans whose disabilities were acquired either before or after their war service, says Mr. Bowman.

There are now approximately 410,000 awards of disability, and the director of veterans' administration says they will average $18 a month. Only about 12 per cent are cases in which disability could be shown to be service-connected. The remaining cases are either fraudulent, about 10 per cent, or those in which the injury or illness is not fairly attributable to war service.

"It is almost impossible to show evidence of fraud in many cases of disability allowance because disability cases are not rated on outside medical evidence," Representative Bowman explained. "They are rated only on evidence recorded by a bureau medical examiner.

"Where the bureau or administration has designated a medical examiner in the field it frequently develops that the doctors have padded their examiner's reports. The bureau is from time to time finding these doctors, sometimes by the applicant taking an appeal, when the case may warrant his being hospitalized or studied in a diagnostic center, where the examination shows he did not have the disability the doctor's report stated.

"It is hard to determine how many such cases there are now. As a rule, when such a doctor comes under suspicion a review is made of all cases in his territory. The veterans' administration now has 50 or 60 doctors under indictment. In New York there have been three convictions and the guilty persons sentenced to from three to five years. In Pennsylvania there have been two convictions. These were designated medical examiners who for money, according to testimony, padded the medical examiner's report, generally on a percentages basis of 50 or 25 per cent.

"There are many cases where a man is receiving disability allowances for disabilities that existed before his service. These number about 10 per cent of the total of 410,000. These are cases careful examination would show are not service connected. The only reliable check is to trace the individual case.

"You will find men with an eye out, or with fingers missing, which were not lost during service, but there is no record of such defects at the time they entered the service. You will find hundreds of cases where the beneficiary of government pension had pneumonia, meningitis or some other diseases whose after effects were not noted when he entered the service and which did not bother him while in service. But as years go on and his constitution is weakened these disabilities are emphasized. They are not service connected.

"The law is weak in not saying that the veteran must have suffered disability while in military service or after he came out. The law states the only qualifications a man must have —that he enlisted before November 11, 1918, served 90 days or more, and that his service was terminated by honorable discharge.

"If he has met these qualifications, makes a claim showing he filed no income tax report the year previous, and can show he has 25 per cent disability or more, he is entitled to a pension, unless his disability is due to misconduct.

"Much evidence in disability claims, in record form, was lost by the sinking of ships or by fires in camps, such as Camp Meade, Md.; Fort Myer, Va., and Camp McClellan, Anniston, Ala., where two-thirds of the division records were lost.

"The records of possibly 5 per cent of men in the service were lost. Then, too, men would frequently go to a dispensary for a few days for treatment the medical officer did not think worthy of record, and now the government is paying the bills because there are no records.

"Any man who came into the service before November 11, 1918, served 90 days, and hasn't paid income tax the year previous, can lose arms or legs in an automobile accident and then draw a pension through the veterans' administration, just as though he had lost his limbs in war service. The only difference in pay is that under the pension he is paid on a basis of $40 a month for total injury, and for service disability it would be on a basis of $100 a month for total injury.

"In the New York convictions I have mentioned, it was shown in one case that the designated doctor examined a man and reported the applicant had active pulminory tuberculosis, whereas further examination by a bureau hospital disclosed no evidence that this man had ever had tuberculosis.

"Among the fraudulent cases is a big percentage of disability compensation claims, rather than disability allowances. In allowance cases disabilities do not have to be traceable to service, and are on a $12, $18, $24 and $40 basis. The disability compensation rate of pay for a temporary condition is on a basis of $80 a month, and for a permanent condition $100 a month.

"Fraud is practiced in the larger amounts, which must be traced to war service. Under the presumptive clause, if the applicant can show he suffered to the extent of 10 per cent disability on or before January 1, 1925, the law presumes that the disability must be accepted as due to military service. In other words, if he was accepted for military service, the presumption is that he was physically O. K.

"The classes of presumptive cases are all nervous disorders, unless it can be shown that these are of the misconduct status and tubercular conditions.

"Of 315,000 awards of disability compensation, at least 60 per cent are presumptive. It is hard to determine how many are being paid through fraudulent testimony.

"The veterans' bureau formerly was not active in checking these cases. During the last two years, however, the veterans' administration has been getting after the cheating doctors and indicting them.

Our Daily Food

SPRING ASPARAGUS IS HERE!

The asparagus season is at its peak, now. Look inside one of the asparagus freight cars and you'll see boxes made in a strange shape—pyramid crates, they're called. Asparagus tapers toward the top, so the crates are made to fit the vegetable, and to protect the tips. Every crate is packed with a blanket of wet moss, and then the cars, full of "long green," as the growers call it, are rushed cast in refrigerated cars.

Asparagus is cut short, to allow for growth of an inch or so during its trip to market.

This vegetable is certaintly pretty enough to paint. The stalks are straight, firm and smooth green almost down to the bottom. The tips are smooth and compact. The buds or scales on the stalks are small. There's your perfect model asparagus, all ready to be teamed up with some butter sauce.

I find there's quite a technique to cooking asparagus. Priscilla, who manages our experimental kitchen, recommends standing the bunch upright in a saucepan for the first ten minutes of cooking, so that the bubbling, boiling water has a chance to cook the stalks thoroughly. Then lay the asparagus down in the water for the next ten minutes of cooking, so the tips will be tender.

Now, here's another trick. Stand the bunch of asparagus in the bottom of a double boiler. Add boiling water. Then invert the top of the double boiler over the tips. You see the steam cooks the tips perfectly; the boiling water cooks the less tender stalks.

If you are serving creamed asparagus on toast the asparagus should be cut in one or two-inch pieces. Cook the thick stem pieces a while before adding the tips to the boiling water. Then it all gets done at the same time.

Some of the department stores are advertising special asparagus racks. Two handles on the rack make it easy to remove the asparagus and serve it. Cooking asparagus in parchment paper helps out on the serving end too. When the vegetable is done, with the seasonings all inside the paper, you simply open the package and slide the whole thing gently onto a platter, and it's ready to eat—except for the Hollandaise sauce, or the butter sauce, or a sauce made of lemon juice and drawn butter and chopped pecan meats. That's delicious.

When I hear someone ordering a bunch of asparagus I try to lead the conversation around to omelettes. There's a dish for you—asparagus omelette.

And don't forget cream of fresh asparagus soup for dinner, and creamed chicken with asparagus, and asparagus salads.

It's a good thing the asparagus season is longer than it used to be. There's a different way to serve it for every day in the season. But we'll have asparagus until June or July—and then plenty of canned asparagus for the rest of the year.

Asparagus grows wild, miles and miles of it, along the steppes of eastern Russia; it's so plentiful there it's even fed to the cattle. That sounds like heaven to those of us who are fond of the vegetable!

Senate Votes $30,000 To Contest Expenses

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—The senate today appropriated an additional $30,000 from its contingent fund to cover expenditures of the contest brought by former Senator Heflin against the election of Senator Bankhead, democrat, Alabama.

This brings the total cost of the contest, which was decided in Bankhead's favor, to slightly more than $100,000. The money is for expenses already incurred and attorneys' fees.

BURGOO KING RACES TO VICTORY IN PREAKNESS

THREE HURLERS SHUT OUT FOES IN BIG LEAGUES

Grove, Pipgras and Brown Feature Day's Play in Majors.

By Jack Cuddy,

United Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(UP)—The strong right arms of George Pipgrass and Clint Brown, and the talented portside flipper of Lefty Grove furnished the standout features of Saturday's play in the American league.

Each of these three men turned in four-hit, shutout performances, Pipgras blanking the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 0; Brown the Boston Red Sox by the same score, and Grove the St. Louis Browns, 3 to 0.

Pipgras was given quite a battle for six innings by Sad Sam Jones, but in the seventh the Yankees reached their former mate for two walks and four singles which netted four runs. Prior to this outburst, the New Yorkers had made but three safeties, one a home run by Combs in the first inning.

MATES SLUG.

While Grove was toying with the Browns, his Philadelphia mates got to Hadley and Hebert for seven, including home runs by Foxx and Cochrane.

Cleveland's victory over the Red Sox marked that team's 19th defeat in 23 starts. Cleveland did all its damage in the third and fourth innings, getting three runs in each frame. Earl Averill led the Indians' attack, driving home four runs.

Washington's Senators scored four runs in the eighth inning to drive Uhle from the mound and scor a 6-to-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers. It was the fifth consecutive victory for the Senators and enabled them to further strengthen their hold on first place.

The Cincinnati Reds came back strong in the seventh inning to score two runs and beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5-3. The victory prevented the Dodgers from making a clean sweep of the three-game series.

HERMAN WINS GAME.

Babe Herman, formerly of the Dodgers, drove home the winning run with a double to right. Heath then singled and scored Herman with the second tally.

The Boston Braves nosed out the league-leading Chicago Cubs by scoring two runs in the last inning. The score was 7-6. Burleigh Grimes pitched until the ninth when he was removed in favor of Charlie Root. Boston used five pitchers.

In the only other National league game, the world champion St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 7-6. The Cards scored three runs in the sixth inning to give them a commanding lead, but the Phillies countered once in each of the last two sessions to come within a single run of tying the count. Jerome "Dizzy" Dean started on the mound for the Cards but was removed in the eighth. The Cardinals made 15 hits, compared to 13 for the Phillies.

New York at Pittsburgh was postponed because of wet grounds.

New Discus Mark Is Set by Women

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 14.—(AP)—An American record for women was broken as more than a score of feminine stars of the Missouri valley district competed here today in the qualifying meet for the 1932 Olympics.

Ruth Osborn of Shelbyville, Mo., tossed the discus 108 feet, 2 1-4 inches to better the American record of 107 feet, 6 inches, established by Caroline Low in 1929.

Miss Osborn, still in high school, then won the eight-pound shot put with a toss of 36 feet, 9 1-4 inches, the javelin with a throw of 102 feet, 6 inches, and the baseball throw with a heave of 242 feet, 2 1-2 inches.

But it was little Lucille Douglass of Senath, Mo., who won the hearts of the crowd. The smallest competitor in the high jump, Miss Douglass crossed the bar at 5 feet, 1 3-4 inches, within a fuarter of an inch of the American record and greater than her height. She then placed first in the broad jump with a leap of 17 feet, 5 inches.

Denmark Winner In Zone Cup Play

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 14 (AP)—Denmark completed its Davis cup series with Jugoslavia today by taking one of the final two singles matches for a 4-to-1 victory.

Denmark will meet Japan at Copenhagen in the third round of European zone play June 5.

Calloway, Argo In Fast Test

Word has been received here that Buddy Calloway and Wesley Argo, the two Georgia boys who built their own car for the Indianapolis speedway race, have tested their machine over four laps and ran at an average of 110 miles an hour.

They figure that they will have no trouble qualifying at 115 miles per hour on their next run, the boys stated in a wire to friends. Friends who wish to communicate with the two boys by wire or mail may address their letters in care of Steve Hannagan, publicity manager, Indianapolis Speedway.

They'll Vault, Hurdle, Run and Leap Here Friday and Saturday

Dixie's best track and field stars will gather here Friday and Saturday of this week for the annual Southern conference meet. Birmingham has been host for several years, but Atlanta was awarded the meet at the conference meeting last winter. At the left is Don Zimmerman, of Tulane, All-American football player and star pole vaulter. He is expected to make the Olympic team. In the center is another Tulane football hero, Calvert DeColigny, big tackle, who runs the hurdles well. At the right is a Georgia star, Ralph Owen, broad-jumper and sprinter. Tulane won the title last year and has an excellent chance to repeat. Associated Press photos.

Heigh Ho, the merry—Oh—our English cousins have sunk the barb deep into the sun-kissed hide of dear old California.

Who said our dear old cousins had no sense of humor? Tally Ho. And listen. The London Sunday Observer is speaking:

"The tenth Olympiad opens on July 30. The games are to be held at Los Angeles in California, which at once raises a truly tremendous problem for the other nations who have got to find their way to this remote corner of the earth."

Remote, eh? One wonders if the newspaper boys in dear old L. A. have seen this little paragraph. It would make a delicious bit of reading for the Los Angeles breakfast club where weekly are sung the paeans of praise for the garden spot of the world. (Hello, Ham. Hello, Egg. Did you see that blasted piece in that blasted English journal?)

It is a pity that Mr. H. L. Mencken has never visited that club. He could have unleashed some barbed polemics which would have rumbled across the hills and rebounded from the flats out there. The boys look up at the ceiling of their breakfast room, where is painted in glaring blue letters—F. V. N. E. M.?—S. V. F. M.—F. V. N. E. X.?—S. V. F. X.—O. I. C. V. F. M. N. X.—And then backs are slapped and California is awarded first place in the list of states as the letters are hilariously chanted

What does it all mean? Listen. It'll kill you. It means, "Have we any ham? Yes, we have ham. Have we any eggs? Yes, we have eggs. Oh, I see, we have ham and eggs." Didn't that strangle you? Well, it does a lot of people. But not from laughing.

And if they ever hear in L. A. just what our British cousins (dear old cousins, I never liked them so well before) say about that remote corner known as California—well, heaven help the British Lion.

ATLANTANS TO VISIT CORNER.

Indications are that there will be a sprinkling of Atlantans at Los Angeles when the Olympiad is held. At least a sprinkling of them is trying to get there.

The latest is a walker, a distance hoofer. Atlanta has some surprising tryers. There is Ray Miller, at Georgia Tech, who will try for the marathon team, a little dash of some 26 miles and a few yards. And there is Elmo Fryer, a Tech welterweight boxer.

CRACKERS WIN ANOTHER, 9-4

Victory Gives Crackers Series by Two Games to One.

By Jimmy Jones.

A warm, radiant sun loosened the muscles in Johnny Morrison's seasoned right whip yesterday, causing that famous "jughandle" curve of his to cut queer capers before the blinking eyes of Knoxville's Smokies for nine innings.

Meanwhile Cracker batsmen were peppering Lute Roy and two successors for 13 base hits to put the getaway game of the series in the bag for Red Barron by a score of 9 to 4.

Today the Crackers pay a flying visit to Nashville, Tenn., for a lone game with Joe Klugman's Vols and the contest means considerable to the home clan if they win it, as they are now in a position to push into forth place provided they add a few more conquests to the two-game winning streak.

Red Barron announced before his departure last night that he would have a look at Frank Coleman, young six-foot-three southpaw from Raleigh, in today's game, starting him for the first time. The Crackers come back home for a series with the fast-travel-

Dixie Track Stars Clash Here This Week

This Year's Event Expected To Be Greatest; Records Sure To Tumble.

This year's Southern conference track and field meet, to be held at Grant field Friday and Saturday of this week, promises to be the greatest in the history of the organization, with many records expected to fall.

Past performances of athletes from the 23 member schools indicate that at least nine new standards will be established when the meet is over Saturday afternoon.

Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, who is in charge of the meet, states that seven schools are rated good enough to carry off the 1932 championship. Alabama, Auburn, Georgia, Tulane, L. S. U., Florida and North Carolina are the teams classed at the top. Tulane is the defending champion.

The 100-yard dash is pretty sure to fall. At least three men are expected to beat the present mark of 9.8 seconds, which is pretty good. Burnett, of Mississippi; Stockton, of L. S. U., and Farmer, of North Carolina, have all been clocked at faster time.

The same men are also counted on to smash the 220-yard dash record, which now stands at 21.4 seconds. And you may be sure that the most interested spectator at the meet will be Coach Ed Hamm, of Georgia Tech. He happens to hold both the 100-yard and 220-yard dash records in the conference meets.

VAULT RECORD.

The pole vault record, held by O'Dell, of Clemson, is in for a real licking. Three men have already bettered the mark this year. They are Don Zimmerman, the Tulane football and track star; Riegels, of Alabama, and Gordy, of L. S. U.

The high jump, held by Stewart, of Auburn, is expected to be bettered by Stewart. And he may lose to Ritchie, a teammate, or David, Georgia's fine jumper.

Swart, a V. P. I. stalwart, is expected to break the shot put record of 47 feet 7 inches. And Bachelor, of Georgia, may smash it, as he is improving regularly.

DISCUS, TOO.

Beard, of Auburn, and Bachelor, of Georgia, are also likely to better the discus record of 140 feet. Bachelor and Legore, the latter a North Carolina man, are also sure to better the javelin mark of 200 feet.

And the relay record is also in danger.

All of which means that the meet on Friday and Saturday will be worth going to see. Track and field athletics in the south have come along with tremendous strides in late years.

Coach Alexander, who is the most capable handler of meets in the south, will run this one off in his usual efficient style. Which means no delays.

Admission will be free on Friday. On Saturday an admission will be charged adults. The conference meet has been held in Birmingham for the past few years and the show in Atlanta should attract a real crowd.

FIVE ATLANTANS ENTER U. S. OPEN

Golfers Will Qualify Over East Lake Club Course June 6.

Five Atlanta golfers filed their entry Saturday afternoon to the United States Golf Association for the sectional qualifying rounds here June 6 of the 1932 national open championship tournament. Play will be on the East Lake Country Club course.

Errie Ball, southeastern professional champion; George Sargent, former open titleholder; Harold Sargent, young son of the East Lake pro; Howard Beckett, Capital City pro, and Dan Sage Jr. are definitely entered, it was learned Saturday.

At least two and possibly four or five other of the city's leading professionals and amateurs are expected to file their entry before Tuesday night at 6 o'clock when the lists close.

Sectional qualifying rounds will be played on 20 of the country's best courses simultaneously on June 6 and the number from each section depends entirely upon the total number of entries from the country at large.

As in the past, it is likely that four players will be eligible to go to the national open from this district, which includes Tennessee, Florida, Alabama and South Carolina.

Qualifying at East Lake will be over the 36-hole route with 18 holes in the morning and another 18 holes during the afternoon.

Keith Conway is the United States Golf Association representative from this section and will be in charge of the East Lake qualifying.

Dan Sage Jr. set a new official course record at Ansley Park Saturday when he carded a brilliant 66, two under par, while playing in the qualifying rounds for the president's trophy tourney. He was playing

WINNER PROVES STAYING POWER IN GREAT DRIVE

Bradley Entry, Tick On, Boatswain Stage Thrilling Finish.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, BALTIMORE, Md., May 14.—(UP)—Burgoo King, Colonel E. R. Bradley's speedy winner of the Kentucky Derby, won the Preakness stakes today in a thrilling, nose-to-nose finish that sent a crowd of 40,000 into a wild tumult of excitement.

Burgoo King, which they said had no speed and could not run on anything but a smooth, fast track, was the hero of a mighty stretch struggle that proved both his speed and gameness beyond further dispute.

At the driving, blanket finish, Burgoo King was a head in front of the Loma stable's Tick On, his chief rival for three-year-old honors. A scant nose back of Tick On was Walter M. Jeffords' Boatswain, a son of Man O' War. Four lengths back came Mad Pursuit, best of the others in the field of nine. It was a three-horse race.

JAMES RIDER.

Eugene James, the 19-year-old jockey who came up from the role of a newsboy on the streets of Louisville to the glory of riding a mount to victory in both the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, gave Burgoo King the same clever, calculating ride as he did last Saturday. Bumped at the start by Mad Pursuit, the son of Bubbling Over was taken to the outside to escape any further interference that might cost him the race.

Boatswain, Lucky Tom and Curacao made the early running, but on the back stretch the latter two folded up and at the half Boatswain, a length in front, was being pursued by Tick On and Burgoo King, the latter moving up strongly and easily. At the three-quarters, Boatswain was still a length in front, with Tick On and Burgoo King running head-to-head in a thrilling match for supremacy between the two.

Entering the stretch, Burgoo King made his bid and moved up to look Boatswain in the eye as they tore towards the stands. Gasps of amazement went up as Tick On seemed to falter and the two leaders crept two lengths ahead of him. Then Robertson began flailing his whip and Tick On responded, charging on the leaders and getting abreast of them again.

CROWD IN FRENZY.

The crowd went into a frenzy, for Tick On was the favorite. For the last 100 yards the three were blanketed and thundered past the wire so close together that only the judges and those in direct line of vision could determine the winner.

It was a splendid finish to the best stake race seen so far this season.

The others scarcely figured, although Mad Pursuit, with Earl Sande riding, ran a creditable race. The remaining finishers in order were War Hero, Gusto, Daisaburo, Curacao and Lucky Tom. Of the original field of 12, Barcelona Pete, Marmion and Portam were scratched.

The race was truly run over a track that had dried out rapidly during the day and was good, almost fast. The time for the mile and three-sixteenths was 1:59 4-5, which compares excellently with the track record of Gal-

TOP FLIGHT WINS IN ACORN STAKES

NEW YORK, May 14.—(UP)—C. V. Whitney's Top Flight, phantom of last year's 2-year-old thoroughbreds, won the featured Acorn stakes at Belmont Park here today from half a dozen of the best 3-year-old fillies in training. She led throughout the mile and won by several lengths of open daylight, being timed in 1:39 over a fast track.

Second money went to the Greentree stable's Parry, and the Wheatley stable's Unique beat Boiling Water for third honors.

Top Flight, a 4-to-5 favorite in the betting, so far outclassed her field that Sonny Workman, her jockey, did not have to rouse her at any stage of the journey. Her victory was the third of the afternoon for the light blue and brown Whitney silks, Three Daggers having won the second race and Caterwaul the Keene Memorial stakes for that establishment. Workman rode all three Whitney winners, as well as W. R. Cole's Osculator, which captured the fourth event. He finished third with Swincraft in the opening number.

Tech and Georgia Quit Dixie College League

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—Georgia and Georgia Tech have withdrawn from the Dixie College Baseball League, but will endeavor to arrange stronger schedules among the southern conferences of this section before the next baseball season, H. J. Stegeman, director of athletics at the University of Georgia, announced today.

Coach Stegeman and W. A. Alexander, coach at Georgia Tech, have been in consultation for several days, during the annual Tech-Georgia series, and the move to withdraw from the league was decided upon late last night. Withdrawal of the two Georgia schools automatically means the failure of the Dixie circuit.

Two-game series among seven or eight members of the Southern Conference are planned for the next baseball season. Plans for the new move will be discussed with other Southern Conference officials at the annual track and field meet in Atlanta next week-end. If the plan works out, it would mean that a suitable way of deciding Southern Conference baseball champions would have been found. Schools that will be invited to work under the new plan are Georgia, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Auburn, Clemson, Florida, North Carolina, Duke, and possibly Vanderbilt and Tennessee. Coaches Alexander and Stegeman will confer at length with other conference officials next week and will decide whether the new plan will work

MAX GRATIFIED AFTER OPENING RING WORKOUT

Champion Is Pleased With Training Camp at Kingston.

BY MAX SCHMELING.

Heavyweight Champion of the World.

KINGSTON, N. Y., May 14.—I have had my first ring workout now for my fight with Jack Sharkey next month, and it has left me well-pleased. I know that when I meet Sharkey I'll be capable of the best scrap of my career so far.

My sparring partners, as my actual training gets under way, are Jack Shaw and Pedro Lopez, husky young fellows who will give me just what I need. Before long Charley Belanger and perhaps some others will come to camp, and I'll make good use of them.

Today I appeared in my first public workout, sparring three rounds. Two of them were against Jack Shaw, while I faced Pedro Lopez in the other. The boxing left me as fresh as I was when the session started, which adds strength to my belief that I am in the best of shape.

I like the camp and the arrangements made for me. There is enough snap in the air to make a fellow step. I have been looking over the country and getting used to the roads that wind through the hills back of my cottage, which is set in the woods, by itself. I'll do a lot of trotting over those roads in the course of my training.

There are facilities here for all sorts of athletics, basketball, handball, tennis and swimming. But it has been too cold to try the swimming yet. I had been eager to get to boxing before, but Joe Jacobs, my manager, wouldn't let me.

190 POUNDS.

I weigh now nearly what I shall for the fight. I hope to go into the ring at 190 pounds, which means I should take off only three pounds. But the way it looks, I may take on weight here. What I weigh does not make any difference, however, just so long as I am in condition.

I got a wonderful reception in Kingston. About four years ago when I first came here to see Max Machon, who was at the late Walk Miller's camp, there was no reception for me. Only the dock rats greeted me while I waited for the ferryboat. Even the rats didn't pay much attention to me.

I am the same man today, only a little older, and the heavyweight champion. That title makes the great difference. But how long will this popularity last if I lose the title?

Jack Dempsey was the idol of the fight fans for a long while after he lost his title. Then he fought King Levinsky—no title at stake—and he didn't do so well. Yet to me he did as well as anyone had a right to expect. He did his best. I was amazed at the way Dempsey was treated after this. They criticized him severely and said some unkind things about his fighting.

FICKLE FANS.

Not anywhere could I find any report where Dempsey was given even a little bit of a break. No one could find the slightest excuse for him in his poor showing. No one suggested that maybe Dempsey had an off day.

When I fought Johnny Risko it was the same. Before the fight they crowded into Risko's room and praised him, patted him on the back and wished him good luck. After I knocked him out it was different. They crowded into my room, these same fans. I went and looked into Risko's room. There was poor Johnny, forlorn and dejected, his head in his hands, and alongside him sat little Jimmy Dunn, his friend and manager.

So I shall not be surprised if some day the crowd turns away if I lose. But right now this losing business is farthest from my mind.

Lead Week's Golf Parade

ATLANTA OPEN BEGINS FRIDAY AT EAST LAKE

Tourney Is Forerunner of Many Major Events.

By Roy White.

Atlanta's army of golfers will start the long grind of competitive golf that will continue throughout the summer months, with the first Atlanta open championship scheduled for Friday on the No. 2 East Lake Country Club course. It is the first big tournament of the year and is being sponsored by the Atlanta Golf Association and open to every golfer in the city.

There will be 36 holes of medal play, 18 in the morning and another 18 in the afternoon. Following the first 18-hole play the field will be divided into two groups, with the lowest scores in Class A and the others in Class B. Any professional who fails to qualify in the Class A group will be automatically eliminated from further competition, as the Class B group will be open only to amateurs.

Cash prizes will be given to the three professionals with the lowest scores and suitable prizes and golf merchandise will be given to the amateur winners in both Class A and Class B groups.

An entry fee of $3 will be charged and entries will be received through noon Thursday, May 19, by communicating with George Sargent, professional at the East Lake Club.

Keith Conway is chairman of the tournament committee and together with Paul Duke, East Lake representative, and Errie Ball and George Sargent, East Lake professionals, will be in charge of the tournament.

Every golfer in Atlanta is particularly invited to participate in the event, as it is the first of its kind to be attempted here and is the first competitive golf for many of the city's best players.

It will also serve as a preliminary round of practice for the Southeastern professional golfers' tourney in Macon May 24, 25 and 26, the national open qualifying June 6, the southern amateur June 13 at Birmingham, and the annual Georgia amateur scheduled for the Capital City course. July 5.

Scribes To Play Tourney May 30.

Atlanta's annual newspaper golf tournament, the highlight of the year among the "scribes," will be played May 30-June 4 on the Forrest Hills course, near Avondale Estates, it was announced Saturday.

Forrest Hill, owner and manager of the course, extended the use of the course and clubhouse and was accepted by the committee, which is composed of Ed Miles, of the Journal; Tobe Edwards, of the Georgian, and Roy White, of The Constitution.

Every employe of the three Atlanta newspapers and the news agencies that serve the three daily papers is eligible and urged to participate.

The players will be grouped into flights of eight each and there will be as many flights as necessary to take care of every entry.

An entry fee of $1 will be charged and will go towards the purchase of prizes and golf merchandise for winners and runners-up in each flight.

The Forrest Hills course is one of the sportiest nine-hole layouts in the city and measures 2,900 yards. It is a par 35 and has two long par five dog-leg holes.

Qualifying Starts In Ansley Tourney.

Qualifying rounds for the annual president's trophy tournament for members of the Ansley Park Golf Club will start this afternoon and continue throughout the week.

The players will be grouped into flights of 16 each and the defeated eight in the first round will form consolation flights. Full handicaps will apply in each match.

O. C. Blackmon is the defending champion and will be one of the favorites to retain his title.

Tommy Wilson, club professional, together with members of the tourney committee, will be in charge of the tournament. The committee consists of Parks Huntt, J. J. Jones Jr. and H. C. Howell.

Teams Play Today In Golf League.

Forrest Hills and Ansley Park will furnish the only excitement of the North Georgia Golf league in the second round of the schedule at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the Forrest Hills course.

West End and Ingleside, and Marietta and Rome have postponed their matches until a later date, due to many of the players being in schools out of the city.

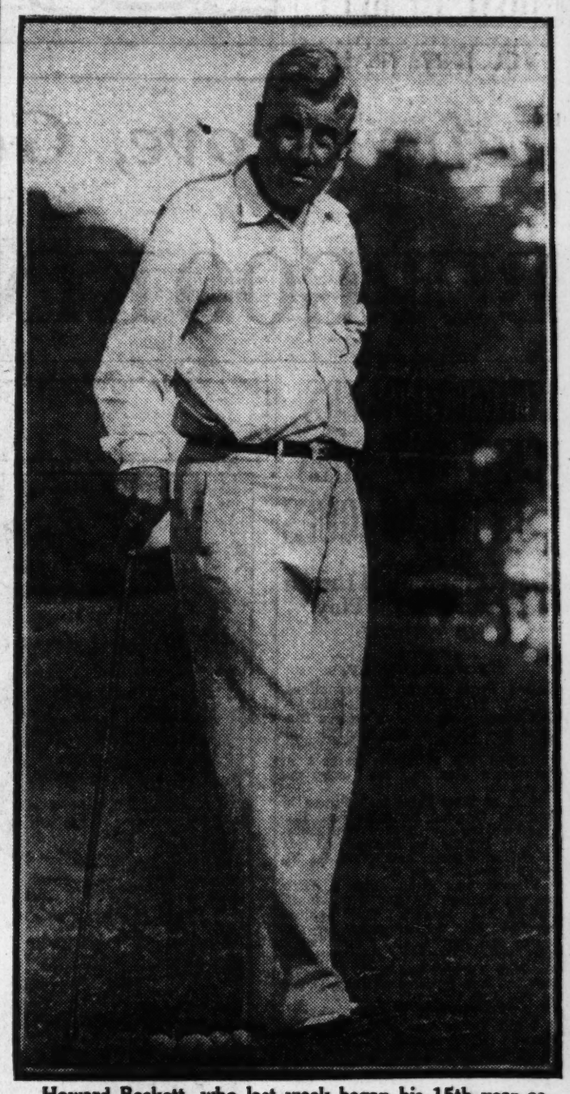

A dual match between members of the West End and Marietta teams has been scheduled for this afternoon on the Cobb county course.

West End, the defending champion, and Forrest Hills were winners in the opening round two weeks ago.

NEW CHAMPION.

CHANTILLY, France, May 14.—(UP)—Mme. Renee Devilmoran defeated Mme. Simon Monier, 5 and 4, to win the French women's amateur golf championship today.

Veteran Atlanta Pro

Howard Beckett, who last week began his 15th year as professional at the Capital City Country Club, explains in a story below what it will mean to Atlanta if one of the P. G. A. "clinics" is established here as planned in an announcement from New York.

Atlanta Likely To Get New P. G. A. Golf Clinic

By Ralph McGill.

This means, according to Howard Beckett, the well-known Capital City Club professional, that Atlanta will become a golf center for the meetings of the golf professionals and assistants in the southeastern section, if the clinic is established here. The plan had been put into effect in New York.

Credit for this forward step in the profession goes to Charley Hall, of Birmingham, president of the P. G. A. for this year. Hall advanced the idea a good many months ago but it was not until the recent executive meeting of the P. G. A. in Chicago that official action was taken and funds appropriated for the establishment of the clinic.

It is now planned to establish a "clinic" in each major section of the country and Atlanta is in line for the southeastern clinic, according to reports from the New York office.

The public hears but comparatively little of the working professional, the touring exhibitionists getting most of the headlines. But the club professional who is on the job all the year round is the backbone of the game. And this clinic idea is but one example of the care and detail which the

Hendrix attained some local fame when he walked and ran from Miami to Atlanta in 1928. And that same year (it was really his year) he was the only man to finish the 10,000-meter run at Georgia Tech in the Olympic trials of that year. And later he ran down a colored boy who had taken some silk hose from the Globe department store. That was just a breeze.

"I thought the folks at home might get a laugh out of knowing that the Georgia flyer is still nutty enough to try to be an athlete," he writes. "I am entered in the 50,000-meter walk here Sunday, May 15, which is the equivalent of 31 miles. I hope to get back to Georgia this summer and if I do am going to keep walking until I reach the top of Stone Mountain."

But with distance walkers, runners and amateur boxers trying for the Olympic team and Wesley Argo and Buddy Calloway entered in the 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis, I am wondering if the Empire state isn't turning out plenty of young men who are trying to make good in athletics? At any rate, they aren't picking out soft spots.

HICKMAN BOOSTS WRESTLING.

Wrestling has gained a real asset in Herman Hickman, the big Tennessee football tackle, who has been going at such a great pace after graduation from "school" in New York.

There is no use hinting that he takes part in framed matches. He dances with glee after each victory and insists that he is going to win the title. They seem to have just turned the big boy loose and told him to go ahead.

Hickman thinks that Jim McMillen, Milo Steinborn, Earl McCready and George Zaharias are the best wrestlers he has met. He hasn't yet wrestled Ray Steele, Jim Londos or Ed Lewis. McCready and McMillen, and probably Zaharias, are about as tough as the ring knows. Hickman has lost to McCready and had a draw with him. But he keeps going along. He would be a real attraction in Atlanta.

MORE JURY NOTES.

One of the Fulton county juries, which includes as a member Tubby Walton, well-known man about town, was deadlocked at six to six last week. Tubby Walton began singing in his terrible tenor which sounds like scrap iron being towed over a tin roof. After two ballads the jury came over to Tubby's way of thinking on one ballot.

WOMEN GOLFERS PLAY THIS WEEK

Qualifying Rounds for First Tourney Monday at Capital City.

A monthly match play tournament for women golfers of the city and sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association will be played this week on the Capital City Country Club course in the first of a series of major golf tournaments during the week.

Qualifying rounds will be played at 9 o'clock Monday morning and Mrs. Charles Black Jr., Capital City representative in the association, and Miss Mary Warren, chairman of the A. W. G. A. tournament committee, together with Howard Beckett and Willie Livingstone, club professionals, will be in charge of the tournament.

Play will be in twosomes and it is requested that the players have as near the same handicaps as possible, in order to speed up the play. Class A will tee off first with Class B and Class C players scheduled to leave the first tee immediately after the first group.

The players will be grouped into flights of eight each with trophies and prizes to the winner and runner-up in each flight. Should there be as many as 48 entries, the championship flight will include 16 players and the defeated eight in the first round will form a consolation flight.

Match play will start at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning and full handicaps will apply in each of the matches.

An entry fee of $1 will be charged and Mrs. W. D. Doak, secretary of the association will be at the first tee to receive the entry and membership rues for the year.

O'Neal Winner Of Sweepstakes.

John O'Neal had the low gross for the morning with a 77.

Other low scorers for the one-day event were John Ezzell, M. Smith and Aubrey Womack.

Emory Net Team Beats Vanderbilt

Emory University's varsity tennis team handed the Vanderbilt netmen their second defeat in two days Saturday afternoon on Dobbs and Dewey courts at Emory. Emory won, 5-3.

Harold Schwartz won the first match for Vanderbilt, defeating Jack Boykin, Emory, 7-5, 6-4. Tommy Anderson made 2-0 for Vanderbilt by overcoming Fincher McDaniel, Emory, 6-4, 6-4.

Emory won its first match when Nick Polites defeated George Pryor, Vanderbilt, 6-4, 6-4. Bridges, Emory, evened the score by overcoming Ross Chesire, Vanderbilt, in the only three-set singles match, 8-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Pierre Howard's close 9-7, 7-5 victory over Davis Clark, Vanderbilt, gave Emory the lead in matches, 3-2. Ed Jones, Emory, took the last singles match from Nathan Woodruff, Vanderbilt, 7-5, 8-6.

Vanderbilt won the first doubles match when Harold Schwartz and George Pryor defeated Jack Boykin and Fincher McDaniel, Emory, 6-2, 6-3. Nick Polites and Pierre Howard overcame a 3-6 lead in the first set to win out over Tommy Anderson and Davis Clark, Vanderbilt, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3. This game Emory the match with five victories.

Young Dan Sage Sets New Record at Ansley

Dan Sage Jr., with a 66, two strokes under par, set a new official course record at Ansley Park Saturday afternoon while qualifying for the annual president's trophy tournament which will continue through next Saturday.

Young Sage, a senior at Boys' High, was playing with John Kilpatrick, John Welch and Parks Huntt. He carded seven birdies in setting the new record. The mark beat that of Harry Ansley, which was set several years ago.

Qualifying rounds in the president's cup were scheduled to start today but at a recent meeting of the golf committee it was decided to start Saturday instead and run through next Saturday.

Sage's card follows:

Par out	443	454	343	—34
Sage out	432	543	334	—31
Par in	443	454	343	—34—68
Sage in	344	564	243	—35—31—66

Teague and Hughes Low at Druid Hills.

Fred Teague and Dr. Claude Hughes with nets of 66 each shared low net honors Saturday in the final of the qualifying rounds for the President's cup tournament on the Druid Hills course. Teague had a gross of 77, while Hughes was one stroke back, but with the aid of handicaps, they finished even.

Julius Hughes, a former city champion, won medal honor for the day with a 72, one over par, and was a member of a foursome that turned in the best four scores of the day. Oliver and Bill Healey and Roby Robinson were other members of the foursome, which had a best ball of 30 for the first nine holes. Ten birdies were carded on the first nine.

First round matches in the tournament will start this afternoon and continue through Wednesday afternoon with the second round scheduled to be completed Saturday afternoon. Harry Stephens, the club professional, will be in charge of the tourney, and full handicaps will apply.

The pairings:

FIRST FLIGHT.

Fred Teague vs. J. O. Chiles.
S. R. Black Jr. vs. Oliver Healey.
Dr. J. J. Clark vs. Jay Glenn.
Fred Snook vs. Jess Draper.
Y. F. Freeman Jr. vs. Dana Belser.
Dr. M. D. Huff vs. E. A. Bancker.
Dr. E. G. Ballenger vs. Julius Hughes.

SECOND FLIGHT.

L. L. Taney vs. J. F. Settle.
W. S. McLaren vs. B. M. Grant.
H. Bartee, bye.
B. E. Shields vs. Y. F. Freeman Sr.

Williams, Meng Share Honors.

C. A. Williams and L. F. Meng, with nets of 70, shared first prize Saturday afternoon in a blind bogey tournament on the East Lake courses. Second prize also was shared as five golfers finished with cards of 71. They were J. Houston, E. P. Moore, Bobby Chambers, W. McMillan and F. E. Atkins.

Other low scorers were E. B. Hook, W. A. Fuller, J. J. Nichols, J. W. Adams, J. M. Oliver, F. S. Nesbitt, Charlie Yates, K. A. Stephenson, O. M. Jackson, R. A. Graver, E. R. Hurt, J. C. Thompson and Berrien Moore junior.

Another of the regular Sunday afternoon dog-fight tournaments will be played this afternoon on the East Lake course.

John Grant Low At Capital City.

John Grant Jr., with a 73, two over par, was low Saturday on the Capital City Country Club course in the final practice rounds preparatory to the Atlanta open tourney Friday at East Lake. It was also the last opportunity for Capital City members to practice for their annual president's trophy tournament, which starts Wednesday.

Three eagles were scored on the Capital City course Saturday afternoon by a threesome composed of W. C. Warren, Jim Ison and Charlie Nunnally. Warren's eagle two was scored on the 14th when an iron shot rolled into the cup. It is a par four 410-yard hole.

Ison's third shot rolled into the cup on the first green and Nunnally followed suit with an eagle three on the par five dog-leg third hole.

Final Rounds At Key Course.

Final rounds in a two-day blind bogey tourney for municipal golfers will be played today on the James L. Key course. The event is being sponsored by Gene Cook, the new professional and is open to every municipal golfer in the city.

Golfers Play At Candler Park.

Candler Park golfers, both men and women, will complete the final rounds of a two-ball sweepstakes tournament today on the Candler Park course. Wallace Linquist, the professional, will be in charge.

Looney To Reach Atlanta Monday To Make Burgoo

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 14.—James T. Looney, Kentucky's burgoo king, accompanied by Chief of Police Ernest Thompson, will arrive in Atlanta late Monday to personally supervise the making of burgoo for the annual police barbecue and picnic.

Looney, for years the bluegress king of burgoo makers, is the man for whom Colonel E. R. Bradley's famous Derby winner, Burgoo King, was named, and it came about after Bradley had enjoyed a dish of burgoo immensely at one of his charity race meetings here three years ago telling Mr. Looney he was naming one of his best colts Burgoo King, in his honor.

Looney is himself a horseman during spare moments from his burgoo making, and the counter of his grocery. One of his best horses was Sands of Pleasure, which held the track record at Churchill Downs for a mile and a quarter for several years, until Twenty Grand smashed it last year in winning the Derby.

Georgians, according to Kentuckians, will forget brunswick stew after they have sampled burgoo.

SEARS, ROEBUCK TURNEY OPENS

Qualifying Rounds Are Being Held at Piedmont Park.

By Roy White.

Qualifying rounds for an invitation golf tournament being sponsored by Sears, Roebuck and Company, will start today at Piedmont Park, in the first of a series of numerous major tournaments to be played on Atlanta courses during the next few months.

The tournament is open to every amateur golfer in the city and there will be no entry fee charged. Trophies and prizes will be given to the winner and runner-up in each flight and there will be as many flights of 16 players as necessary to take care of every entry.

Although the qualifying starts today and continues through next Saturday afternoon, golfers may register at Sears, Roebuck on Ponce de Leon avenue any time this week and play the rounds before Saturday night.

Qualifying rounds must be played on the Piedmont Park municipal course, but the matches can be played on any course accessible and convenient to both participants. Handicaps will not apply in any of the matches, and each round results must be turned in at either the Piedmont Park clubhouse or at Sears, Roebuck.

One week will be given over to the first round of play and all first-round matches must be completed by May 28, with the remaining matches scheduled for the week of May 29-June 4.

A trophy for the winner of the championship flight along with other prizes and golf merchandise for winners and runners-up in other flights are on display at 185 Peachtree street.

C. T. McCullough and E. W. Heistand are in charge of the registrations at Sears, Roebuck, while Billy Wilson and H. O. Davis, Piedmont Park professionals, are co-operating at the municipal course and receiving entries at the club.

Jennings Tough Foe For Scissors King

Paul Jones, who employs the hook scissors to subdue his opponents, will meet "Blue Sun" Jennings, the Cherokee Indian, in the feature event of Tuesday night's wrestling card at the auditorium.

Jones' hook scissors is one of the most painful holds in the game. The idea of most holds in wrestling is not to actually pin the man but to so weaken him that a comparatively simple pinning hold will be effective. When Jones pins the shoulders of a hook-scissors victim he does it with a simple arm hold, the said victim being all in at the time.

Jones did not develop the hold riding bronchos or breaking sacks of corn as the one-time famous Joe Stecher claimed to have done in developing his body scissors. Jones figured out the hold when he discovered that his long and powerful legs enabled him to obtain a unique leverage.

The hook scissors finds Jones' right led hooked about the opponent at the waist. The left leg is thrown over the right so that the left knee catches, or hooks, over the right foot. This hold will not slip. It is next to impossible to break it except by getting to the ropes. The referee has to unwrap the Texan's legs after a fall brought about by the hold.

The scissors never actually pins the opponent. Neither does Ed Lewis' headlock or Steinborn's bear hug. They simply weaken and reduce the opponent so that he can be pinned. But they rank among the spectacular holds and are reasons why crowds turn out to see them applied.

"Blue Sun" Jennings is a real match for Jones. In fact the match is one of the most even in months. Jones has an advantage of experience and should win. But Jennings is tough and skilled.

The second match brings in Roy (Father) Lumpkin and Narzzareno Poggi. Both are popular here.

Under the new plan announced by Matchmaker Henry Weber, both matches will be decided by the best two out of three falls. Both matches will be limited to 90 minutes each as against the former plan of two hours for the main event and one for the semi-windup with only the main event being decided by two falls.

Tickets are on sale at Davison-Paxon's and at the Piedmont Hatters. Ladies are admitted to any seat in the auditorium for 75 cents.

Mark Arie and Nation's Leading Trap Shooters Here This Week

CAPITOL CLUB HOST TO MEET ON WEDNESDAY

Hicks and Freeman Lead Field in Saturday's Warm-Up.

By Ralph McGill.

There were 200 clay pigeons a-hanging in the air Saturday afternoon at the newly organized Capitol Gun Club, but when Homer Freeman and Captain M. E. Hicks finished there were just five of them theoretically still up there.

Captain Hicks smashed 99 out of 100, 50 of them handicap targets, and Homer Freeman, Atlanta's shooting copper, broke 96 under the same conditions.

Hicks, who is a delightful shooter, represents the Peters shell company, and was ineligible for the club competition and Freeman was therefore the winner.

The shoot was the inaugural for the club, a sort of warm-up for the Georgia state trap shoot to be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week at the Capitol Club with Mark Arie, greatest of all trap shots, and a host of the nation's best shots already entered. It was fitting that Homer Freeman, the Atlanta veteran, should have won Saturday's shoot. Twenty years ago he was a champion. And he is still able to compete with the best of them.

The clay pigeons are intimidated when Freeman shoots. His roar to the boy at the lever scares the pigeons to greater speed. But they don't get far. Freeman is probably the quickest shot in the game. The pigeon barely gets its nozzle out of the trap before Freeman has broken it into blue powder.

He broke 49 in the singles 50 and then, shooting a handicap 50 from the 23-yard line, broke 47. It was a great display of shooting.

It is also fitting that the Georgia state shoot will offer as the second event on the program Wednesday "The Freeman Handicap," a 60 target affair with handicaps from 17 to 23 yards.

The 60 targets will be a sort of birthday candle affair for the Atlanta veteran. He is 60 years old, but still able to "bust them" with the best in the game. To hear him roar at a target is worth the trip to the sidelines.

Probably the best bit of individual shooting Saturday afternoon was turned in by J. L. Tway, son of C. W. Tway, one of the officials of the new club.

FINE SHOW.

Tway had a 45 for his 50 singles. And then, shooting from the 19-yard line in the handicap 50, he broke the entire string to get a splendid 95. It was a magnificent bit of handicap shooting.

Young Tway uses a curious sort of equipment in his shooting. It is a compensator, a barrel arrangement which may be fitted on to any gun. The compensators, I learned, seeking to fill a vast space of ignorance regarding compensators on guns, comes in five styles, giving a full choke, a medium choke, and so on. The gun barrel is cut off six inches and the compensator fits on to make it up. Thus one may have one gun and by purchasing the five compensators have five guns in one. The second advantage claimed for the appliance is that the gases escape from slots in the compensator and do not follow the shot out. This gives a better pattern of shot, the exploding gasses not being in there behind to scatter them. One may see the gasses escape through the slots, so the theory must be correct. At any rate it does not seem to harm Tway's shooting.

TIE FOR THIRD.

Joe Cothran and J. P. Pullin were tied for third place in the shoot with 94 each. Joe Chilton, T. M. Cassels, Mrs. Dillata Jacobs and Frank Brigham were all next with 91 each. J. M. Brantley was the lone 90.

It was a pleasure to see O. B. Keeler, one of the nation's most popular newspapermen, step out and shoot a fine 88. The old boy hasn't been shooting for many years, but he has a great form and should increase his score this year.

H. McKenzie led the 50 singles with a score of 49. The doubles saw some good shooting, C. W. Tway having a perfect 24 to lead that event.

All in all, it was a fine afternoon and a splendid inaugural. There is no more beautiful gun club in the world than the Capitol City Club on Hollywood road.

GREAT VIEW.

One stands at the traps and looks out into a great wide valley filled with trees. Beyond, peeping over the top of a far hill, is a bit of Atlanta's skyline—tall, white buildings that catch the sun.

The traps are on top of a hill and the pigeons fly out with the background of green behind them, to fall to pieces, or whole, into the deep grass on the sharply descending hill.

The state shoot is attracting some great shooters. Word was received late Saturday that Mark Arie, greatest of all trap shots, would be here for the meet. Arie is at the top or near it, year after year. His stocky figure is known from coast to coast, wherever the trap guns boom.

There are a number of other fine shooters coming, any one of whom may beat Arie. John Noel, of Nashville, Tenn., is one. He was a member of the American Olympic trapshooting team in 1924.

T. K. (Tackhole) Lee, the best all-around shooter in the world, will also be present. So will Paul Earle, greatest singles shooter. Ike Andrews, former national handicap champion, and other notables have entered.

Savannah, Ga., will send a squad as will Tallahassee and Eustace, Fla.

ENTRY LIST.

The list of out-of-town shooters already received, follows:

Mark Arie, Champaign, Ill.; Ralph and Rock Jenkins, Orleans, Ind.; Joe and Paul Herstand, Hillsboro, Ohio; O. S. Stegall, Richmond, Ind.; Fred Kahler, New Albany, Ind.; John Noel, Nashville; Joe Chilton and John Kreis, Knoxville; Ed Flynn and H. R. Marriott, Mobile; Walton Hill, Montgomery; T. K. Lee, Birmingham; Paul Earle, Starr, S. C.; Ike Andrews, W. W. Lancaster and H. O. Cottington, Spartanburg; M. T. LaPitte, Estelle, S. C.; D. H. McCulloch, Charlotte; C. I. Cooper, Greenwood, S. C.; T. B. Deen, president of Florida trapshooting organization; Neil Wade Jr., and Ruben Ragland, Jacksonville; H. E. Johnson, Haynes City, Fla.; W. R. Beckliff, Tampa; E. E. Bishop, Dr. J. W. Henegan, Bradenton; A. S. Johnson, Shamrock, Ga.; J. R. Royall, E. E. Bush, J. A. McCants and L. S. Lossing, Tallahassee; R. I. Potter and four companions, yet unnamed, all of Eustace, Fla.; W. W. Sprague, J. L. McCluskey, W. W. Stoddard and Charles Roumtree, Savannah; J. W. Robertson, Brooklett, Ga.; Zach Offut and Dr. George McGinnis, Louisville, Ga.; G. F. Alford and C. A. Brannon, Albany, Ga.; Joe Reynolds, Waynesboro; Red Lindstedt, Johns Island, S. C.; Karl Lamprecht, Cottington, Ohio; and Bart Lewis, Beardstown, Ill.

MORE EXPECTED.

Others are expected to enter this week. They, with the fine squad of local shooters, will make up a great entry list and bring back the old days of three years ago when Atlanta was the southern center for trapshooting.

A fine lot of trophies and prizes have been prepared for the competitors.

The first day's shooting, Wednesday, will see the 200 handicap targets and the Freeman handicap. On Thursday the Georgia class championship and the Georgia doubles championship will be shot. Friday will see the Georgia amateur and the Georgia amateur handicap shoots.

The scores in the Saturday's opening shoot of the new club, with handicap distance for the second 50, in parenthesis, were:

A Great King

BURGOO KING WINS PREAKNESS

lant Knight, which ran it in 1:58 a week ago.

BURGOO'S EARNINGS.

Burgoo King's victory netted Bradley $50,375, bringing the colt's total earnings to the impressive figure of $108,825. The gross value of the race was $60,375, second money being $5,000, third $3,000 and fourth $2,000.

The victory places Burgoo King in the shrine occupied by Gallant Fox and Sir Barton, the only others to win both the Derby and Preakness.

Mutuel prices were:

Burgoo King, $8:50, $5, $4.
Tick On, $3.80, $3.
Boatswain, $6.80.

All the runners carried 126 pounds.

The winning owner, Colonel Bradley, became possessor of the Woodlawn vase, the trophy that goes with the race, for one year. He was not present to see the race, attending the Belmont meeting instead.

CRACKERS PLAY VOLS ONE GAME

By Jimmy Jones.

The Atlanta Crackers will skip over to Nashville today to get in a Sabbath game with Joe Klugman's Volnteers and then will scuffle back into the Pullmans for a hurried return home, where on tomorrow they begin a four-game series with the league-leading Memphis Chickasaws.

Memphis is here for single games Monday and Tuesday and a doubleheader on Wednesday. Then Little Rock drops in to finish out a solid week of baseball on the home lot. By the time this siege of games is over the Crackers hope to be on speaking terms with the teams in the first division.

Announcement was made from the Cracker business office Saturday afternoon that First baseman John Fenton, obtained from Memphis, has been placed on the active roster, along with Pitcher Frank Coleman, who likely will pitch today's game in Nashville, owing to the fact that the Vols have an array of lefthanded sluggers and that Mr. Coleman is a lefthanded pitcher. Fenton made his debut with the Crackers yesterday.

Waivers have been asked on Catcher Charley Rowland, who has hit well since joining the club, but has been out of the lineup intermittently due to a bad ankle.

Pitcher Wilbur Wehde, obtained from the White Sox, has been given his unconditional release, to make room for Coleman. Barron liked young Wehde and thought he had promise, but found that he needed another lefthander on his staff, as most of the rival teams, including Knoxville, are trotting out plenty of lefthanded hitters.

AUBURN BEATS TECH TRACKMEN

By Mongin Brumby.

Taking ten first places in the 14 events scheduled, Auburn's famed track team defeated Coach Ed Hamm's Yellow Jackets Saturday afternoon on Grant field, 83-43. The Tigers showed a marked superiority in every department save the 100-yard dash, shot putt, javelin and high jump.

The freshmen of Tech partly atoned for the defeat of the varsity by trouncing the Tiger Cubs, 70-42.

Galloway, of Tech, dashed to victory in the 100-yard event, with Kimbrell, of Auburn, second, and DuPree, of Auburn, third. It seemed to be an ill omen for the Jackets to finish first, for from then on the Alabamans pushed them almost out of the picture.

NEAR RECORD.

DuPree, of Auburn, won the 220-yard dash in the splendid time of 21:5 seconds, within one-tenth of a second of the Southern conference record for the event. Galloway, of Tech, finished second, and Kelley, of Auburn, third.

The gruelling mile-run was won by McQueen, of Auburn, with Gegenheimer, of Tech, second, and Murphy, of Auburn, third. "Sugar" Cain, of Tech, won the shot put when he tossed the 16-pound sphere a distance of 43 feet 9 1-2 inches, Beard, of Auburn, was second, and Holmes, of Auburn, third.

Stewart, of Auburn, flitted over the high hurdles in the 120-yard event to win in the fast time of 15:2 seconds. Richey and Killebrew, both of Auburn, finished second and third, respectively.

EASY VICTORY.

In the two-mile run, McQueen, of Auburn, led the way, winning without visible effort. Plant, of Auburn, was second, and Murphy, of Tech, third.

"Tarzan" Lackey won the javelin throw, with Graydon, of Tech, second, and Cain, third.

Creighton, of Auburn, finished first in the 440-yard dash with O'Hara, of Auburn, second and Goldsmith, of Tech, third. But the hero of that event was a sandy-haired lad answering to the name of "Schnozzle" LaForge. Following his "Jimmy Durant" around the track, he set a terrific pace for the first 300 yards; the spirit was willing but the flesh was weak, forcing him to fall back as the end neared.

The decisive manner in which the Auburn team took the Tech crew into camp broods ill for opposing teams in the Southern conference meet, to be held at Tech Saturday.

SUMMARY.

100-Yard Dash—Galloway, Tech; Kimbrell, Auburn; DuPree, Auburn. 10 seconds.

120-Yard High Hurdles—Stewart, Auburn; Richey, Auburn; Killebrew, Auburn. 15:2 seconds.

440-Yard Dash — Creighton, Auburn; O'Hara, Auburn; Goldsmith, Tech. 51:2.

Two-Mile Run—McQueen, Auburn; Plant, Auburn; Murphy, Tech. 10 minutes 8:5.

Discus—Beard, Auburn; Cain, Tech; Killebrew, Auburn. 130 feet 8 inches.

Javelin—Lackey, Tech; Graydon, Tech; Cain, Tech. 175 feet 9 inches.

Broad Jump—Kimbrell, Auburn; Spievak, Tech; McMichael, Tech. 21 feet 10 inches.

880-Yard—Huff, Auburn; Yarbrough, Tech; Jones, Auburn. 2:01.6.

High Jump—Stewart, Tech and Richey, Auburn, tied; McCarty, Tech. 5 feet 10½ inches.

Jacobs, Partner Victors in Berlin

BERLIN, May 14.—(UP)—Miss Helen Jacobs, of California, and Jacques Brugnon, of France, won over Fraulein Anne Peitz, of Germany, and Sperling, of Denmark, 6-4, 6-3, in mixed doubles play of the Berlin tennis championships today.

STARS NAMED.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 14.—(AP)—Lieutenants B. W. Brady, C. J. Mansfield and E. W. Mayo were chosen to represent the United States in the modern pentathlon at the coming Olympic games, following completion of the final trials here today.

U. S. CUP TEAM ENTERS FINALS OF ZONE PLAY

Americans Win Third Straight Victory Over Mexican Squad.

NEW ORLEANS, May 14.—(AP)—The United States Davis cup tennis team drove its way into the finals of the North Amerizan zone today by winning its third straight match from Mexico.

Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison defeated Ricardo Tapia and Alfonso Unda, 6-1, 6-2, 3-6, 9-7, in the doubles match, filled with the sparkling play of the youthful Tapia. The gallery was on the edge of the seats during the last two sets and applauded both teams as they left the court.

The victory today clinched the series for the Americans. They already had won two singles matches, Ellsworth Vines, national champion, yesterday defeating Unda, while Allison won from Tapia. The series will not be affected by the results of the two final singles matches tomorrow.

ONLY HOPE.

Tapia was a last-minute substitute for Eduardo Mestre in the Mexican doubles pair. Ernesto Lopez, nonplaying captain, said he believed the Tapia-Unda combination his strongest. Mexico's only hope lay in a victory in the doubles. The Mexicans would have had to win today's doubles and tomorrow's singles in order to turn back the Americans.

In the North American zone finals later this month the Americans will meet the Australians, who today won their third straight victory over the Cubans at Havana.

After overwhelming the Mexicans in the first two sets, the Americans before they realized it, found the third one snatched up by the Mexicans. The latter had calmed down from the excitement of the opening play. On their part the Americans let down on their attack and their opponents quickly took the offense with an attack that would not be stopped.

OFF STRIDE.

The Americans, caught off their stride, began to miss, while the Mexicans shot through placement after placement. They took the first three games quickly and then advanced to the set finish, dropping only three to the Americans. Tapia was hitting balls from every angle of the court, some of them even on the wood of his racket. Unda teamed with him nicely, stepping in to kill when Tapia made the openings.

The final set looked at first as though the Mexicans would carry through again, taking another quick lead this time at 4-2. But the strain told on them as the set jockeyed from four-all to seven-all and Unda's serve weakened in the final game to allow the Americans to drive to a 9-7 victory and the match.

In an exhibition match late today, Frank X. Shields, of the United States team, and Frankie Parker, local high school tennis wonder and national boys' champion, paired to defeat Eduardo Hestre and Angel Roldan, of the Mexican team, in doubles, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1.

VANDYTRACKMEN BOW TO GEORGIA

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—Winning 12 out of 15 first places, the Georgia track team ended its home season here this afternoon with an 84-50 victory over Vanderbilt University.

Captain Ralph Owens, who made his last appearance on the home field this afternoon, and Graham Batchellor, sophomore weight artist, led the Bulldogs to victory with three first places each, just as they have in almost every other Georgia dual meet. Captain Owens scored in the 100, 220, and broad jump, while Batchellor swept the weights.

THE SUMMARY.

220—Owens (Georgia) first; Woodward (Vandy) second; Stoinoff (Georgia) third. Time, 22.6.

440—Williams (Georgia) first; Holliday (Vandy) second; Schuster (Georgia) third. Time, 50.8.

880—Still (Georgia) first; Samuels (Vandy) second; Baker (Georgia) third. Time, 2:04.4.

Mile—Samuels (Vandy) first; Pickett (Vandy) second; Edmonds (Georgia) third. Time, 4:37.8.

Two-Mile—Pickett (Vandy) first; Proctor (Vandy) second; Arrendale (Georgia) third. Time, 10:30.5.

120-High Hurdles—Crenshaw (Georgia) first; King (Vandy) second; Tigert (Vandy) third. Time, .16.

220-Low Hurdles—Maddox (Georgia) first; Nichols (Vandy) second; King (Vandy) third.. Time, 26.7.

Shot Put—Batchelor (Georgia) first; Crouch (Georgia) second; Fortune (Vandy) third. Distance, 45 feet 4¾ inches.

Discus—Batchelor (Georgia) first; Crouch (Georgia) second; Newton (Vandy) third. Distance, 138 feet 8-10 inch.

Javelin—Batchelor (Georgia) first; Crouch (Georgia) second; Smith (Vandy) third. Distance, 199 feet 1 inch.

Pole Vault—Dickens (Georgia) first; Davis (Georgia) second; Fortune (Vandy) third. Height, 12 feet 6 inches.

Broad Jump—Owens (Georgia) first; Dickens (Georgia) second; Johnston (Vandy) third. Distance, 21 feet 10½ inches.

High Jump—David (Georgia) first; Newton (Vandy) second; Towns (Georgia) third. Height, 6 feet 1½ inches.

Relay—Vandy (Mansfield, Kennedy, Holliday and Woodward.) Time, 3:27.8.

AUBURN BEATS PETRELS, 12-5, IN FINAL GAME

Six Seniors Close Out College Careers at Rose Bowl.

By Jack Troy.

Five Auburn regulars and one for Oglethorpe finished their college careers with a grand flourish Saturday afternoon at the Rose Bowl as Sam McAllister's two-time champions of the Dixie league pounded out their second straight victory for a clean sweep of the Petrel series, making it seven triumphs in the last seven games.

Captain Clifford Smith, All-American last season, has been handicapped by illness most of the season, but he was on the mound for Auburn in the final game of his college career and ably demonstrated why he merited the highest of America's collegiate baseball honors.

The Tchula, Miss., boy gave up 11 hits, most of which were kept scattered, and his teammates rallied behind him with their potent bats and brilliant fielding to give him a 12-to-5 victory in his farewell game.

Smith's mound magic thus remains a mystery to Oglethorpe, for in two years he has pitched against the Petrels four times and been victorious each time. He has a great record for his three years at Auburn, having won 17 games while losing only five.

FINE FIELDING.

Alternate Captain Harry Lloyd, of Lindale, Ga., All-Dixie league first baseman last season, closed out his career with a season's record of 138 putouts without an error and had a perfect day at bat with four hits in as many times up. He hit a home run over the left field fence with two on in the fourth inning and doubled with one on in the ninth.

Duck Riley, Birmingham, stellar second baseman; Ike Lewis, Chapman, steady third baseman, and Slick Kaley, Warrior, leading Dixie league catcher, all played great ball as they bowed out of the college pastime.

Parker Bryant, Oglethorpe, who has not been hitting particularly hard this season, came through in his final game with three solid hits in four times at bat and fielded his first base position cleanly. Big, heavy-set Parker slammed out a home run up the bank in right field with one on in the second inning.

Belton Clarke, Petrel sophomore, opposed Smith on the mound for eight and one-third innings, and during his stay Auburn batsmen reached him for 13 hits and 12 runs.

CLARK EFFECTIVE.

Clark was effective in all save two innings, the fourth and the ninth. Auburn rallies produced five runs in each frame.

Hal Martin, Oglethorpe shortstop, made a fine running catch over his shoulder of a Texas leaguer in the sixth.

The flashiest play of the game was the Auburn double play, Riley to Hitchcock to Lloyd, that retired Oglethorpe in the ninth. Auburn made another twin killing earlier in the game.

FIRST RUN.

Hitchcock's walk, and successive singles by Lloyd and Kaley produced Auburn's first run in the first inning. Oglethorpe promptly erased the lead in their half when Martin's single, Anderson's sacrifice and Baker's fielder's choice paved the way for two runs. Riley's bad throw to the plate on George's fielder's choice allowed Martin and Baker to score.

The Petrels scored again in the second when Bryant homered and again in the third. Anderson singled, Baker singled and Anderson scored when Kaley dropped Whitley's fly in left. Kaley, however, picked up the ball and threw to Lewis at third, forcing Baker and Lewis relayed to Riley, forcing George, who had walked, for a double play.

Auburn's first five-run rally came in the fourth. A. Lewis led off with a single to center, Smith hit a single in the same direction, Lewis going to third. A. Lewis scored on I. Lewis' fielder's choice and Riley tripled, scoring I. Lewis. Hitchcock walked and Lloyd hit a home run over the leftfield fence to clean the bases.

In the seventh A. Lewis was hit by a pitched ball, advanced on an infield out and scored on I. Lewis' single.

FIVE-RUN RALLY.

Whitley was hit by Smith in the fifth, advanced on Bryant's single and scored on Vance's single.

The Tigers' second five-run rally in the ninth ended the scoring.

TISH, TISH.

Auburn pulled the time-worn hidden ball play at the expense of Bryant in the fifth. Ike Lewis secreted the ball and as Bryant walked off the bag, tagged him.

Cliff Smith suffered a hard blow on the shin off Whitley's bat in the seventh. The game was stopped and first aid administered to the valiant Auburn captain, who stuck in the game and went on to a brilliant and well-deserved victory.

Oglethorpe finishes in fourth place as the result of the double defeat, with Georgia, twice winners over Tech, in second and Florida in third. Tech ends the season in last place.

Coach Frank Anderson's Petrels faltered after making a strong bid for the Dixie title.

If Georgia and Tech remain adamant in their avowals to withdraw from the league, it is certain that steps will be taken to organize other college leagues, both within and without the conference.

Piedmont Nine Wins From Boone, 7 to 6

CORNELIA, Ga., May 14.—Piedmont College closed its baseball season season today with a 7-to-6 victory over the North Carolina Teachers from Boon. Captain Bob Smith pitched for the winners and held the Carolinians well in check except one inning, the seventh, when the visitors secured four hits and four runs.

Smith, for the visitors, hit one over the fence in the fourth for a home run. Hoyt Chambers, outfielder, and Taft Gill, catcher, ended their career at Piedmont today, both getting one hit each, and Gill threw out five attempted base-stealers.

Single by 'Catfish' Beats Jackets, 10-9

By Al Smith.

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—Vernon (The Catfish) Smith, Georgia's hero of heroes, closed the greatest athletic career any man has ever enjoyed at the University of Georbia by slashing out a single in the tenth inning to score Hut Parks from second base and defeat Georgia Tech, 10 to 9, as Georgia swept the annual four-game series.

Smith did something few college athletes have ever done and he put himself into the highest niche of the Georgia athletic hall of fame. Two men were out in the tenth when The Catfish strolled to bat. Hut Parks was on first base. Smith let one ball go by and Parks stole second. Then Pitcher Henderson, of Tech, mixed up the next four balls and The Catfish had two strikes and three balls with the next pitched ball telling the tale. The winning run was on second and two men were out. Henderson took his time with the next pitch. He wound up slowly and the ball almost floated down toward home plate as 3,000 spectators held their breath. The Catfish started his swing. The bat connected squarely with the ball, which went past third base into left field as Parks scored from second.

That ended Catfish Smith's career. Perhaps Georgia will have other great athletes in the future, athletes who fight and give their all just as Smith did, but there will never be another

Chance Now Seen For Ralph Butler

Ralph Butler, young catcher obtained by the Atlanta Crackers from the Cotton States league in the spring, may get his first chance to go behind the bat for the club this week.

When waivers were asked on Charley Rowland, Baxter Williams and Butler were the only active catchers left and as the Crackers have a doubleheader on the books with Memphis Wednesday, Butler is almost certain to get into action. He has been suffering from a sore throwing arm.

COLUMBIA WINS.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(UP)—Columbia University's varsity crew won its first race this season when it swept to victory by seven lengths over New York Athletic Club eight today on the Harlem river.

Strib and Hunt Fight Date Set for May 30

W. L. (Young) Stribling will make his first appearance in an Atlanta ring since 1930, when he fights Babe Hunt, an Olkahoma puncher, May 30 at the city auditorium.

Immediately following the fight, Stribling will sail for Australia where he has several fights scheduled.

Stribling's last fight here was with Arthur Dekuh in a heavy rain at the ball park and has since faded as a heavyweight championship contender with losses to Schmeling and Schaaf.

The National Boxing Commission recently lifted Hunt's suspension and everything is cleared up for the fight here.

More Than Half of Southern Sluggers Bat Better Than .300

BONOWITZ BEST WITH .486 MARK; CHAPPIE FOURTH

Out of the 110 players who have participated in five or more games in the Southern association, more than half—69—are batting .300 or better, leaving only 41 players batting below the .300 mark. This is an increase over last week, only 57 being in the .300 or better class at that time.

Twelve of the sluggers are batting over the .400 mark. Joe Bonowitz, of Chattanooga, continues to hold the lead with 486, compiled in 19 games. He is trailed by Joe Prerost, of Birmingham, who is doing a .461. Rudy Laskowski, Knoxville shortstop, rates third with a mark of .420. Then comes Johnny Chapman, of Atlanta, who is hitting .404.

Chapman's hitting streak in consecutive games was ended Saturday a week ago. He had hit safely in 23 games, before being stopped by Tex Nugent, of Little Rock.

Stanley Keyes, Nashville outfielder, smashed out five home runs last week to take the league lead with a total of 10.

Reese, of Memphis, has batted in the most runs, 36, and also leads in stealing bases, 7.

Chattanooga tops the field in team hitting, .350, with Nashville second, .331, and Knoxville third, .326.

In fielding the Memphis Chicks are setting the pace with a .969. Little Rock is fielding .966. Nashville leads in double plays, 39.

Only three pitchers remain undefeated. They are Clyde Barfoot, Chattanooga, with four victories; Griffith, Chattanooga, two victories, and Caldwell, of Birmingham, two victories. Walter Beck, of Memphis, has won six games against one defeat.

Entered in Horse Show Here

Miss Elzie Fluharty, of High Point, N. C., on Midnight Frolic, handsome three-gaited black gelding of the Sunshine Stables at High Point, which she has entered in the stake classes at Piedmont Park in the fourth annual exhibition of the Atlanta Horse Show Association, May 20 and 21. Midnight Frolic will be shown by Miss Jean Oliver, talented young Atlanta rider, in the open walk-trot classes and the combination three-gaited saddle-and-harness events. Miss Fluharty will be the guest of Mrs. Herbert D. Oliver on Pine Valley road during the horse show.

CARD ROOKIES LEAD IN TEXAS

Home runs are not as common this season in any league as they formerly were but Aaron Ward, Shreveport, former Yankee second baseman, stepped up to the plate May 5 with the bases full and hoisted the first ball pitched by Moore, of San Antonio, over the wall for the round trip and four runs. Moore had just relieved Kowalik.

Cardinal farm hands continue to figure prominently in Texas league games, Outfielder Medwick, Shortstop Carey and First Baseman Stebbins, of Houston, topping the individual batting race at the close of games of May 8. Their averages, all three having been in 24 games, were .408, .380 and .378, respectively. Outfielders Fuss, Wichita Falls, and Jeanes, Fort Worth, are tied for fourth place with .371; Langford, Dallas, .366; Jones, Beaumont, .364, and Flaskamper, San Antonio, .357, follow in order.

Medwick and Flaskamper are tied for the lead in runs with 28 each. Medwick has the most hits, 40, with Fuss, 39, second. Medwick is the slugger of the league with 11 doubles, four three-baggers and 10 home runs, a total of 25 extra-base hits and 89 total bases.

Pitcher Pickerel, Fort Worth, has pitched 22 innings in five games and won three victories. Heusser, Houston, has two games won and no defeats in 30 rounds. Steengrafe, Shreveport; Collier, Beaumont, and McCabe, Fort Worth, each have won four games and lost one. George Murray, of Dallas, has won five games and lost but two in 56 innings and on May 7 held Galveston to one Texas league single, winning, 1-0.

Sutherlin Leading Cotton States Loop

At the close of the first week of the Cotton States league, Outfielder Sutherlin, Vicksburg, had made nine hits and five runs in 16 times at bat for an average of .563. Pitcher Walker, Port Arthur, was second, five hits in nine times at bat, .556, with Outfielder Washington, Baton Rouge, and Second Baseman Rawlins, Pine Bluff, tied for third at .500. First Baseman Burrows, Pine Bluff, was fifth with 12 hits in 25 times at bat for a mark of .480, and was followed by Shaw, El Dorado, .428; Beckman, El Dorado, .407, and McShane, of Vicksburg, who has .400.

Rawlins, Pine Bluff, scored 10 runs in six games, and his colleague, Persons, had nine. Washington had the most hits, 15, and total bases, 25. Pitcher Paul, Baton Rouge, won two games in two tries, hurling 18 innings and allowing but nine runs. Pitcher Trask, Baton Rouge, worked 18 innings in two games, winning and losing a game, but fanned 16 opponents, while Burleson, of El Dorado, had 15 strikeouts in 19 innings.

Australia Clinches Net Win Over Cuba

HAVANA, May 14.—(AP)—Australia's tennis stars clinched the Davis cup semi-final round series with Cuba today, winning the doubles for their third straight victory.

The Australian doubles combination of Jack Crawford and Harry O. Hopman won four sets from Gustavo Vollmer and Ricardo Morales, 4-6, 6-4, 8-6, 6-4.

Yesterday the players from the Antipodes had won both of the opening singles matches and their triumph today automatically sent them into the North American zone finals.

Leading Dixie Stables In Atlanta Horse Show

Competition Tightens in Saddles Classes With Arrival of Important Entries.

With the arrival of important entries from leading southern stables, competition is tightening for the major saddle classes which challenge the interest of civilian horsemen whose mounts will seek honors in the horse show which opens at Piedmont park Friday afternoon for a brilliant two-day program.

From Charlotte, N. C., there will come three prize mounts from the stables of R. Horace Johnston. They are Turk, Firecracker Dare, and Whitehall Chief, the first two walk-trot geldings and the latter a handsome four-year-old, gaited gelding.

E. L. Kittrell, of Chattanooga, has entered two highly pedigreed horses with a long list of blue ribbons to their credit—Stepping Thru, a fine five-gaited gelding, and Amber Springtime, a beautiful gaited mare. They will be shown by the owner's daughters, Misses Lillian and Margaret Kittrell.

The Sunshine stables, of High Point, N. C., will be represented by Midnight Frolic, who won high honors in three-gaited classes at the recent Tryon horse show. Midnight Frolic will be shown by Miss Jean Oliver, of Atlanta, in the three-gaited classes, and by Miss Elzie Fluharty, of High Point, in the stake classes.

LOOKOUT LAD.

Z. Carter Patten, of Chattanooga, whose entries have never failed to win admiration in the Atlanta shows, is bringing Lookout Lad, a fine bay gelding, which will make his first appearance in Atlanta.

Of special interest to local exhibitors will be three entries from the stables of T. W. Fletcher, of East Point, a newcomer to this section. Mr. Fletcher will show The Platinum Blonde, a gorgeous five-gaited mare; Beau Garcon, a handsome chestnut gelding, and Orange Blossom, a stunning black pony, three-gaited.

John K. Ottley, who may always be counted on for keen competition in the major saddle classes, has entered his champion three-gaited mare, Spirit of Spring, whose showings in Augusta, Charleston and Atlanta shows have already won six blue ribbons, a championship and a reserve championship. Ocean Wave, another of Mr. Ottley's winners two years ago, will re-enter the ring this season in the three-gaited classes.

Unusual interest attaches to the newest acquisition of the Ottley stables, Chief of the Cherokees, a superb five-gaited four-year-old chestnut gelding who will make his debut in the show ring at the forthcoming exhibition at Piedmont park. The Chief is a full brother to Gracious Gesture, the walk-trot mare that was one of the outstanding winners at the Atlantic City show last month. These are but a few of the civilian entries assured for the annual ring event.

KEEN COMPETITION.

The military events, hunting, jumping and polo classes will provide keen and spectacular competition by experienced army horsemen representing the sixth United States cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe, Fort Benning and Fort McPherson, with a good representation from the civilian-owned gallopers. The show will open promptly at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon with a colorful exhibition drill by the sixth United States cavalry.

Colonel Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A., executive manager of the Atlanta Horse Show Association, will be in charge at the showgrounds. His chief aide will be Captain Samuel White, field artillery, of Fort Bragg, N. C., who is serving as assistant manager in charge of ring and grounds, assisted by Captain George E. Cook, field artillery, now on organized reserve duty in Augusta, and Lieutenant William E. Hall, aide de camp to Brigadier General George H. Estes, commander of Fort McPherson.

Hon. Henry S. Caywood, a famous Kentucky horseman and statesman, will come from his home in North Middletown, Ky., to judge the saddle and the combination saddle-and-harness classes, while Colonel Lewis Brown Jr., a noted polo player and cross-country rider, will judge the military events, hunting, jumping and polo classes.

TICKETS ON SALE.

The advance sale of tickets is now in progress at horse show headquarters in the Walton building, Walnut 0668, where representatives of the Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls school are sponsoring the event under the general chairmanship of Mrs. W. Eugene Harrington. Boxes, each of which contains six seats, are $12 for one day or $20 for two days.

LOMBARDI TOPS NATIONAL LOOP; HAFEY CLIMBS

Catcher Lombardi, of Cincinnati, is leading the hitters of the National league with an average of .500, compiled in 10 games in which he has cracked out 19 hits in 38 times at bat. He is trailed by Chick Hafey, a teammate, who formerly blasted the ball for St. Louis. Hafey has swung into a stride which has brought him from a place down below the select circle to second place with an average of .413, a few points above Hughie Critz and Bill Terry, of the Giants. The former is hitting .391, while Terry is slamming away with .360. Vaughan, of Pittsburgh, follows with .361; Orsatti, .350; P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .349; Collins, St. Louis, .340; and Herman, Chicago, .337.

Klein, of Philadelphia, leads in runs scored with 23. Critz has the edge in hits with 36, while Collins who has bagged eight home runs is leading in total bases with 70, his 35 blows in addition to the circuit drives, include seven doubles and two triples. Terry who is trailing Collins for home runs with seven leads in driving in runs, He has been responsible for 22 markers. Collins and F. Herman, of Cincinnati, have each driven in 21 runs.

Lonnie Warneke has turned out to be the bright spot on the Cubs' pitching staff. The big right-hander has won five games in a row without losing a contest. He pitched 48 innings and yielded 35 hits and nine runs. Betts, of Boston, has won three and lost none, and Lucas, of Cincinnati, pitching six full games, has won five and lost one.

J. O. Y. WINNER OVER BETHANY; JACOBS STARS

Smith and Stith Hit Home Runs; Free-Hitting Game.

J. O. Y. Class, of Central Baptist, repulsed the attack of Bethany Methodist, 16 to 4, and maintained their perfect record to lead the Sewanee league race. Jacobs led the winners' attack with four hits in six trips to the pan while all his mates hit for one or more safeties. Lewis and Griggs were best for the losers. Smith, of the losers, and Stith, of the winners, hit circuit blows.

A SLUGFEST.

Confederate Avenue Baptist outslugged East End Methodist to gain a 14-to-9 victory. The game produced many home runs, Sutton and Cooper, of the winners, and Doyal and Burkhalter securing one apiece. McCoy hit best for the losers with four out of five. All were of the one-base variety. Sutton, of the winners, hit safely on all trips to the plate. The game was very ragged afield, each club bobbling six times.

TIMELY HITTING.

Joe McCrory came through with a timely hit in the final frame to send Gorman across the pan with the run that gave Grace Methodist a 5-to-4 victory over Inman Yards Baptist. Fowler gained the hitting and fielding honors of the losers, making several hard catches and poling a long homer to deep left. Gorman and Laird hit best for the winners. Two fast double killings by the Grace infield nipped almost certain scores. The hitting of both teams was about even as was the fielding.

ALPHA LOSES.

Infield errors paved the way for Rock Springs Presbyterian to defeat Alpha Class, 4 to 3. The Williams boys were the outstanding stars for the winners, while the pitching of Fowler and the fielding of E. Edward was best for the losers. The pitching was even, each man yielding seven hits, with Fowler leading by one in strikeouts. Scarborough made one of the best catches of the season to nip a rally.

Tubby Allen led the winners' attack with three hits in five tries, while Jones, of Grant Park, was the only batsman to solve the delivery of Whitney for more than one safety. Pattillo Memorial bunched their hits to score all their runs in the third frame.

KIRKWOOD LEADS.

Kirkwood Baptist defeated Inman Park Baptist, 4 to 3, to take the Piedmont league lead, after ten innings of hard, fast baseball. John Ford, hurling for the losers, fanned nine, while Carter was able to fool but four. D. B. Eskew, of Kirkwood, led the hitters with two singles and a double in five attempts, and his fielding around the initial sack was great. Mize and Hammond, with three-base blows, secured the longest hits.

FULTON LEAGUE.

The Woodward Avenue Baptist nine handed the Bethany Methodist team a hard jolt in defeating them by a 13-to-7 score. Boyce, moundsman for the winners, was right, whiffing seven enemy batsmen and allowing only seven hits, while his teammates battered out 15 safe bingles off the slants of Bowles and Cravens, for the losers. Boyce also led the hitting with three for four and his teammate, C. Camp, helped matters with three for five. For Bethany, Jones, in centerfield, made a sensational catch. The winners made ten errors and the losers three.

VIRGINIA LEADS.

Two undefeated teams, battling for league leadership, met in a hard-fought contest, and Virginia pushed its way to the front in winning over Ousley Chapel, 6 to 1. It was the winners' game all the way with Ousley only threatening in the sixth when she scored her only tally. Nunn, hurling for the winners, whiffed four batsmen and allowed his opponents only six safe hits. Barfield, opposing him, pitched a good game, allowing ten hits. J. Hadley and B. Hadley each hit two for three for the winning team with O'Neal and Nunn each getting two for four. For Ousley, T. Thompson hit two for two and Brooks two for four. D. Brooks, for Ousley, and Duckett, for Virginia, each made sensational catches to aid their teams. Ousley erred four times, Virginia once.

HARD HITTING.

The Woodlawn nine opened up with the heavy artillery in defeating Capitol View by a 2[illegible]-6 score. No less than 20 safe [illegible] were garnered off the slants of Baker, for the losers. Zuber led the hitting with four for six and added more glory in making three nice catches for fielding honors. His teammate, Hollis, hit three for five and Brandon three for four. McGee hit three for six. For the losers Doeris hit three for four with Brewer and Smith garnering two for five. Moon, hurling for the winners, whiffed seven and allowed only nine hits. Repeat in Dixie League Pennant Race

Here are the members of the Auburn team, who won their second straight Dixie league pennant in the play-off series against Oglethorpe. The Tigers clinched the pennant in the first game Friday. Members of the team, reading from the left, are: Duck Riley, Ike Lewis, A. Lewis, Ripper Williams, Juicy Wood, Harry Lloyd, Slick Kaley, Jimmy Hitchcock, Red Head, Porter Grant, Clifford Smith, Ralph Jordan, Sam Mason, Gump Arial and Payne. Coach Sam McAllister is shown in the inset. The Tiger coach annually develops a leading Southern conference team in baseball.

BURWELL LOSES TO CLIFF SUTTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 14.—(AP)—The Sutter brothers of Tulane University cleaned up the Southern conference tennis tournament for their alma mater late today when Clifford Sutter, Green Wave ace and captain, took the singles title from Clayton Lee "Ted" Burwell, of Sewanee, defending champion, in a straight set final, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

Yesterday Clifford paired with his younger brother, Ed, to take the doubles title in a final victory over Perry Eastman and Charles Hume, also of Tulane. It was formerly held by Hinky Hendlin and Ed Yeomans, of North Carolina, and was vacated by their graduation last year.

Today's victory for Clifford Sutter gave him the conference title for the third time. He won it in 1929 and 1930, but did not play in the conference last year when he was making a campaign on national and sectional courts that made him a Davis cup possibility and gave him No. 6 ranking in the current U. S. L. T. A. rankings.

The finals today found Clifford Sutter playing machine-like tennis to wear down the defending champion. It was a base line driving contest, with Sutter having a good advantage throughout.

Sutter went into the finals after a rather easy morning victory over Judge Beaver, of Georgia, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

Burwell, however, was extended to win the other semi-final from Ed Sutter in a match that went for five gruelling sets, and made Burwell visibly tired for the final.

The singles finals this afternoon were played at the New Orleans Country Club as a supplementary feature to the United States-Mexico Davis cup matches.

Asheville Crew Wins In Connecticut Race

KENT, Conn., May 14.—(AP)—Kent school today won the regatta commemorating its 10th year of rowing by defeating Hun school, of Princeton, N. J., by four lengths over a mile course on the Housatonic river.

Asheville school, of Asheville, N. C., won the consolation race from Tabor school, of Boston, by two lengths. Springfield Technical High school, of Springfield, Mass., defeated Kent's second crew by a half length.

Zinn Beck Says South Seads in College Ball

Found Game Played Best in Georgia and Alabama; Likes Oglethorpe, Auburn.

By Jimmy Jones.

Mr. Zinn Beck, one of our best known minor league baseball men and who is now engaged in the pleasant pastime of scouting up young prospects for Cousin Joe Engel over at Chattanooga, was discovered on a charming Saturday morning, seated in a sunny corner of a hotel lobby, chin-wagging with Bob Higgins, the umpire.

There was a time when Zinn Beck was a manager that one rarely found him consorting with umpires, but now that Zinn is a scout he can afford to be chummy with his old friend Bob and talk about this and that.

It seems that Zinn has just finished a round of our leading campuses this spring in quest of another Frankie Frisch, a George Sisler or a Wes Ferrell. Zinn hasn't seen anything that looked that good, but reports that he has peered at some pretty fair country ball players while beating around and about this sector of the great American bush.

Zinn says that he found the most interest and the best brand of college ball in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. He thought Auburn and Oglethorpe, which teams he watched here Friday and Saturday, were the best coached teams he had seen.

He was very reticent about the particular ball players he was watching, but was rather favorably impressed with Charley Mitchell, Oglethorpe's young right-handed pitcher, and Kaley, the Auburn catcher. He had more than a passing glance for George, Oglethorpe outfielder, and Ripper Williams, Auburn's young pitcher.

If there is anyone who should know a ball player when he sees one, it's Zinn Beck. The silver fox of the dugout sold in one season to major league teams four ball players from one of his pennant clubs over at Columbia, S. C. Two of them were "Goose" Goslin and Jack Tavener, the shortstop. In his last year at Selma, Ala., where he won a Southeastern league pennant, he disposed of no less than 12 players to higher company and left $7,500 surplus in the treasury. With this fund, Maurice Bloch, enterprising Selma sportsman, was able to equip any entry in the new Southeastern league this year.

SENDS MEN UP.

From his Selma club he sent up Andrus, outfielder, and Pettitt, pitcher, now with Chattanooga; Rip Radcliffe, first baseman, to the Chicago White Sox; Pitchers Pat Moulton to the Texas league, Slim Brewer to the International and Mackey to the Association.

In addition to these proclivities, Zinn Beck once tried the manufacture of baseball bats and built his own factory near the Carolina border. We forgot to ask Zinn what became of the enterprise.

Beck has other interesting comment on baseball. He finds many of the college teams he looks at are poorly coached, because they are in the hands of football men. University of Alabama has the best team outside of those in the Dixie league, he says. He believes that what professional ball needs are more Class D leagues to develop youngsters. He finds that the Class B pace is too fast for the average beginner.

NEGLECTED.

The old scout thinks there is just as much baseball interest among the boys and just as many good prospects in college and on the sandlots as ever, but that they are being neglected.

He thinks the Southeastern league will have a tough time this summer, but believes at least five of the clubs will go through. The sixth may need a little nursing, he says.

"I understand they're running on an economical basis and that's sensible; I recall that in the old Southeastern and Sally some of the clubs drew 90,000 paid admissions a year and lost money; there's no sense in that; why, some of them were paying Class A salaries; one club had a pitcher it was paying $425 a month; he came to me and I cut him to $325."

ROBY'S ARENA OPENS MONDAY

Cleve Roby, who has just completed improvements on his open air fight arena at Cain and Courtland streets, will present his first card of the season Monday night with a combined boxing and wrestling show, in addition to other entertainment.

"I am going to have a fight card every Monday night and my plans are to have a white card one week and a colored card the next at a price anyone can afford," Roby stated.

A completely remodeled arena will be shown the crowd on opening night. Improvements that have been made consist of a new floor covering the ringside sector, new and comfortable chairs replacing the old benches and the installation of a refreshment stand on the balcony. Fighters work out at the arena every day from 2 to 5 o'clock and the public is invited to seem them in action.

ATLANTA LIKELY TO GET "CLINIC"

professionals give to the game and the advancement of their ability in taking care of the club and its members.

EXPERTS.

The function of the clinic will be to give lectures and demonstrations on instruction, club-making and groundkeeping by acknowledged experts in the game. While the clinics will be valuable to the seasoned professionals the improvement of the assistant professionals is the real aim of the clinics.

With the exhibition game fading, it is generally conceded that the professional, to be of greatest service to his club, must not only possess ability to teach but must prove his ability as a craftsman in the shop and must also show a knowledge of green-keeping and turf conditions.

Beckett, of course, would be delighted to see Atlanta receive the P. G. A. clinic for the southeast. And certainly no professional would be more fitted to be one of the instructors in it. Beckett is largely responsible for the growth of golf in Atlanta. He has been with the Capital City Club for 14 years and has already gone a few days on his 15th year of service.

COURSE CHANGED.

As announced in The Constitution a week ago, Beckett has remodeled three holes on the Capital City course for the two state tournaments to be played there this year. Beckett keeps his course interesting for members which may be one of the reasons why it is crowded each year.

Beckett will enter the national opening qualifying rounds here on June 6. He plays in the Atlanta open Friday of this week and next week will enter the Southeastern P. G. A. tournament at Macon.

Atlanta is fortunate in her golf professionals. There isn't a poor professional in the city and the golf courses, private and municipal, continue to show an increase in players each year. The P. G. A. could find no better site for a "clinic" than Atlanta.

SMITH'S SINGLE DEFEATS TECH IN FINAL GAME

'Catfish' Stars as Bulldogs Beat Jackets at Athens, 10-9.

Georgia player, unless Fate is very, very kind, as great as Vernon (The Catfish) Smith, the Macon boy who came to Athens almost unheralded and became one of the nation's greatest athletes and sportsmen.

CATFISH SWATS.

That single in the tenth was not all that Catfish Smith did in his last game. The Catfish scored the tying run in the ninth inning. He doubled to open the inning and scored a moment later as Marion Gaston singled through shortstop. Then in addition to all that, The Catfish got two triples and another single, scoring twice more and sending two other runs across the plate.

Spurgeon Chandler, who hurled four-hit ball in Friday's game, got his third victory of the season over Tech today. Chandler relieved Hamilton at the beginning of the tenth inning. He forced two Tech players to ground out and the next to fly out to end the inning in short order. It was Chandler's fifth straight victory and marks the end of another great athletic career.

Today's game was marred by 15 errors by the two teams, yet it was one of the closest Georgia and Tech ever played. The lead changed hands three times before Smith finally ended the whole business. Tech got a 3-to-1 lead in the third inning and held it until Georgia scored five runs in the sixth frame to send Pitcher Mitchum to the showers. Smith's triple in the first inning scored the first run of the game.

Mitchum had Georgia's heavy siege guns under control the first five innings, holding the Bulldogs to four hits and one run until the sixth, but in that inning the Bulldogs really got under way.

PARKS SAFE.

Hut Parks, Bulldog lead-off man, was safe on an error by Shortstop Hardin, taking second on Hardin's wild peg. Smith tripled Parks home and scored himself when Hogsed bobbled Gaston's bunt along the third base line. That tied the score at three-all. Mott flied out to short, but Lee Webb and Ray Fleming singled in succession to fill the bases. Charley Arnold, playing his last game, singled past first to score Gaston and Webb. Arnold was caught off first for the second out. Jimmy Nicholson, pitching for Georgia at that juncture, tripled into deep left field, scoring Fleming. Tony Frazzittas then walked and stole second, only to be called out when he stepped off the bag, retiring the side.

Tech scored two in the seventh, after two were out, on a triple by Ferguson and a single by Hardin, after Whitley, pinchhitting for Mitchum, had been struck by a pitched ball. The Bulldogs scored two runs in their half of the inning on Parks' double, Smith's triple, and Mott's single.

Tech tallied four runs in its half of the eighth to take a one-run lead. Hogsed singled over second after Roberts had struck out to open the inning. Waldrup was safe at first on Frazzittas' error, Hogsed taking second. Eddie Mathes singled to left field and Hogsed came home. Hamilton relieved Nicholson on the mound for Georgia. Slocumb, pinch-hitting for Wilson, singled past third. Smith fell down in fielding the ball and Waldrup and Mathes scored, Slocum stopping at third. Brady tried to bunt and failed. Slocum was caught in a trap between third and home, but scored when Arnold threw over Frazzittas' head. That ended the scoring until Smith tied the score in the ninth.

WHITE'S FEAT.

Today's victory was the first time that Coach Bill White, dean of southern college baseball coaches, has seen his team win four straight over Georgia Tech. The feat was last accomplished by H. J. Stegeman, now director of athletics, when he was baseball coach in 1919.

Waldrup, Tech's first baseman, was forced from the game in the ninth inning when he pulled a ligament in his knee fielding Mott's bunt.

Several hundred Georgia alumni, back for the annual reunion, watched Georgia win. Probably the largest crowd in years saw the game. More than 3,000 persons witnessed the 10-inning battle.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—Little change occurred in the week-end security markets today. Stocks sagged and so did bonds; losses were somewhat smaller for shares, but evidence that the downward movement might be halted without some fresh stimulant was lacking.

Stocks dropped in the first hour when many favorites unveiled new low quotations. They steadied later, probably under short covering, thus reducing losses to a general fractional range. Selling continued to be rather specialized, affecting principally rails, utilities and some merchandising issues.

Woolworth and Eastman ran into a weak market, although both succeeded in reducing extreme losses of 2 5-8 and 2 points, respectively. American Telephone broke 1 1-4 to 94 1-4, the lowest in many years, before meeting much support. Standard Oil of New Jersey obviously suffered from President Teagle's statement that dividends could not be continued indefinitely out of surplus.

Santa Fe and Union Pacific reacted a point or more, the latter selling at the lowest since 1899. Consolidated Gas, North American, Western Union and American Water Works also established new minimums. U. S. Steel halved a half point decline and traded quietly; neither was there much activity in American Can. Sales totaled 600,100 shares.

In the absence of important news developments, Wall Street had nothing but the market's own action on which to base its opinions.

Most financial observers agree that the key to confidence rests in the disposition of issues now pending at Washington, and the senate's tax bill debate will be closely followed. Also, the three-point relief plan appears to be a subject of considerable confusion, and many bankers find it impossible to believe that courage can reassert itself until such uncertainties are cleared up.

Steel operations are subject to much irregularity. Price stability now faces a new test in the 15 per cent wage reduction, but Wall Street believes the industry will stoutly resist any requests from consumers that at least some of the saving be passed on to them.

The headliner in next week's list of dividend meetings is American Telephone & Telegraph Company. What action is likely has not been indicated, although there have been reports that another "regular" of $2.25 will be declared.

Another prominent meeting will be that of du Pont's directors. In view of General Motors' recent cut, brokers are forecasting a reduction by du Pont and a $2.50 annual basis is being mentioned as likely.

TRADE TRENDS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

COCOA—The steady increase in New York warehouse stocks of cocoa was checked in the past week by substantial withdrawals, which about balanced the receipts. Brokers report that manufacturers have been accumulating cocoa on a scale down for consuming requirements.

CONSTRUCTION—Contracts for heavy engineering construction in the past week had a total valuation of $24,949,000, the Engineering News-Record reports. The total compares with $54,458,000 as the weekly average value for May of last year.

HIDES—Values on the New York Hide Exchange declined almost steadily in moderate trading last week. The June contract ended the week at 3.90 cents a pound, a new low trading level for futures on the exchange. Weakness in prices was attributed by brokers to outside conditions.

SILVER—Weakness in other commodities apparently outweighed Washington developments in the past week favorable to the silver situation, and the market for silver futures showed little progress until yesterday when prices rose 48 to 50 points in response to an advance of 1-4 cent a pound in the price of bar silver.

SUGAR—The sugar melt of 14 United States refiners from January 1 to May 7, totaled 1,230,000 long tons compared with 1,425,000 in the same period last year. Deliveries totaled 1,060,000 long tons compared with 1,245,000 tons a year ago.

STEEL—No substantial gain in the volume of steel bookings is in sight for the current quarter, and hopes of manufacturers for improvement in operating results lie in the 15 per cent wage cut announced a week ago, according to current opinion in the steel trade.

x—New 1932 low.

BY VICTOR EUBANK.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—Although the bond market attempted a feeble rally near the close of today's brief session, the vitality was lacking and the average for 60 corporate loans again recorded a new low figure for the year.

The United States government list, however, was comparatively steady. All of the Liberties closed fractionally higher, as did most of the treasuries.

Railroad bonds were still suffering from liquidation, although they were not quite as soft as recently. Losses of from 1 to 3 or more points were suffered by some liens of Atchison, Boston & Maine, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Great Northern, Illinois Central, New York Central, North Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern, Union Pacific and Wabash. Most of the Baltimore & Ohio and Missouri Pacific loans retained fair gains.

There were few important changes among the utilities and industrials. Columbia Gas loans were heavy, as were those of Western Union, National Radiator, Tobacco Products and Postal Telegraph. National Dairy Products 5 1-4s lost 2 points and Paramount Famous Lasky and Paramount Publix bonds were weak.

Foreign loans were mixed. The Australians were steady, as were the Colombians, British and Italian. French 7 1-2s eased and German government 5 1-2s and 7s were off from 3-4 to 1 point. The Austrians sagged on reports of a forthcoming moratorium.

Sales totaled $6,235,000 par value.

DECREASE IS SHOWN IN COTTON CONSUMED

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(AP)—Cotton consumed during April was reported today by the census bureau to have totaled 367,280 bales of lint and 50,936 bales of linters, compared with 488,655 and 54,229 in March this year and 508,691 and 67,415 in April last year.

Cotton on hand April 30 was held as follows:

In consuming establishments, 1,532,967 bales of lint and 307,985 of linters, compared with 1,566,205 and 304,859 on March 31 this year and 1,370,680 and 291,156 on April 30 last year.

In public storage and at compresses, 8,163,937 bales of lint and 50,494 of linters, compared with 8,786,979 and 53,947 on March 31 this year and 6,033,032 and 86,767 on April 30 last year.

April imports totaled 15,720 bales, compared with 10,128 in March this year and 17,158 in April last year.

April exports totaled 544,563 bales of lint and 9,355 of linters, compared with 927,127 and 11,708 in March this year and 391,871 and 9,099 in April last year.

Cotton spindles active during April numbered 23,409,246, compared with 24,818,008 in March this year and 26,668,536 in April last year.

Statistics for cotton-growing states were:

Cotton consumed during April, 311,773 bales, compared with 393,021 in March this year and 390,062 in April last year.

Cotton on hand April 30 was held as follows:

In consuming establishments, 1,212,576 bales, compared with 1,245,353 on March 31 this year and 1,001,322 on April 30 last year.

In public storage and at compresses, 7,721,939 bales, compared with 8,356,391 on March 31 this year and 5,631,512 on April 30 last year.

Cotton spindles active during April numbered 16,596,850, compared with 16,994,714 in March this year and 17,132,586 in April last year.

PRODUCTION OF STEEL HOLDS FIRM IN WEEK

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—Steel manufacturers are adopting a firmer attitude on prices and, according to trade reports, the prospect is said to be for some advance in quotations for the third quarter.

Irregular operations, with no marked change in ingot production from the rate of 24 per cent of capacity, reflected continued quietness of demand in the past week. Moderately improved buying of automobile sheets and slight increases in rail releases were offset by light structural awards and less active tin plate demand. The 15 per cent reduction in wages will have no effect on prices, it is said. Buying of pig iron remained restricted at unchanged prices.

Copper became available at record low prices when custom smelters offered Electrolytic at 5 1-2c with special export lots sold at 5 5-8c c. i. f.

Tin eased and demand was limited to small lots for immediate requirements.

Dull conditions prevailed in the lead market. Further curtailment of output by one producer has been announced.

Zinc weakened and the price eased into new low record ground, and was followed by announcement of a four-month shutdown by one producer.

CITY WILL JOIN IN OBSERVANCE OF HEALTH WEEK

Student nurses from Georgia Baptist and Grady hospitals will be guests of honor at a special service this morning at Peachtree Christian church when National Health Week will be officially launched in Atlanta. The service will begin at 10:45 o'clock and will feature a special music program, and the sermon will be preached by Dr. Robert Burns, pastor.

National Health Week will be observed all over the United States this week when medical societies, dental associations, parent-teacher organizations and health departments will cooperate to bring to the attention of adults the importance of regular and periodic physical and dental examinations.

Issuing the call for observance in Atlanta, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, called upon every adult to join in the movement, which, he said, will result in longer life and greatly reduce the nation's annual sick bill of $7,000,000,000.

Physicians and surgeons are sponsoring the movement in connection with various organizations. Observance of Health Week will continue through next Saturday.

FURTHER LOSSES APPEAR ON CURB

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(AP)—The curb market drifted to still lower levels today, but there was little urgent selling, and price changes of the leaders were generally confined to fractions.

Stocks opened soft and traders maintained an apparhetic attitude throughout the brief session. The turnover approximated 80,000 shares, the smallest Saturday's aggregate for several weeks.

The utilities, as a whole, continued in the unpopular class. Electric Bond & Share held its loss to 3-8 of a point although the 5 per cent preferred stock dropped 6 1-2 on a single sale. Niagara Hudson Power and Cities Service held to their previous quotations. Commonwealth Edison was again somewhat heavy, showing a loss of 1 1-2 points.

The oils displayed considerable resistance, Standard of Indiana maintaining its yesterday's price. Gulf Oil was off 3-8, International Petroleum 1-8, and Standard of Kentucky 1-4. Holders of the oils were apparently hopeful of the meetings here of International Petroleum leaders, seeking to reach an agreement on world production and distribution.

There was considerable activity in Swift issues at one time. Swift & Co., however, finished with a net gain of 1-8 and Swift International lost only 1-8. Western Air Express lost 2 points and Woolworth, Ltd., sagged 1-8.

LANCASTER TO FACE ARRAIGNMENT TUESDAY

MIAMI, Fla., May 14.—(AP)—Captain W. N. Lancaster, former British army flyer, will be arraigned in circuit court here Tuesday to learn the date of his trial for murder of Haden Clarke, young author.

Lancaster and his attorneys have said he would plead not guilty to the charge made in an indictment returned Monday by the Dade county grand jury.

STATE DRUGGISTS CONVENE TUESDAY FOR 57TH SESSION

The Georgia Pharmaceutical Association opens its fifty-seventh annual convention at the Biltmore hotel Tuesday morning, May 17, with Dr. R. C. Coleman, secretary of the state board of pharmacy, presiding. Governor Richard B. Russell's address will be the feature of the evening's program.

Mayor James L. Key will welcome the visiting druggists at the Tuesday morning session; the response will be made by L. W. Oliver of Eastman. Among the prominent men who are to speak during the convention are: Dr. E. F. Kelly, secretary of the American Pharmaceutical Association and also the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association; Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the University of Georgia; Carl Weeks, president of Armand Company, Des Moines, Iowa; DeSales Harrison, vice president and regional director of Coco-Cola Company, and Judge Roscoe Luke of Thomasville.

Wednesday afternoon the election of officers and the selection of the next convention city will take place. The present officers are Dr. R. C. Coleman, president; Dr. R. C. Wilson, secretary, Athens; B. H.

Information

CLOSING HOURS

Want Ads are accepted up to 9 p. m. for publication the next day. The closing hour for the Sunday edition is 5:30 p. m. Saturday.

CLASSIFIED RATES

Daily and Sunday rates per line for consecutive insertions:

One time ..... 20 cents
Three times ..... 17 cents
Seven times ..... 15 cents

Minimum, 2 lines (12 words).

In estimating the space of an ad, figure six average words to a line.

Ads ordered for three or seven days and stopped before expiration will only be charged for the number of times the ad appeared and adjustments made at the rate earned.

Errors in advertisements should be reported immediately. The Constitution will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion.

All want ads are restricted to their proper classification and The Constitution reserves the right to revise or reject any advertisement.

Ads ordered by telephone are accepted from persons listed in the telephone or city directory on memorandum charge only. In return for this courtesy the advertiser is expected to remit promptly.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

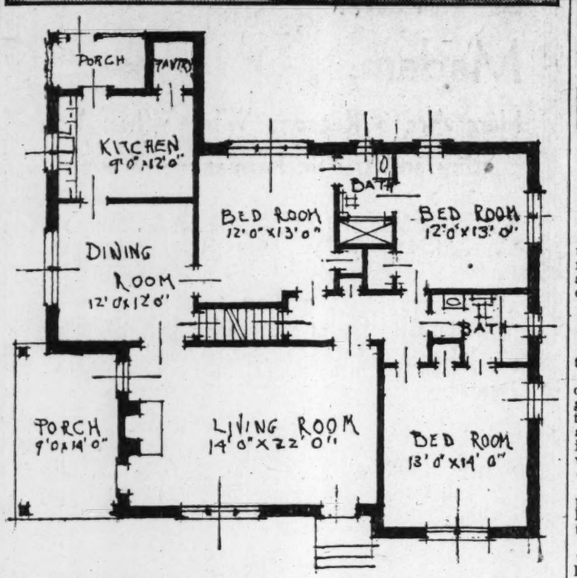

TAX COMMITTEE FORMED BY BODY

Real estate owners of the country, joined with the National Association of Real Estate Boards through its property owners' division, formed to attack the present critical tax problem, have completed the choice of 20 persons to form the executive committee of the division. The committee will take an active part in the important phase of the association's coming annual convention which will be concerned with action toward a more equitable distribution of the tax burden.

Houses and Floor Plans--No. 4

The pictures show a house on Club drive owned by George P. Moore which offers an attractive layout for prospective builders. This house is featured by soundness of construction in addition to its modern effectiveness, and the floor plan shows its convenient arrangement.

The fourth of the series of modern Atlanta houses and floor plans represents a house owned by George P. Moore on Club drive. It is the type of house that would sell for approximately $8,500, including the cost of the lot.

The exterior is of brick sprayed white in the modern style. There is a warm air furnace, the floors are hardwood throughout, and there is a stairway to the attic which is floored for storage.

There are three bedrooms, living room, dining room, two full tile baths, servants' lavatory, tile wainscoted kitchen and asphalt slate roof.

The house is set back 110 feet from the street on a lot 86 by 410. The house is characterized by extremely sound construction. The sills and girders are 4 by 10; floor joists, 2 by 10; roof rafts, 2 by 6. There is a two-car garage.

Plans for this house were made by James C. Wise, the architect. The floor plan shows the arrangement and dimensions.

40 HOME PARCELS SOLD BY COMPANY

Forty residence properties have been sold in the past two months by the Jefferson Mortgage Company, according to an announcement on Saturday of D. W. Watson. This company recently moved to new quarters at 1203-4 Healey building.

The houses brought an average of $4,000 each, Mr. Watson said, or a total for the period of $160,000. These houses were in virtually every section of Atlanta, showing a general demand for them.

"At this rate I expect we shall sell all our foreclosed properties by September 1," Mr. Watson said. "Our company has made it a rule to redecorate each house it takes back, and put it in good shape before it is offered for sale."

HOUSING SITUATION TO RECEIVE STUDY

CHICAGO, Ill., May 14.—Measures for a complete survey of housing needs of the United States as they apply to local requirements will be a central subject of discussion before the coming national conference on housing, to be held in connection with the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in Cincinnati.

The plan is for examination of each city's actual present situation in regard to existing homes and in regard to home needs through co-operation of all local, civic and business agencies interested in the housing problem, the work in each city to be under the leadership of the local real estate board.

Financing sources for housing and particularly new methods of financing housing projects will be discussed at the conference.

Legislation now in progress to protect the financing of present owned homes will also be outlined. This legislation includes notably the proposed bill to provide 12 federal home loan banks for the purpose of discounting mortgages on urban homes and a proposed amendment to the federal revenue act providing for the privilege of capitalization of carrying charges in calculating capital gains or losses.

The first subject to come before the conference will be: "Does a Housing Problem Exist in America, and If So, What Is Its Nature?"

The promise of new technical developments will be reviewed.

The conference will consider tax plans in relation to home ownership and the realtor's part in providing better housing.

OLDER STRUCTURES FACE ALTERATIONS

Competition for tenants and revaluation of rental properties due to deflation will force alterations in many older structures in the near future in the opinion of L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician, F. W. Dodge Corporation.

Continuous modernization is forced by competition between old and new buildings, he points out in the current issue of the Architectural Record. "When the handicap is largely inherent in the structure itself, this competition can usually be met better by rebuilding than by altering," he says. "Quite naturally there are important exceptions to this general rule. Each contemplated alteration project involving major structural changes must necessarily be considered separately. Any major alteration which is designed to correct obsolescence and to improve or restore revenue will fail, however, if population and business shifts, rising or falling land values, traffic conditions, population densities, and sundry other social and economic factors are ignored."

The Ponce de Leon apartment house at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue, which will be handled by the Rankin-Whitten Company as exclusive rental agents, it was announced on Saturday by the owners. The building, one of the largest and most exclusive in Atlanta, faces the Georgian Terrace hotel. Many prominent Atlanta families have apartments there. Photo by J. T. Holloway.

Announcement was made on Saturday by Fulton Properties, Inc., that the Rankin-Whitten Company had been made exclusive rental agents of the Ponce de Leon apartment house, the company's exclusive apartment house at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue.

The agents announced that certain interior changes in keeping with this type of building would be made at once.

The building, which is nine stories and offers a complete hotel service, has long been recognized as one of the city's largest and most exclusive apartment-hotel buildings.

Some of the most prominent families of Atlanta live there, and some of these have had apartments there since the building was first opened.

The agents pointed out that the building, which is across Ponce de Leon from the Georgian Terrace, is in one of the most exclusive north side sections. The building has been found attractive to many tenants because of its heighth. By occupying apartment on the upper floors they get the fresh air and sunshine during the summer months that ordinarily would be enjoyed only in remote suburbs.

The restaurant and other service personnel will be continued virtually in its present form, the agents said. All the hotel conveniences which have for so long been a feature of the building will be continued and amplified.

The Rankin-Whitten Company specializes on residential property management, and handles some of the largest buildings of this type in Atlanta.

HOOVER URGES HOME LOAN BILL PASSAGE

"A home and the home owner are the best credit risks in our country," said President Hoover in a special statement prepared for the June Ladies' Home Journal and released today, in which he urged that the proposed federal system of home mortgage discount banks, to aid the home owner, be enacted into law.

The president's statement, the first he has prepared for publication for any periodical since he entered the White House, was occasioned by the publication of the Ladies' Home Journal's four-point program for home financing in an article, "Money for Homes," by Chesla C. Sherlock. Mr. Sherlock, who has made an exhaustive study of the home ownership problem in the United States, recently testified on that subject before both the senate and the house committees on banking and currency.

Wrote the president: "To possess one's own home, however small, is the hope of every family in our country. That is the American ideal, born of an exquisite sentiment, nurtured by a long national tradition, and proved right by its innumerable practical advantages.

"Many things have conspired to frustrate this hope to a lesser accomplishment than the welfare of the nation demands. . . . Nevertheless, we can and should now do better."

Pointing out that the "financing of home ownership has not kept pace with improvement in design," President Hoover's statement tells of the proposed measure to set up a federal system of home mortgage discount banks, to which may belong building and loan associations, savings banks, deposit banks, farm loan banks, etc.

"The bread purpose," he continues, "is to provide for the home owner a comparable background of stable credit with that we have already provided nationally for the businessman through the federal reserve banks and for the farmer through the farm loan banks and the intermediate credit banks. The plan and method is not to engage the new institutions in the business of providing direct loans but to give impulse, security and safety and lower interest rates to the already existing institutions—especially the mutual institutions—in order that they may extend the fullest measure of credit to would-be home owners."

The president considers the creation of this system "immediately desirable" because of "certain emergency phases," pointing to the great numbers of people who are in danger of losing their homes, which often means the loss of their savings of years, because of the difficulties in obtaining renewal for their short-term mortgages. He further believes such a system would stimulate construction, and consequently industry and employment, in the thousands of communities where the need and demand for new homes is at present hampered by lack of credit.

"This plan has found sympathetic support and indorsement of thousands of savings banks, building and loan associations, country bankers, and, above all, from would-be home owners," the president concludes, voicing the hope that the proposed measure for the federal system of home mortgage discount banks will soon be enacted into law.

INFLUX FROM FARMS HITS CHARITIES HERE

Problems of Atlanta social service agencies have been increased by a reverse of the "back-to-the-farm" movement, a migration from country to city, with particularly new and troubling burdens for the Travelers' Aid Society, according to reports at the monthly meeting of that organization Saturday.

Mrs. J. W. Payne, executive secretary, pointed out that in the plan of unemployment emergency relief undertaken by Community Chest agencies in addition to their normal social service program, the part of the Travelers' Aid Society is that of caring for dependent non-resident families. Success has attended much of its effort in forming contact with families or agencies in the home place of many of these transients and in providing for their return, this relieving the burden upon local agencies.

"In an increasing number of cases of transient individuals and families, however, it has been found impossible to establish contact with the places of their legal residence," Mrs. Payne reported. "Particularly is this the situation when the families drift in from rural counties and seek to settle themselves on Atlanta's bounty and indulgence."

In the last month the society assisted 1,022 travelers in trouble from various causes of poverty, illness, bewilderment for one reason or another, or failure of relatives to care for them. Unemployment problems made up a large part of the work and the item of dependent non-residents was unusually large.

Of the cases, 34 were of children under 16 traveling alone who were saved from actual disaster; 40 involved runaway and delinquency problems, being restored to parents or other sanctuary or to the law. Automobile travelers helped number 19, bus travelers 46, and hitch-hikers 46, the others being railroad travelers. Lodging, jobs, legal aid, medical advice and travel funds were provided among the many details of service reported as rendered.

Board Urges Public To Buy Lots at Present Low Prices

Knowing from past history that timid investors make their first venture in real estate in low-priced lots as a period of business depression wanes, the Atlanta Real Estate Board made an interesting collection last week of vacant lot bargains which its members are now offering.

Ordinarily a vacant lot with finished improvements is not considered a profitable investment to be held over a period of years, but the board points out that such an investment may prove to be very profitable if made during periods of inactivity like the present time when demand is slack and lots are offered for less than their real value as home sites.

In addition to the inducement of good value, the buyer of a lot in a period like this can feel that he is putting his money into about as safe a medium of investment as can be found. In times of economic adjustment like the present it is very difficult to say what is a good investment, as many investors are asking themselves today, but nothing can be surer than a piece of the earth itself.

Investors with small sums which they have no immediate use for would find acquisition of such lots profitable and the board suggests that they make inquiry of their brokers with the view of acquiring these bargains while there are so many choice lot bargains on the bargain counter. All of the lots mentioned below lie reasonably well, practically all of them have full improvements and most of them have shade and other qualifications which make them desirable home sites.

It will be noted that virtually all of the lots are of the moderately priced class and it requires no great capital to become an owner of a profitable lot.

Below are a few samples of the offerings which the various brokerage firms now have available for purchase:

Decatur, in the Oakhurst section, level lot, 75 by 150, $450.

Just off Club drive and close to Peachtree, 100 by 300, $2,750.

Oakdale road, an unusual type lot which will appeal to a person having landscape gardening as hobby, 100 by 500, $1,750.

Collier road, east of Northside drive, 53 by 150, shady and lies well, $1,250.

Fairview road, 100 by 300, $3,500.

Hudson drive, 60 by 150, $1,500.

East Shadowlawn, 54 by 180, $1,500.

Palisades road, 60 by 200, $2,750.

West End Park, 60 by 200, $900.

Cascade Heights, 60 by 225, all improvements, $825.

Tax League Prints Reports On City Primary Candidates

The Atlanta Taxpayers' League has issued its first monthly bulletin, a four-page paper devoted to news and facts of interest to taxpayers of Atlanta and Fulton county.

The most interesting feature is the four-column report on the qualifications of various candidates in the city primary on May 25. The bulletin suggests that candidates who fail to give information about themselves to the League should not be voted for by the members.

The reports give the salary of each position; the applicant's age, nativity, length of residence here, business activities, credit rating, status of his city taxes, kinship to other persons in the city government, connections with enterprises selling to the city.

In one instance neither candidate for an office answered the questionnaire, and it was impossible to obtain any information of value about them.

The rest of the bulletin gives news about taxpayers leagues in other cities, local tax matters, and general news affecting taxpayers, local and otherwise.

ATLANTA SCOUTS WILL PARTICIPATE IN RACES TODAY

Picked crews of the S. S. S. Southland, regional flagship; the S. S. S. Corsair and the S. S. S. Barnale will participate in the first boat races to be sponsored by the sea scout department of the Atlanta Boy Scout Council at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Piedmont park.

Captain Waren Barlar, of the Southland, announced that the crew of the Southland would be composed of DeLos Spring, coxswain; Stokes Tomlin, stroke; Gerald Linton, Ernist Burton, Bert Morris, Charles Preston, Russell Burnett, substitute. Captain J. M. Carroll, of the Corsair, has not picked the full crew yet, but Leonard Boyer will act as coxswain and Louis Moble as stroke. Captain W. R. Taylor, of the Barnal, will act as coxswain of the ship's crew and Lernard Taylor as stroke. The remainder of the crew will be made up of Charlie Barton, Gay Thrash, Frank Langford and James O'Callaghan. The crews will row in five-oar 24 whaleboats.

The first event will determine which crew can board its boats, shove off, get under way and row an eighth of a mile. The second event will be a three-quarter mile race against time. The third event will be a three-quarter mile race against each other.

EAST SHOWS GAIN IN BUILDING TOTAL

The F. W. Dodge Corporation reports that of the 13 districts comprising the 37 states east of the Rockies all but three showed higher construction contract totals in April than in March. April contract totals for the entire eastern area showed an 8 per cent gain over March in contrast with a loss of 9 per cent between the corresponding two months of 1931. But only slight encouragement is offered by the current pick-up, since analysis discloses that the gain was entirely due to public works, especially highways.

THINGS TO KNOW IN OFFICE BUILDINGS

Decisions made when present office structures were still in the blueprint stage are now in a very large degree determining the degree to which those buildings may be operated with proper economy.

That's one of the facts brought out in a bulletin on office building management policies which has recently been issued by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. John B. Lear, Philadelphia; E. B. Murray, Kansas City, and Leo J. Sheridan, Chicago, are the authorities whose discussions are included in the brochure.

Here are some of the things listed by Mr. Sheridan as practically valuable in making a building rentable:

1. Office space should be well distributed as to depth, between 20 and 30 feet in proper proportions. Studies made in several cities reveal the rather surprising fact that the average office tenant occupies less than 1,000 square feet of space. Accepting this figure, the conclusion is that 40 to 45 per cent of the space in a building should be 20 feet in depth, 40 to 45 per cent of the space 25 feet in depth, while the remaining 10 to 20 per cent should be 28 to 30 feet in depth.

2. Center columns should be placed at 17 to 18 feet.

3. Utilities, including the elevators, should be concentrated as much as possible in one section of the building to permit the greatest flexibility of floor development of large or small tenants.

4. Dark spaces should be utilized for utilities.

5. To avoid heavy operation cost and rapid obsolescence the utmost flexibility and elasticity must be provided for subdivision of office space. This means interior columns should be placed wherever possible near corridor lines so that subdivision into areas larger than the unit space is possible in renting.

6. Light outlets should be placed in the outer columns instead of on partitions in order to save expense when partitions are moved.

7. Plumbing and heating facilities should be arranged to secure maximum economy in making future alterations of space.

8. Corridors should be so arranged that dead ends may be closed up and thrown into office space for larger suites.

9. Corridor doors should be opposite windows, and never opposite the stone work or mullions dividing them.

Proper width and depth of offices has a very definite effect on the rentable quality of a modern office building, Mr. Lear also emphasizes. An office 17 1-2 feet wide and 26 feet deep can be rented for as much, ordinarily, as an office 20 feet wide and 32 feet deep. But the larger unit has 185 square feet more of floor space to be taken care of. And in the present-day competition of building with building costs of operation count.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

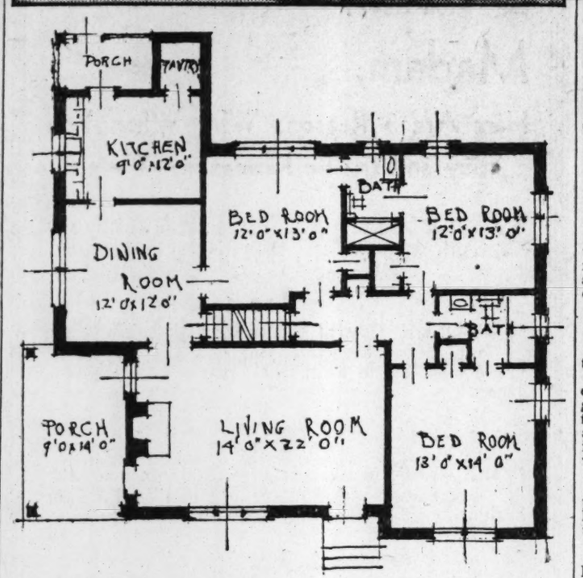

TAX COMMITTEE FORMED BY BODY

Real estate owners of the country, joined with the National Association of Real Estate Boards through its property owners' division, formed to attack the present critical tax problem, have completed the choice of 20 persons to form the executive committee of the division. The committee will take an active part in the important phase of the association's coming annual convention which will be concerned with action toward a more equitable distribution of the tax burden.

Houses and Floor Plans--No. 4

The pictures show a house on Club drive owned by George P. Moore which offers an attractive layout for prospective builders. This house is featured by soundness of construction in addition to its modern effectiveness, and the floor plan shows its convenient arrangement.

The fourth of the series of modern Atlanta houses and floor plans represents a house owned by George P. Moore on Club drive. It is the type of house that would sell for approximately $8,500, including the cost of the lot.

The exterior is of brick sprayed white in the modern style. There is a warm air furnace, the floors are hardwood throughout, and there is a stairway to the attic which is floored for storage.

There are three bedrooms, living room, dining room, two full tile baths, servants' lavatory, tile wainscoted kitchen and asphalt slate roof.

The house is set back 110 feet from the street on a lot 86 by 410. The house is characterized by extremely sound construction. The sills and girders are 4 by 10; floor joists, 2 by 10; roof rafts, 2 by 6. There is a two-car garage.

Plans for this house were made by James C. Wise, the architect. The floor plan shows the arrangement and dimensions.

40 HOME PARCELS SOLD BY COMPANY

Forty residence properties have been sold in the past two months by the Jefferson Mortgage Company, according to an announcement on Saturday of D. W. Watson. This company recently moved to new quarters at 1203-4 Healey building.

The houses brought an average of $4,000 each, Mr. Watson said, or a total for the period of $160,000. These houses were in virtually every section of Atlanta, showing a general demand for them.

"At this rate I expect we shall sell all our foreclosed properties by September 1," Mr. Watson said. "Our company has made it a rule to redecorate each house it takes back, and put it in good shape before it is offered for sale."

HOUSING SITUATION TO RECEIVE STUDY

CHICAGO, Ill., May 14.—Measures for a complete survey of housing needs of the United States as they apply to local requirements will be a central subject of discussion before the coming national conference on housing, to be held in connection with the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in Cincinnati.

The plan is for examination of each city's actual present situation in regard to existing homes and in regard to home needs through co-operation of all local, civic and business agencies interested in the housing problem, the work in each city to be under the leadership of the local real estate board.

Financing sources for housing and particularly new methods of financing housing projects will be discussed at the conference.

Legislation now in progress to protect the financing of present owned homes will also be outlined. This legislation includes notably the proposed bill to provide 12 federal home loan banks for the purpose of discounting mortgages on urban homes and a proposed amendment to the federal revenue act providing for the privilege of capitalization of carrying charges in calculating capital gains or losses.

The first subject to come before the conference will be: "Does a Housing Problem Exist in America, and If So, What Is Its Nature?"

The promise of new technical developments will be reviewed.

The conference will consider tax plans in relation to home ownership and the realtor's part in providing better housing.

OLDER STRUCTURES FACE ALTERATIONS

Competition for tenants and revaluation of rental properties due to deflation will force alterations in many older structures in the near future in the opinion of L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician, F. W. Dodge Corporation.

Continuous modernization is forced by competition between old and new buildings, he points out in the current issue of the Architectural Record. "When the handicap is largely inherent in the structure itself, this competition can usually be met better by rebuilding than by altering," he says. "Quite naturally there are important exceptions to this general rule. Each contemplated alteration project involving major structural changes must necessarily be considered separately. Any major alteration which is designed to correct obsolescence and to improve or restore revenue will fail, however, if population and business shifts, rising or falling land values, traffic conditions, population densities, and sundry other social and economic factors are ignored."

Announcement was made on Saturday by Fulton Properties, Inc., that the Rankin-Whitten Company had been made exclusive rental agents of the Ponce de Leon apartment house, the company's exclusive apartment house at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue.

The agents announced that certain interior changes in keeping with this type of building would be made at once.

The building, which is nine stories and offers a complete hotel service, has long been recognized as one of the city's largest and most exclusive apartment-hotel buildings.

Some of the most prominent families of Atlanta live there, and some of these have had apartments there since the building was first opened.

The agents pointed out that the building, which is across Ponce de Leon from the Georgian Terrace, is in one of the most exclusive north side sections. The building has been found attractive to many tenants because of its heighth. By occupying apartment on the upper floors they get the fresh air and sunshine during the summer months that ordinarily would be enjoyed only in remote suburbs.

The restaurant and other service personnel will be continued virtually in its present form, the agents said. All the hotel conveniences which have for so long been a feature of the building will be continued and amplified.

The Rankin-Whitten Company specializes on residential property management, and handles some of the largest buildings of this type in Atlanta.

HOOVER URGES HOME LOAN BILL PASSAGE

"A home and the home owner are the best credit risks in our country," said President Hoover in a special statement prepared for the June Ladies' Home Journal and released today, in which he urged that the proposed federal system of home mortgage discount banks, to aid the home owner, be enacted into law.

The president's statement, the first he has prepared for publication for any periodical since he entered the White House, was occasioned by the publication of the Ladies' Home Journal's four-point program for home financing in an article, "Money for Homes," by Chesla C. Sherlock. Mr. Sherlock, who has made an exhaustive study of the home ownership problem in the United States, recently testified on that subject before both the senate and the house committees on banking and currency.

Wrote the president: "To possess one's own home, however small, is the hope of every family in our country. That is the American ideal, born of an exquisite sentiment, nurtured by a long national tradition, and proved right by its innumerable practical advantages.

"Many things have conspired to frustrate this hope to a lesser accomplishment than the welfare of the nation demands. . . . Nevertheless, we can and should now do better."

Pointing out that the "financing of home ownership has not kept pace with improvement in design," President Hoover's statement tells of the proposed measure to set up a federal system of home mortgage discount banks, to which may belong building and loan associations, savings banks, deposit banks, farm loan banks, etc.

"The broad purpose," he continues, "is to provide for the home owner a comparable background of stable credit with that we have already provided nationally for the businessman through the federal reserve banks and for the farmer through the farm loan banks and the intermediate credit banks. The plan and method is not to engage the new institutions in the business of providing direct loans but to give impulse, security and safety and lower interest rates to the already existing institutions—especially the mutual institutions—in order that they may extend the fullest measure of credit to would-be home owners."

The president considers the creation of this system "immediately desirable" because of "certain emergency phases," pointing to the great numbers of people who are in danger of losing their homes, which often means the loss of their savings of years, because of the difficulties in obtaining renewal for their short-term mortgages. He further believes such a system would stimulate construction, and consequently industry and employment, in the thousands of communities where the need and demand for new homes is at present hampered by lack of credit.

"This plan has found sympathetic support and indorsement of thousands of savings banks, building and loan associations, country bankers, and, above all, from would-be home owners," the president concludes, voicing the hope that the proposed measure for the federal system of home mortgage discount banks will soon be enacted into law.

INFLUX FROM FARMS HITS CHARITIES HERE

Problems of Atlanta social service agencies have been increased by a reverse of the "back-to-the-farm" movement, a migration from country to city, with particularly new and troubling burdens for the Travelers' Aid Society, according to reports at the monthly meeting of that organization Saturday.

Mrs. J. W. Payne, executive secretary, pointed out that in the plan of unemployment emergency relief undertaken by Community Chest agencies in addition to their normal social service program, the part of the Travelers' Aid Society is that of caring for dependent non-resident families. Success has attended much of its effort in forming contact with families or agencies in the home place of many of these transients and in providing for their return, this relieving the burden upon local agencies.

"In an increasing number of cases of transient individuals and families, however, it has been found impossible to establish contact with the places of their legal residence," Mrs. Payne reported. "Particularly is this the situation when the families drift in from rural counties and seek to settle themselves on Atlanta's bounty and indulgence."

In the last month the society assisted 1,022 travelers in trouble from various causes of poverty, illness, bewilderment for one reason or another, or failure of relatives to care for them. Unemployment problems made up a large part of the work and the item of dependent non-residents was unusually large.

Of the cases, 34 were of children under 16 traveling alone who were saved from actual disaster; 40 involved runaway and delinquency problems, being restored to parents or other sanctuary or to the law. Automobile travelers helped number 19, bus travelers 46, and hitch-hikers 46, the others being railroad travelers. Lodging, jobs, legal aid, medical advice and travel funds were provided among the many details of service reported as rendered.

Board Urges Public To Buy Lots at Present Low Prices

Knowing from past history that timid investors make their first venture in real estate in low-priced lots as a period of business depression wanes, the Atlanta Real Estate Board made an interesting collection last week of vacant lot bargains which its members are now offering.

Ordinarily a vacant lot with finished improvements is not considered a profitable investment to be held over a period of years, but the board points out that such an investment may prove to be very profitable if made during periods of inactivity like the present time when demand is slack and lots are offered for less than their real value as home sites.

In addition to the inducement of good value, the buyer of a lot in a period like this can feel that he is putting his money into about as safe a medium of investment as can be found. In times of economic adjustment like the present it is very difficult to say what is a good investment, as many investors are asking themselves today, but nothing can be surer than a piece of the earth itself.

Investors with small sums which they have no immediate use for would find acquisition of such lots profitable and the board suggests that they make inquiry of their brokers with the view of acquiring these bargains while there are so many choice lot bargains on the bargain counter. All of the lots mentioned below lie reasonably well, practically all of them have full improvements and most of them have shade and other qualifications which make them desirable home sites.

It will be noted that virtually all of the lots are of the moderately priced class and it requires no great capital to become an owner of a profitable lot.

Below are a few samples of the offerings which the various brokerage firms now have available for purchase:

Decatur, in the Oakhurst section, level lot, 75 by 150, $450.

Just off Club drive and close to Peachtree, 100 by 300, $2,750.

Oakdale road, an unusual type lot which will appeal to a person having landscape gardening as hobby, 100 by 500, $1,750.

Collier road, east of Northside drive, 53 by 150, shady and lies well, $1,250.

Fairview road, 100 by 300, $3,500.

Hudson drive, 60 by 150, $1,500.

East Shadowlawn, 54 by 130, $1,500.

Palisades road, 60 by 200, $2,750.

West End Park, 60 by 200, $900.

Cascade Heights, 60 by 225, all improvements, $325.

Tax League Prints Reports On City Primary Candidates

The Atlanta Taxpayers' League has issued its first monthly bulletin, a four-page paper devoted to news and facts of interest to taxpayers of Atlanta and Fulton county.

The most interesting feature is the four-column report on the qualifications of various candidates in the city primary on May 25. The bulletin suggests that candidates who fail to give information about themselves to the League should not be voted for by the members.

The reports give the salary of each position; the applicant's age, nativity, length of residence here, business activities, credit rating, status of his city taxes, kinship to other persons in the city government, connections with enterprises selling to the city.

In one instance neither candidate for an office answered the questionnaire, and it was impossible to obtain any information of value about them.

The rest of the bulletin gives news about taxpayers leagues in other cities, local tax matters, and general news affecting taxpayers, local and otherwise.

ATLANTA SCOUTS WILL PARTICIPATE IN RACES TODAY

Picked crews of the S. S. S. Southland, regional flagship; the S. S. S. Corsair and the S. S. S. Barnale will participate in the first boat races to be sponsored by the sea scout department of the Atlanta Boy Scout Council at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Piedmont park.

Captain Waren Barlar, of the Southland, announced that the crew of the Southland would be composed of DeLos Spring, coxswain; Stokes Tomlin, stroke; Gerald Linton, Ernist Burton, Bert Morris, Charles Preston, Russell Burnett, substitute. Captain J. M. Carroll, of the Corsair, has not picked the full crew yet, but Leonard Boyer will act as coxswain and Louis Moble as stroke. Captain W. R. Taylor, of the Barnal, will act as coxswain of the ship's crew and Lernard Taylor as stroke. The remainder of the crew will be made up of Charlie Barton, Gay Thrash, Frank Langford and James O'Callaghan. The crews will row in five-oar 24 whaleboats.

The first event will determine which crew can board its boats, shove off, get under way and row an eighth of a mile. The second event will be a three-quarter mile race against time. The third event will be a three-quarter mile race against each other.

EAST SHOWS GAIN IN BUILDING TOTAL

The F. W. Dodge Corporation reports that of the 13 districts comprising the 37 states east of the Rockies all but three showed higher construction contract totals in April than in March. April contract totals for the entire eastern area showed an 8 per cent gain over March in contrast with a loss of 9 per cent between the corresponding two months of 1931. But only slight encouragement is offered by the current pick-up, since analysis discloses that the gain was entirely due to public works, especially highways.

THINGS TO KNOW IN OFFICE BUILDINGS

Decisions made when present office structures were still in the blueprint stage are now in a very large degree determining the degree to which those buildings may be operated with proper economy.

That's one of the facts brought out in a bulletin on office building management policies which has recently been issued by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. John B. Lear, Philadelphia; E. B. Murray, Kansas City, and Leo J. Sheridan, Chicago, are the authorities whose discussions are included in the brochure.

1. Office space should be well distributed as to depth, between 20 and 30 feet in proper proportions. Studies made in several cities reveal the rather surprising fact that the average office tenant occupies less than 1,000 square feet of space. Accepting this figure, the conclusion is that 40 to 45 per cent of the space in a building should be 20 feet in depth, 40 to 45 per cent of the space 25 feet in depth, while the remaining 10 to 20 per cent should be 28 to 30 feet in depth.

2. Center columns should be placed at 17 to 18 feet.

3. Utilities, including the elevators, should be concentrated as much as possible in one section of the building to permit the greatest flexibility of floor development of large or small tenants.

4. Dark spaces should be utilized for utilities.

5. To avoid heavy operation cost and rapid obsolescence the utmost flexibility and elasticity must be provided for subdivision of office space.

This means interior columns should be placed wherever possible near corridor lines so that subdivision into areas larger than the unit space is possible in renting.

6. Light outlets should be placed in the outer columns instead of on partitions in order to save expense when partitions are moved.

7. Plumbing and heating facilities should be arranged to secure maximum economy in making future alterations of space.

8. Corridors should be so arranged that dead ends may be closed up and thrown into office space for larger suites.

9. Corridor doors should be opposite windows, and never opposite the stone work or mullions dividing them.

Proper width and depth of offices has a very definite effect on the rentable quality of a modern office building. Mr. Lear also emphasizes. An office 17 1-2 feet wide and 26 feet deep can be rented for as much, ordinarily, as an office 20 feet wide and 32 feet deep. But the larger unit has 185 square feet more of floor space to be taken care of. And in the present-day competition of building with building costs of operation count.

SMITH HIGH PRESENTS LAST ENTERTAINMENT

The minstrel given May 5 at Hoke Smith by the social science, home economics, music, shop, and art departments marked the last entertainment of its kind this school term.

Clifford Thomas acted as master of ceremonies. The program consisted of dance numbers by Sarah Giuffrida, the Hassler Boys, 11 pupils of Miss Gene Dozier, of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music; Irma Llorens, Lane Stokes and R. D. Hutson. A reading was given by Sarah Cohen, and a solo on the guitar and ukulele by Ruth Lockhart, comedy song by the Hassler Boys, a number by Helen Chotas and the male chorus, and Messrs. Watkins and Kimberly were most entertaining with a banjo and guitar number. Throughout the evening popular numbers of today were sung by the chorus.

The 9-B Latin classes tried their skill at modeling during the first week of May. Each model was made to represent some phase of Roman life, and the results of their efforts were handed to Miss M. L. Graham, Latin teacher.

Baseball championship games are now being played between classes to determine the champion team of the school.

Between 150 and 200 names of boys under 15 years of age were turned in to J. L. Cook, gymnasium teacher of the boys, for membership in the Keds Cracker Club, entitling them to free admission to any Cracker baseball game except on Fourth of July and at nights.

A new book of assignments on vocational and economic civics, made by Atlanta teachers, is being used this year in 9-B civics. The study of each individual's choice of vocation has proven a most interesting part of this civics course.

COUCH HAS VISIT FROM PROMINENT FORMER STUDENT

Mrs. John Childress was a visitor to Couch last week. She is an alumna of State (now Couch) school, past president of the P.-T. A. and for many years representative of the fifth ward on the school board of visitors. Recently Mr. and Mrs. Childress have removed to their farm near Atlanta, where barnyard, orchard and fruitful fields show defiance to depression.

Miss Charlotte Smith, head of the art department, and Miss Elsie Boylston, assistant, visited all the grades Wednesday and commended the work being done. Miss Smith said the H-6 Easter baskets were the most beautiful she had seen. The work of Irene Day, J. R. Ray, May Sammons, Kathryn Mayfield, Hannah Smith, Charles Burge and Evelyn Stubbs was collected for exhibition purposes.

David Edgar Ungar, valued clerk of the Central Night school, and a poet who has gained recognition for his beautiful sonnets, sent us his delightful poem written for Mothers' Day.

Good penmanship is a rare accomplishment. To acquire it requires infinite patience and much practice. Pupils who become proficient in this art receive a certificate from the authors of our penmanship books. Thirty-three children won this honor in the semester just closing.

A few weeks ago we set out our Edith Cavell dwarf rose hedge, and now every bush is laden with buds, which we hope will burst into crimson blossoms in honor of promotion day.

Field Day is just a memory, now that the tumult and shouting is over. I overheard a child say, sadly, "I lost the race. Just my Luck." If you lost, what of it? If there were no losers, there would be no winers, so the losers are an important part, you see. History, secular and sacred, tells the story of many great losers. Moses, working for 40 years in the wilderness, but failing at the last to reach his goal; Henry Clay, unsurpassed in statesmanship, losing the presidential nomination; Theodore Roosevelt, soldier, scholar, statesman, failing to get the appointment of commander of the American army in the World War.

Oh, it's a goodly company you are in, little girl. The Creator, who made and gave us our talents, merely expects us to do the best we can with what we have been endowed with. When the final rewards are made, winner and loser will receive the same, provided each has given his best effort, so this is the "luck" we must all look for.

STANTON MOTHERS ATTEND OPERETTA GIVEN BY PUPILS

The kindergarten children enjoyed making their silhouettes for Mother's Day.

The second grade made presents for their mothers on Mother's Day. They were Indian jars of clay and painted with bright designs.

On Tuesday High and Low Second and Third grades gave an operetta, "The Cruise of the Trundle Bed," to entertain their mothers.

Stanton school had a big stunt night last week. It was a financial as well as artistic success. The kindergarten with their garden operatta made a great hit. The fifth grade with its covered wagon and accompanying pioneer dance also scored a great success. Other numbers were equally applauded.

Sixteen children in the sixth grade have received penmanship certificates. James Light, Mildred Barnes, Ruth Turner, Jane Clark, Brawnson Ayres, Estelle Brewton, Catherine Lillvick, Martha Wilhite, Juanita Evans, Daisy Brooks, Mable Cofer, Forrestine Cleckler and Annie Kelly won grammar grade certificates, and Katherine McDonald, Harold Smith and Elgia Shores won certificates of excellence.

LUCKIE SCHOOL HAS PUPILS WIN IN FIELD MEET

The children of High 6 went to Grant field Thursday to the track meet and also stayed for the games in the afternoon. The successful ones on the school team are Charles Mears, who came first in runing; Louise Gunn, who came second in running hop-step-and-jump. The school is proud of them both.

Next week has been set aside for the teachers to visit the school gardens and we are very glad that our garden is one of the gardens to be on display. We hope the visitors will like it as well as we do.

Superintendent's Message

My dear Boys and Girls:

The summer is coming, spring is passing, roses are blooming, the earth is responding to the warmth of the sun and to the refreshing showers, and all nature is growing and developing. Does that not suggest to us that we must be growing in our bodies and in our minds and in our spirits?

I have written so much about your growth and development for the body that I wish to call your attention to another kind of growth which is most essential to our development into real men and women. We must grow in kindness and in thoughtfulness to others. I once heard a great man say that possibly one of the greatest contributions which Jesus made to the earth was to bring in a spirit of kindness toward all mankind. I wonder sometimes whether we realize that this kindness of spirit should begin to express itself toward those of our own home and those with whom we are most intimately associated. I have seen little girls slap their dolls, and I have thought that it indicated a bad spirit. I have seen older brothers and sisters find fault with younger brothers and sisters in a very severe way. I have even noticed mothers and fathers sometimes speaking more unkindly toward their own children than they would to the children of their neighbors.

Kindness is a quality of heart. It is not a matter of etiquet. We may pretend to have a veneer of kindness but if the spirit within us is wrong we shall often show to those nearest to us how unkindly we can speak and act. I am of the opinion that the greatest contribution that any of you can make to the welfare of your home, your sisters and your brothers is to always speak with kindness to them, of them and about them.

As the summer approaches and as we play more outdoors and as we have opportunities for more contact with our people at home through vacation I am pleading that every boy and every girl will show to his mother, to his father, to his sisters, his brothers, to his playmates, and even to the animals about him that kindness that will help him develop into the finest man, or help the girl to develop into the strongest, most helpful woman.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON, Superintendent of Schools.

JOE BROWN STUDENTS BEGIN TRACK SEASON

Joe Brown's track season began May 10 at G. M. A., where a track meet was staged. Brandes, Dowdy, Henson and Reed took care of the sprinting. Trotter and White handled the pole vault, and Wilson put the shot. Thorne, Powell and Smith did the half-mile, and Brandes and Haynes broad jumped. Keith, Bryan and Baldwin have been doing good work. The events came as follows: 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, one-half mile run, 120-yard low hurdles, pole vaulting, high jump, bread jump, shot put and the half-mile relay.

"Hansel and Gretel," the operetta, was presented last Friday week night and was greeted with tremendous applause. Francis Gatehouse was Gretel and Peggy Smith was Hansel. The colorful costumes worn by happy actors under soft lights made the presentation much more attractive.

Joe Brown was well represented at the initiation of the Quill and Scroll Society at Commercial High by James Dodd and George Goodwin. Among the initiates was Allen Acre, who has made a marvelous record on the Co-Ed Leader, the Commercial High publication.

The campus of Joe Brown is certainly being dressed up, and the back campus has just been plowed and planted. In one plot an old-fashioned garden is to be created, with old flowers and all the necessary equipment. Shrubs and the like are being set out in other places.

GORDON PUPILS IN FOURTH GIVE PLAY ON NATURE

Low kindergarten flowers are growing quite fast since we planted them in our garden. We enjoyed making baskets for our mothers for Mother's Day.

The children in High 1-2 moved from the farm to the city. They built a brick house which would be warm in winter, cool in summer, and safe all the year round.

Low 4 had a nature play Friday, after which they served the vegetables they had grown in their own garden.

The children of High 4-1 were very glad to have High 4-2 present at the meeting of their Flower-on-the-Table Club last week. Those taking part in the program presented were Cyrene Ray, Carolyn Dorson, Elizabeth Hargrove, Grace Rimes and Martha Striplin.

High 4-2 made books to be given to their mothers on Mothers' Day.

The garden of Low 5 is beautiful. We are planting chrysanthemums this week for the fall flower show.

The children of High 5-2 have divided the class into two parts and are playing bat ball every day.

Low 6 are very glad to have Edwin Eberhart and Myrtle Bearden enter our class.

We are bringing home many souvenirs from our visit to Europe.

High 6 are proud of Carlton Chaney, one of our boys as he went out to Grant field Thursday and came in second in high jump.

ALVIN BROWN.

N. FULTON HIGH P.-T. A. MEETING ELECTS OFFICERS

The North Fulton High P.-T. A. held its last meeting at the school on Monday. The student activities that have been sponsored by the school this year made their first public appearance. The school band, under the direction of Mr. Jackson, played several numbers. The Girl Reserves, with Ann Bell as president, then had their formal recognition service. Craig Robertson, as president of the Hi-Y Club, told of their work. The new P.-T. A. officers were then installed. Mrs. H. S. Alden, president; Mrs. Clarence Bell, recording secretary; Mrs. I. T. Calloway, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Tom Strickland, treasurer.

Mr. Dykes has delighted us by announcing that he will remain at North Fulton as principal and will not accept the position as high school supervisor.

The North Fulton baseball team is having a very successful season. They recently defeated Oglethorpe freshmen by a score of 7 to 5.

KIRKWOOD MAKES ANIMALS TO GIVE YOUNG PATIENTS

High 2-3 has an Indian sand table. The children have brought in gourds, an Indian tent, and Indian dolls to make their work more real.

Low 3-1 were very enthusiastic over making stuffed animals which they will present to the children's ward at Grady hospital, and we know the little sick children will enjoy them.

High 4-1 had a Mother's Day program last Friday and invited the mothers to see it.

High 5-2 is getting quite a thrill out of watching a potato grow.

High 6-1 had six children who made high school certificates in penmanship.

COMMERCIAL ACTORS WIN STATE CONTEST

Agnes Scott French Club was hostess to the Commercial High School French Club on May 9 at Agnes Scott College. Mme. Triare, a French student who is studying at Agnes Scott, sang a delightful song in French and also made a talk in her native tongue.

Miss Lillian M. Pierce, assistant principal of Commercial, will entertain the faculty and their families with a tea at her home, 1138 Lucile avenue, on Sunday, May 15, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Ethel Bullard, Harold Baggett, Helen Rusk and Elizabeth Ritter, student officers, will serve.

The play, "A Night in an Inn," which was presented in the state contest in Athens, Ga., May 6, was awarded first prize, a silver loving cup. Mildred Flury, editor-in-chief of the Co-ed Leader, student paper of Commercial, also won first place in the girls' essay contest in the state awards.

The annual oratorical and debating contest was held in the C. H. S. auditorium Friday, May 13. The girls' glee club and the orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. Those who gave orations were: Ethel Mae Beavers, "Night Brings Out the Stars;" Frank A. Davis, "Thomas A. Edison;" Hazel Davis, "What Holds Our Life Together," and Esther Goldstein, "War."

The debate was, "Resolved, that Atlanta should adopt city manager form of government." The debaters were, on the affirmative, Bill Zachary and Charles Gallaher; on the negative, Mildred Flury and Samuel Hinton. The judges were A. H. Bancher, H. M. Howard and J. A. Watson.

The Alumni Society of Commercial High will entertain the seniors with a dance at the Shrine mosque on Thursday, May 19, from 9 until 12 o'clock. Admission will be $1 per couple for all who are not seniors and 75 cents per couple for seniors. The public is cordially invited.

ELIZABETH RITTER.

SECOND GRADERS HAVE TWO MOTHS AT CAPITOL VIEW

Low and High Kindergarten made candy for their mothers Friday.

Low and High 1 have new library tables wkith pretty picture books on them.

Low 2 has two beautiful moths. One just hatched from a cocoon that the class has had for a long time. They enjoyed watching him learn to fly.

High 2 children sent letters and a basket of flowers to their teacher, who is absent.

Low 3 made Mother's Day greetings for their mothers Friday.

High 3 is taking a study trip to Japan. On May 5 at the festival of the "Feast of the Flags," all the boys in Japan celebrate their birthday.

Low 4's gift to their mothers on Mother's Day was a program of living pictures of famous paintings. Descriptions of these and sketches of the life and works of the painter were given.

High 4 children made baskets for their moters and filled them with roses, and a love message.

Everyone in Low 5 is working on a home garden as well as helping in the garden at school. Some of them have some very pretty flowers which they bring to school for their room. The strawberries and radishes in the vegetable gardens are ready for use, and it is fine to be able to have them from our own gardens.

High 5 likes to dance the Virginia reel, as the colonial boys and girls did.

Our school is excited over the lily pool that is being built in our garden. Miss Tuck has fiven us a lovely bird bath, and we have two new trellises. Many flowers are in bloom and we are all enjoying them.

HOME PARK CLASS GIVES CONCRETE BENCH TO SCHOOL

We are delighted to see our new bird bath and concrete bench on our front yard. The bench is a gift of High 6 who are soon leaving for junior high. W. M. Launius presented the bird bath. We appreciate his kindness and will enjoy the gift very much.

The children in the kindergarten are proud of their rock garden.

The most interesting feature of the past week's work in the first grade was the preparation for Mother's Day. The cards designed were quite pretty and carried a large measure of love and happiness from the young children to their mothers.

The children of Low 2 were very glad to have a visit from their sponsor, Miss Lucy M. Adams. They hope she will be back soon.

The pupils of Low 3 are very much interested in watching the development of the tadpoles which they have in their room.

The children of Low 4 enjoyed making Mother's Day cards. We also have a May pole border in our room.

The pupils of High 6 are busy working on their program for their promotion exercises. They are looking forward eagerly to junior high school.

CENTRAL GRADUATION TO BE HELD MAY 19

The twentieth annual commencement exercises of the Central Night school will be held in the city auditorium May 19. One of the largest groups of graduates to ever participate in a like ceremony will receive their diplomas from J. Ira Harrelson, president of the board of education.

In the secretarial and commercial departments approximately 114 seniors will graduate. In the regular high school or academic classes, seven students will graduate.

A feature of the ceremonies, to which the public is invited, will be the distribution of the commencement edition of the Modern Knight, a 40-page year book, being a cross-section of the various activities and classes of the Pryor street institution.

Tom Swafford will deliver the valedictory address and Robert Stradley will deliver the salutatory address. The Tech Night school scholarship, awarded annually, will be given also to Swafford.

Orchestral numbers will be rendered by the C. N. S. orchestra, directed by Professor Robert L. Horney.

In honor of the graduates, the two literary societies, the Henry W. Grady and the Thomas Jefferson, will jointly sponsor a dance at the Georgia Tech evening school from 9 until 11 o'clock Friday, May 20.

As the society girls would say, this dance is the culmination of a brilliant social season for the school. It brings to a climax a gay aura that will be resumed in September when the portals of the school swing open once more.

A comparatively large number of students have remained on the school ledgers. With the first signs of spring many students drop out, but the rickety stairs and the decaying gray walls, as one student put it, are still creaking with the weight of the tramping feet of the ambitious students.

SPONSOR GIVES TENTH CHILDREN CLASS LUNCHEON

High 6-1 enjoyed a lovely luncheon given to them on Tuesday by their sponsor, Walter Rich.

High 6-2 has 33 writing certificates out of 42. They are very proud of Willene Dean and Edna Kline, who won first places at Grant field on May 5, 1932.

Low 6 is the proud owner of the athletic pennant in batball. This class is the city champion in batball. Mrs. Pennington was their teacher.

High 5-1 are glad to be the winners of four ribbons at the tulip show.

High 5-2 had a Mother's Day program. The boys won the north side championship in dodgeball.

Low 5 children enjoyed their first visit to Lee for the games. They did not win, but they enjoyed practicing good sportsmanship.

High-4 had a visit from Miss Pollard. They had a real Viking feast.

Low 4 has some flax growing in the room. They enjoy the study of flax very much.

The children of High 3-1 made Mother's Day cards with pretty red roses on the outside; on the inside they wrote rhymes which were composed by the children. They took them home to their mothers.

The children of High 3-2 are making a pretty Dutch border for their blackboard.

High 2 children have been coloring their pottery jars and putting Indian designs on them. They made Indian dresses and put beads on some of them. They have learned an Indian dance.

Low 2 children made pretty folders today for their mothers. They learned some pretty poems and songs about mother.

High 1 combination had a luna moth to hatch in school last Saturday.

High 1 are enjoying their study of birds this week. They have also made some very pretty baskets.

Low 1 made pretty cards for their mothers on Mother's Day.

The Kindergartens made a souvenir for their mothers for Mother's Day.

FAIR CHILDREN WIN SILVER CUP FOR ATHLETICS

Fair Street school was busy last week with Field Day games. This school had four teams to go out Field Day. We were disappointed not to win a pennant, but we are not giving up. We hope to have better success next year.

We are very proud of the children who represented the school in athletic events. These children won a silver loving cup for the school. They also won several prizes for themselves. Robert Snead and Pat Linch each won a pin for coming out first and Ruth Goodwin won a pair of Keds for second place in athletic events. Thomas Nicholas came out third in running. The school is very proud of them.

We have now turned our attention to working hard for promotion. We hope that every child in Fair will be promoted.

ENGLISH AVENUE CHILDREN STAGE A HEALTH PARADE

This week we had two celebrations, one for music and the other for health. Over 700 children had health certificates and marched in a parade led by the drum and bugle corps. All the children wore head bands with a cute little daisy on them which has been adopted as the health flower. Some of the mothers at home put head bands even on the little babies who had perfect health, and brought them out to see the parade. Mr. Enlow made a picture of the children arranged to spell the word "Health."

Our fine sponsor, T. L. Johnson, made us a visit this week and brought out two beautiful silver loving cups, which he will award to the best all-round student. One cup is for the boys and the other for the girls.

Buford Garner won first place in high jump at field day. We had two teams playing in the finals. Our girls' volley ball team lost by one point. Hard luck girls! We know you are good sports. Our boys' shuttle relay played a fine game, but our neighbors, Goldsmith, won. I do not know of anybody else we had rather lose to.

We were certainly proud of the number of penmanship certificates awarded by the Zaner-Blosser Company. The following children were awarded high school certificates: High 6-1, Lois Folds, Willie Mae Hughes, Jeanette Pandtle, Marguerite Cochran, Louise Dixon, Jewell Kown, Sara Withers and Opal Crews; High 6-2, Louise Barfield and Gladys Langston.

O'KEEFE HAS ANNUAL PLAY DAY CONTESTS

The O'Keefe girls had their annual play day Friday. In their physical training classes the girls are divided into two groups, the red and the white. These two sides have been competing against each other in the different activities the entire year and play day marks the finals. Following is the list of events: Bat ball, volleyball, cage ball, basketball, relay, 50-yard dash, horseshoe throwing, archery, posture contest, marching and tug of war. Over 500 girls participated in the meet.

The boys' play day, which consisted of track and field events and baseball, was held Thursday. Following are the events and participants: 50-Yard Dash—Seventh grade: John Perkerson, A. C. Jones, Roy Marrion, George Wilson; eighth grade, Joe Landrum, Harry Pitner, Donald Smith, Frank Gibbs; ninth grade, Richard Courtney, Bingham Bache, William Culbreath, Milton Klein. 100-Yard Dash—Seventh grade, John Perkerson, Lamar Flemming, Cloris Gunter, George Wilson; eighth grade, Donald Smith, Paul Giles, Frank Gibbs, Harry Pitner; ninth grade, Richard Courtney, Abram Ziegler, Thurston Willis, William Culbreath. 220-Yard Dash—Seventh grade, Asa George, Cloris Gunter, Russell Anglin, John Perkerson; eighth grade, Gordon Payne, Donald Smith, Harry Pitner, Frank Gibbs; ninth grade, Richard Courtney, Thurston Willis. Abram Ziegler. Broad Jump—Seventh grade, Roy Shumake, Charles Manetta, Margeson, Alex Jones; eighth grade, Paul Giles, William Shumaker, Donald Smith, Jim Gilelis; ninth grade, Gilbert Ogg, Coleman Ellis, Martin Kelley, Milton Klein. High Jump—Seventh grade, John Perkerson, Miller, Lamar Flemming, Carey Barnes; eighth grade, Donald Smith, Henry Pitner, Frank Gibbs, Frank Upshaw; ninth grade, Henry Anderson, Bill Braziel, Owen Perry, Bob McCoy. Shot Put—Seventh grade, Roy Shumake, Carey Barnes, Frank Margeson, A. Cole; eighth grade, Henry Pitner, Charles Giles, William Shumaker, Tiller Von Morris; ninth grade, Henry Anderson, Bob McKoy, William Coleman, Hoodue Barrett. Half-Mile Run—Seventh grade, William Seay, John Perkerson, Marion Jacobs, Dick Webster, Leon Greene, William Marshall, Reeves Ransome; ninth grade, Bob McCoy, Paul Burge, Nathan Napier, Ed Rollingsworth, Robert Bush. Baseball—Section 45 vs. Section 32; Section 15 vs. Section 27; Section 8 vs. Section 54.

KEY PUPILS WILL EAT VEGETABLES FROM OWN GARDEN

The children of High Kindergarten made presents for Mother's Day. They are planning to have a garden party to enjoy the vegetables they raise.

The ungraded pupils have made some flower baskets for gifts to their mothers.

Other classes also made presents for their mothers. High 1 made May baskets for Mother's Day and filled them with fresh flowers. Each boy and girl of High 3-1 made a booklet for Mother's Day. On the cover was a rose with their picture pasted in the middle of the rose. In the inside were poems about mother.

Low 2 invited their mothers to a Mother's Day program. Songs, readings and a play were given.

High 5-1 are busy writing poems for Mother's Day. The children have made some pretty little folders to put the poems in. They hope their mothers will like them as much as we do.

Mrs. Phillips, who lives on Capitol avenue, invited Low 1 over to see a lamb, some pigeons, and chickens. She also gave the class a party after the excursion.

Low 3 are glad to have Hannah Goldwasser back with them again after her operation. They are enjoying their study of Moses.

HARRIETT KANTOR.

PICTURE SHOWS CALHOUN PUPILS COMMUNITY WORK

The children of Calhoun were glad to have Mr. Enlow come out and show them a very interesting and instructive picture called "How to Beautify Your Community."

Mr. Burgess and his corps of workmen did a fine job on our school yard last week.

The second and third grade boys and girls are proud of their gardens because they have many flowers in bloom. Some of the boys in the third grade are making bird houses.

The fourth grade pupils have been keeping our principal's office decorated with flowers from their school garden.

Ray Stanford, from Low 5, is in the hospital for a tonsil operation, and the pupils are taking him some flowers from their school garden.

The High 6 pupils are writing a play for their promotion exercises based on the sixtieth anniversary of founding of the Atlanta public schools.

The low sight conservation class is very much excited over the entertainment they are to give for their mothers on Thursday.

PRYOR CLASS HAS A WIENER ROAST OUT IN COUNTRY

Last week, which was the first week of May, was a very busy and happy one for the children of Pryor Street school. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday we practiced extra hard for our field day athletics. Thursday was field day. Some of the children who did not take part in the athletics went to see the games and enjoyed them very much.

On Friday the sixth grade children left for a weiner roast at their teacher's house in the country. Some of the mothers and teachers went with them. We were delighted to have as our guests our principal, Miss Orr; Miss Martha Haygood, the former principal of Pryor Street school, and Miss Crystal Wellborn, an Agnes Scott graduate, who has been doing practice teaching in the sixth grade. Mr. Angus Orr, who is "Uncle Billy" to the children, also went along. He told us two very interesting stories. We had a good time eating wieners, hunkies, potato chips and candy. We saw some flowers and plants which we had never seen before, but we will know them next time we see them.

The fifth grade children are working hard on their historical scenes, plays and dances. The first grades are studying gardens and have made some very pretty books illustrating their work.

BASS PAPER AWARDED MERIT CERTIFICATE

The Aerial staffs attended the Georgia Scholastic Press Association convention in Athens, Ga., on May 6. The Aerial was awarded a certificate of distinction along with other papers which were judged highly according to journalistic principles. The Aerial staffs were awarded the loving cup which was offered to the school having the largest delegation. Fifty-one of the members on the Aerial staffs were present. The staffs wish to express their appreciation to Mrs. Koch for the lovely frame she had made for the certificate of distinction.

Nine High 8 and 9 High 6 were the two classes which came out ahead in the spelling tournament. These two classes contested Tuesday afternoon, May 10, to determine the victorious class, that class to be given either a picnic or theater party, according to its preference.

Miss Lily Brooks was in charge of the assembly program on Wednesday, May 11, and the subject was "Latin." Several guests honored the assembly period by their presence. Miss Hattie Lea had direction of the program on May 4. The theme of the program was the fundamentals of art and the types of designs.

SPONSORS SPEAK TO JEROME JONES SCHOOL CLASSES

Jerome Jones school enjoyed having their mothers and sponsors come to see them on Tuesday. During that day J. E. Morrison visited the first grade; W. H. James the third grade; J. S. Hopkins the fourth, and Marion M. Jackson the fifth grade. We enjoyed their visits and their talks to us very much and we hope that our sponsors will feel that we children of Jerome Jones are their especial friends We thank them and also the many mothers who called on us that day. We hope that they will come to see us many other times.

The kindergarten saved the pumpkin seeds from last Halloween and are now planting them.

The third grade pupils were glad to have their sponsor, Mr. James, to visit them.

The fifth grade are delighted to know that Mr. Marion Jackson has consented to be their sponsor.

The sixth grade was glad to have so many mothers at our last P.-T. A. to help us win.

JOSEPHINE STRICKLAND.

GOLDSMITH CLASS LEARNS TO NAME GARDEN FLOWERS

Everyone was anxious to come to the P.-T. A. Wednesday as it was our last meeting, and I'm sure that it was enjoyed by many mothers and fathers.

The kindergarten children are learning the names of all the flowers in our yards and garden.

The first grade have a poem club and are learning new poems every day. We just love to say them.

The second grade are proud of their beautiful poppy garden. They were planted on "Poppy Day." Each child planted some seed.

The third grade is quite proud of the visit of Miss Margaret Askew, from Agnes Scott College. Miss Askew taught us many new and interesting things about Japan and we are very grateful to her.

Well, school is almost out, so High 4 is working very hard so that we all will get promoted.

The fifth grade pupils are very interested in volley ball. They are learning the game so that they will be able to play next year.

The sixth grade is so busy preparing for graduation and Maddox Junior High that the days seem hardly long enough. We hope to receive a diploma in health, scholarship and character.

MILDRED TERRELL.

FAITH CHILDREN TRAVEL IN WOODS IN INDIAN DRESS

Robert Rice has been absent from school for some time on account of illness. We hope he will soon be able to be with us again.

The green cap, Grady Disspain in ungraded Low, had a grand time at the breakfast given by Miss Wesley.

The children of ungraded High spent one morning pruning the shrubs in front of the building.

Miss Stone's class invited Mrs. Warner's class to go to the woods. Everybody dressed in the Indian suits they had made. They carried bows and arrows, tom-toms and other things and had a real Indian time.

Low 3 is proud of its club members, who study hard and bring in home work. The club will meet in the woods for a surprise this week.

Two plays were given at the assembly by Low 4. They were, "King Good Health" and "How the Bluebird Was Chosen Herald."

There are a few roses growing in the Low 5 garden which are very pretty.

Mary Lou Gillespie, our safety council president, enjoyed the breakfast in the woods so much.

GENEVA WILSON.

TECH HIGH CLASSES COMPETE IN RELAYS

In the class relays at Tech High, which will end some time during this week, there are three teams that are sure of winning. Those three teams are Smith's, Sutton's and Sutherland's. Each team has six men who run 220 yards each; the team running three-quarters of a mile. Smith's team brags of the best time, which is 2:33; Sutherland boasts of a 2:34, and the sprinters of Sutton have a 2:38. Real competition is expected before the last lap is over.

Although losing the honor of best drill company to Boys' High, Tech High's star company is to be congratulated on the fine showing made at the annual R. O. T. C. drill held at Piedmont park last Wednesday. The whole unit is to be commended on the fine showing it made. Stokes Tomlin, colonel of Tech High, was presented with a medal for being the outstanding cadet in the school.

Many seniors are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Tehisean, which will soon be ready to be presented to them. The Rainbow this week will show a printed proof of the cover.

CREW CLASS HAS OLYMPUS SHOWN ON SAND TABLE

The candy pulling gave the girls and boys of Crew a good time. High 6 was prize winner for the most tickets. Jerome Kahanov was the best seller in the school.

For Good Music Week the chorus sang for the school.

Miss Ridgeley, of Agnes Scott, taught High 6 for three days last week. We enjoyed her visit. Harriet Angel, Dorothy Schnuck, Lucia Williams, Jerome Kahanov, David Dorin and Joseph Torrence, of High, will go with Mrs. Temple and Mrs. Bloodworth to visit the Georgia Acedemy for the Blind, May 14.

High 5 have enjoyed the work in the school garden very much and their efforts have not been in vain. Many beautiful plants are blooming and others are growing nicely.

Low 4 is making a miniature of the Greek games at Mt. Olympus on its sand table. Bonnie Jean Mewborn has almost completed a clay model of the discus thrower.

High 2 have had a gift made for them. A friend of the class gave them a sack of Chilian nitrate. That is what flower and plants just love to eat. It is their candy and ice cream, too. About 10 days ago the class began to feed it to the growing things on our big seven and a half foot sand table, and you should see how much better they all look. One sad sick geranium has straightened its back, and we think it is going to smile at us, too—you know the way flowers smile is by blooming.

HAYGOOD SCHOOL PUPILS PREPARE GARDEN PLAYLET

Low and High Kindergarten are enjoying constructing the "Three Bears' House," with large blocks, dramatizing the story, and making houses and bears out of paper.

Low 1 are glad to welcome two new children.

High 1 are getting ready to make aprons.

High and Low 2 girls are dressing the boys as cavemen. They are making the clothes of sacks. They are stringing acorns for necklaces.

High 3 and Low 4 are happy preparing a garden playlet to be presented in costumes at the May P.-T. A. meeting.

Ungraded 1 is very busy making costumes for a drill for the P.-T. A. and the last of school.

Ungraded 2 has 100 per cent in attendance. Our garden is beautiful.

High 5 and Low 6 had a very interesting Mother's Day program Friday, May 6.

MARGARET L. BOWEN.

INMAN CHILDREN RECEIVE PENNANT IN POTATO RELAY

S. M. Inman school is very proud of Low 5 for winning the potato relay pennant at field day. They especially want to congratulate Frank Lowndes for being winner in broad jump.

High 1-2 have been having a sad time with chicken pox, but they are slowly getting well and coming back to school.

High 2 enjoyed writing a poem for their mothers on Mother's Day.

High 5-3 have their magazine about ready and will finish it this week. They elected new officers last week. They are Leland Mowry, president; Imogene Green, vice president; Ann Neidling, secretary, and Jack Webster, Red Cross reporter.

High 5-2 are very proud that they have finally mastered the light parts of speech in English.

Combination 6 entertained their mothers at a grade tea last week. They had a little program for them in which they showed some of the things we have been doing this year.

MURPHY GRADUATION PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

On June 2, in the school auditorium, about 190 Murphy boys and girls will graduate. The program for that occasion is as follows: Scripture reading, Margene Holbrook; invocation, Dr. Paul Muse; greetings to audience, Geraldine Chambers; fellowship, Talitha Hambrick; scholarship, Martha Burns; song, "Blossom Time," class; leadership, Fred Gober; citizenship, Mary Norsworthy; song, "Our Own School," class; principal's message; address by Superintendent Willis A. Sutton; delivery of certificates by President J. Ira Harrelson; awards and recessional.

May Day at Murphy, Friday, May 6, was a grand success. Both the students and teachers co-operated splendidly with Miss Dorothy Hinman and R. D. Powell, under whose direction the program was given. After an early recess, everybody went out on the athletic field to join in sack races, potato races, volley ball, jumping and balancing tests. Each student was urged to take part in some event. The winners of the girls' classes were 8-H-2, 9-L-4, and 7-L-4. Margie Woodbury was high point girl. In the boys' events, 9-H-2 came first; 9-L-1 and 2 second, and 9-L-4 third, with Harry Allen high point boy.

Several interesting athletic plans are being anticipated. A tennis tournament will begin Monday. Every member of the club will have a chance to play in this tournament. An individual field meet is being planned by the physical education teachers. At this meet, instead of having every student take part, only one or two will enter from each class. The Boys' Hi-Y Club is planning a swimming party, which will be held at Log Cabin.

NEW RATE SCHEDULE ON MELONS OFFERED

More proposals of railways to increase the freight rate of watermelons moving out of the southeast were heard Saturday by representatives of shippers and railways of this territory attending the second day's hearing of the case by the interstate commerce commission at the Biltmore hotel. Examiner J. E. Snider, of Washington, D. C., is conducting the hearing.

Witnesses for the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads submitted evidence dealing with the costs of transporting melons and repeated the necessity of increasing freight rates.

J. E. Marks, representing the Chamber of Commerce of Lexington, Ky., and Edgar Moulton, representing the New Orleans, La., freight traffic bureau, presented evidence Saturday to show that a hike of rates to Lexington and New Orleans would result in a 15 per cent increase over the present rates. They contended that the purchasing powers of citizens are lower than they were three years ago, and that they could not pay a higher rate.

J. R. Van Arnum, of Washington, D. C., transportation secretary of the National League of Commission Merchants of the United States, is representing the interests of the league at the hearing. Rail heads will complete their testimony Monday before that of the shippers is resumed. The hearing is expected to continue through Wednesday.

PEEPLES PUPILS IN SIXTH GRADE CHOOSE SPEAKERS

High 6 chose seven pupils in their room as splendid speakers ready to talk on any subject of their particular work. After narrowing it down to two, it was decided that Betty Holcombe was the best and Betty Beavers the next best.

Low 6 are studying a poem, "You," by Edgar A. Guest. This poem puts pep into them when they are having a test.

High 5-2 are working harder and harder as the term comes to an end in order that everybody will be promoted.

High 5-1 are proud of their membership cards to the "Flower-on-the-Table" Club. These are the members: Ruth Drane, Elizabeth Ayers, Angela Wilkerson, Louise Beavers, Rosalyn Lee and Doris Hamrick.

Low 4 are grieving over the death of their turtle. Their tadpoles are turning into frogs very quickly.

High 4 won the attendance banner and the bank banner.

High 3-2 are very sorry that Joe Burton is absent. They have many nice drawing from their history.

High 2-2 children are enjoying having a vase of flowers on each table in their room.

High 1-2 are very proud that they have the bank banner.

Low 1 went to visit Mr. Ross' dairy farm.

High Kindergarten made a special visit to see Robert Voyles, who was run over by a car.

Low Kindergarten went on a nice walk last week.

BETTY BEAVERS,

STUDENTS TO LEAD LOCAL OBSERVANCE OF GOOD-WILL DAY

Students from Atlanta schools, colleges and universities will gather in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning to observe International Good Will Day, when the youth of many nations will extend greeting to each other on the thirty-third anniversary of the first Hague conference. Dr. W. T. McElveen, chairman of the international relations committee of the Atlanta Christian Council, will preside.

When the appointed representatives of the schools gather in the auditorium they will find flags of all nations decorating the walls. Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. will speak the greetings, while Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of the Atlanta schools, will give an address. Singing of patriotic songs, special numbers by the Morehouse College quartet, radio receptions of greetings from the youth of other nations will feature the program.

The meeting will be opened by a prayer by the Rev. Father M. A. Cotter, of Sacred Heart church, while the radio prayer will be given by Dr. D. P. McGeachey, president of the Christian Council, and Rabbi David Marx will say the benediction. Other speakers will be Roy LeCraw, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. J. N. McEachern, for the women of Atlanta; A. Steve Nance, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and Miss Frances King and W. A. Dobson for the Boy and Girl

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

S. R. O.

by Ralph T. Jones

Midweek newspapers, with eight-column headlines, a few days ago confirmed the story published in this column two weeks ago—that Loew's Grand theater was going to close while extensive alterations are being made. In fact, the confirmatory story stated that $250,000 was to be spent in a complete rebuilding of the theater. If information is correct, everything except the four outside walls is to be ripped out and a brand-new playhouse created for Atlanta's amusement.

* * * *

Which is gratifying for more reasons than one. First, because any improvement is a thing for congratulation. Second, because it puts a number of workmen on the pay roll while the demolition and construction jobs are under way. And, third, because it points the moral that this humble column is a good place for folks interested in theater news to look if they want to read the news first. While it is news.

* * * *

Can't help wondering, however, what all the good fellows who compose the house staff at the Grand—from Manager Lew White down—will do during the three months or so the theater is being rebuilt. Three months off the pay roll is a long time in the year of the depression.

* * * *

Want to advise everyone to see "The Doomed Battalion," now showing at the Capitol. Manager Harry Rathner said this was a great picture before it was shown, and, by gosh, he was conservative. It is doubtful if the screen has yet shown us as marvelous camera shots as are to be found in this production.

* * * *

In "Sinners in the Sun," at the Paramount, there is a scene where a gigolo explains his own philosophy of life. Even if the rest of the picture wasn't good—which it is—this scene alone would be worth the price of admission. And Chester Morris and Carole Lombard are satisfactorily convincing in the two chief roles.

* * * *

Every one of you who appreciates a tip will take this one—and go to the Fox this week. "The Woman in Room 13" is entertainment far better than the title might lead you to expect. It is really fine and the work of Elissa Landi—this lady gets nearer every day to the first half-dozen stars of the moment.

* * * *

Julius Levine, of the home office of Columbia Pictures, at New York, was in town last week, on some sort of an inspection trip to the southern headquarters here. Ted Toddy had to throw a party for Mr. Levine and the conductor of this column, and had, of course, to make the entire thing kosher. I don't know how to spell the names of the dishes, but, boy, that roast chicken was the cat's ankle.

* * * *

Did you hear the gag from "Local Boy Makes Good," now at the Georgia? Joe Brown becomes a great sprinter and he says he never knew he could run fast until the champion runner got mad at him and chased him.

* * * *

You've been hearing about the playing of Graham Jackson, Atlanta's unique colored organist, band leader and master of a dozen instruments? Make a note, right now, in your little red book, to reserve the evening of May 26. It's a Thursday. For Graham is going to play the organ at the auditorium. He'll have his jazz orchestra there, too. And the Washington High Glee Club, a hundred voices, will sing. It'll be a great event, believe me. The auditorium will have sections for both white and colored patrons. It's a benefit, for the extra curricula activities of the school. A worthy cause. And, more important to ticket buyers, grand entertainment.

Diary of a Pre-Viewer.

WEDNESDAY—"The Woman in Room 13." At the Fox. A story of love and deception. Of a woman's struggle to keep the happiness she finds. Of heartless revenge and murder. Of mystery and a solution through a woman's wit. Entertaining screen fare, made doubly so by the splendid work of Elissa Landi.

* * * *

THURSDAY—"Sinners in the Sun." At the Paramount. Chester Morris and Carole Lombard in a modern version of "Rags Are Royal Raiment If Worn for Virtue's Sake!" From the angle of both sexes. Good entertainment, with the soliloquy by the gigolo providing the big spot of the entire show.

* * * *

THURSDAY (Again)—"Milady's Escapade." An abbreviated screen version of the opera, "Martha." Shown at National Theater Supply Company. Well acted and well sung. A two-reeler that ought to attract a lot of trade to any house. The great old tunes of the gay old opera almost as charming as when sung by real flesh and blood.

To Be Seen on Atlanta Screens

Elissa Landi, who is rapidly forging her way into the front row of feminine stars of the talking screen, does the finest work of her career to date in "The Woman in Room 13," a thrilling story of love, murder and mystery, which is now showing on the screen at the Fox. In a magnificent supporting cast are found Neil Hamilton, Ralph Bellamy, Myrna Loy and other favorites.

In conjunction with this splendid screen attraction the Fox is showing an exceptionally clever Fanchon and Marco stage idea, entitled "Stage Door." It is one of the fastest-stepping and snappiest productions to come from the famous F. and M. studios.

The story of "The Woman in Room 13" concerns a lovely woman who discovers that her husband is repeatedly and persistently deceiving her and spending his time with other women. At the final and most flagrant insult to the wife, she leaves him and secures a divorce, despite the fact that it defeats him in an election and ruins his political career.

Later the woman meets, loves, marries and finds happiness with another man. But the first husband, embittered, seeks revenge and to do so implicates his former wife in a murder. Her second husband takes the guilt upon himself but is saved from death by her evidence on the witness stand. That evidence, however, convinces him his wife has been unfaithful and he is led away to prison hating her and refusing to speak with her.

How the woman traps the man who had plotted her unhappiness and finds restoration in the arms of the man she loves so well makes a fascinating and brilliant conclusion to a picture that is astonishingly delightful throughout.

Enrico Leide and the Fox concert orchestra have another splendid overture, while Al Evans continues to perform his popularity miracles at the organ.

Among the principals in the cast of the stage production are Bob Hall, Webster and Marino, Constance Evans, Harney and Connors, Vina Zolle and a grand row of Sunkist Beauties.

Buckhead to Show Rue Morgue Picture

The Buckhead Theater offers for Monday and Tuesday Edgar Allen Poe's immortal mystery, "Murders in the Rue Morgue." It is a thrilling story of a scientist who controls an ape that terrorizes the people. The leading characters are portrayed by Bela Lugosi, Sidney Fox, Leon Waycoff and Bert Roach.

The picture for Wednesday is "The Silent Witness," an interesting detective drama, with Lionel Atwill, Greta Nissen and Bramwell Fletcher in the leading roles. The story has to do with the efforts made by an English gentleman to save his son from the consequence of a murder he thought he had committed by taking upon himself the burden of the guilt.

Wallace Beery and Clark Gable share honors in "Hell Divers," a naval air drama, for Thursday and Friday. The story concerns the adventure of two chief petty officers attached to Squadron One. An excellent supporting cast includes Conrad Nagel, Dorothy Jordan, Marjorie Rambeau, Marie Prevost and Cliff Edwards.

The offering for Saturday is "The Unexpected Father," featuring Slim Summerville and ZaSu Pitts. Little four-year-old Cora Sue Collins gives a perfect performance as the little child who hides in Slim's car and calls him papa.

Georgia Offers College Picture, With Joe Brown

Joe E. Brown, the wide-mouthed funny comedian, is the star of "Local Boy Makes Good," now showing at Keith's Georgia. The fact that Joe is a favorite in Atlanta was proven by the large crowds that witnessed the opening of the picture Saturday. The picture will be shown through Tuesday.

Ruth Hall, beautiful Tampa, Fla., girl, plays opposite Joe. Miss Hall is the first member of the Junior League to appear on the screen. About two years ago Miss Hall became interested in pictures when United Artists made scenes for "Hell Harbor" at Tampa and immediately afterwards the young lady went to Hollywood, determined that she would crash the gates of the film world. She has appeared in several pictures, but this is the first time she has been given a prominent role in a production.

"Local Boy Makes Good" is comedy from start to finish with Joe playing the part of a young college man who would rather study botany than go out for the track team, although he was the fastest runner in his school. This fact, however, was not known until he was once chased by the star runnner of the team. There are many amusing situations in the picture that has kept audiences in an uproar wherever it has been shown.

Edgar Allan Poe Film Monday at Empire

"Murders in the Rue Morgue," probably one of the strangest pictures ever filmed, is to be the feature for the Empire theater, corner Georgia avenue and Crew street, Monday and Tuesday. This gruesome, weird story by Edgar Allan Poe has been made into a powerful, emotional screen thriller.

Wednesday and Thursday will be bargain days with the showing of "Flying High," starring Bert Lahr and Charlotte Greenwood, and "Single Sin," with Kay Johnson and Bert Lytell.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "The Guardsman," with ZaSu Pitts and Roland Young, will be shown. "Amateur Nite" on the stage complete the bill for Friday.

"Clearing the Range" will be shown Saturday. Hoot Gibson brings to life again one of those "he man" characters of the west. Sally Eilers is the leading lady.

"Riders Purple Sage" Ponce de Leon Opener

"Riders of the Purple Sage," featuring George O'Brien, is scheduled for the Ponce de Leon theater Monday and Tuesday. This fascinating story of the old west was written by Zane Grey.

Wednesday's feature is "High Stakes," with Lowell Sherman and Mae Murray. The story centers around a money marriage in high society circles and shows how a ne'er-do-well comes back and saves the family honor.

"Consolation Marriage," with Irene Dunne and Pat O'Brien, is the Thursday and Friday offering. A lonely couple, both of whom have been jilted, are attracted to each other and agree to marriage because of their loneliness and sympathy for each other.

"A Dangerous Affair," featuring Jack Holt and Ralph Graves, is the splendid Saturday offering. It is the story of a small-town police lieutenant and newspaper reporter who desire more thrills than the small town affords.

'Secret Witness' Is Cameo Film To Start Week

A policeman listening in on a busy wire at the ground floor switchboard of an apartment house, rushes up to the penthouse, from the terrace of which a girl has just leaped to her death, and finds dying the man he just heard laughing over the phone! He has been shot, but there is no one to be found in the apartment except the victim's pet ape.

Wheeler, Woolsey Open DeKalb Bill

Monday and Tuesday Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Girl Crazy," assisted by Eddie Quillan, Dorothy Lee, Mitzi Green, Kitty Kelly, Arline Judge, will open at the DeKalb theater.

Wednesday brings "Arizona," with Laura La Plante, John Wayne, June Clyde and others. It is a dramatic story of a woman scorned—and the man on whom she sought to wreak her wrath.

Thursday and Friday "Murders in the Rue Morgue," with Bela Lugosi and Sidney Fox, will be shown.

Saturday presents Bob Steele in "Law of the West."

'Sinners in Sun' at Paramount Featuring Lombard and Morris

"Sinners in the Sun," the feature picture now playing at the Paramount theater, offers Caroll Lombard and Chester Morris in their best roles.

The plot revolves around a poor but ambitious girl who desires the luxuries of life more than the poverty which love would give her. Chester Morris plays the part of the young man who loves and wants Caroll Lombard until he finds that she is going around with a young married man. Disgusted at her actions, he marries a rich young woman for spite. Of course everything works out all right in the end.

The vaudeville bill on this program offers a variety of entertainment. Val and Ernie Stanton, along with Don Santo and Exie, headline the bill jointly. The Stantons have been seen here many times and their use of a mixed English and American dialog never fails to excite plenty of laughter.

Don Santo and Exie engage in a fast comedy gag contest interspersed with songs and acrobatic falls. Miss Exie has a splendid blues voice and her interpretations are very pleasing, as is her yodeling of a Swiss love song. Don Santo is not only proficient in his jokes but also adds comedy with his falls.

Roye and Maye offer a dancing act entitled "Moods in Steps," which is one of the finest Terpsichorean offerings ever presented in Atlanta.

The Honey Family specializes in intricate acrobatic feats. One of the unique things about this act is that there are four girls and only one man. The tricks are thrilling and the entire act is staged very cleverly.

The Paramount concert orchestra under the direction of Adolphe Kornspan offers the beautiful music of "Rio Rita" as their overture on this program.

Novarro in "Ben Hur" Offered at Palace

"Ben Hur" is offered at the Palace theater Monday and Tuesday. Ramon Novarro is featured as a slave in a Roman war galley. After being granted his freedom by saving the Roman commander from drowning, he becomes the greatest athlete of his time by winning a chariot race.

Wednesday brings Slim Summerville in "The Unexpected Father." The story concerns a young waif of the streets and a bachelor of a new-found wealth who is frightened into adopting her on the eve of his own wedding.

Thursday and Friday "The Passionate Plumber" will head the program. The cast includes Buster Keaton, Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante and Polly Moran. They are seen in a story which depicts the diverting career of a plumber who becomes the guardian of a Parisian beauty.

Saturday, John Gilbert appears in "The Phantom of Paris," the story of a great French magician who falls in love with the daughter of an old and wealthy family.

Murder Film Billed At West End Theater

"Murders in the Rue Morgue" has been booked at the West End theater for Monday and Tuesday. Bela Lugosi enacts the leading male role, a doctor with a warped brain who is intent upon introducing the blood of a gigantic ape into the veins of a living girl. Sidney Fox has the leading feminine role.

Wednesday "Girl of the Rio" will be shown. It is a melodrama but adorned with a flow of adventurous action. Dolores Del Rio and Leo Carrilo are the leading stars.

"Flying High" is billed for Thursday and Friday. The story concerns the hilarious adventures of Rusty, madcap airplane inventor, played by Bert Lahr, and his futile attempts to escape the clutches of Pansy, an amorous waitress, played by Charlotte Greenwood.

Saturday "The Phantom of Paris," with John Gilbert, Leila Hyams and Jean Hersholt, brings a new strange adventure.

MOSCOW ATTENDS COLUMBIA'S EAST, WEST GATHERINGS

Sam Moscow, southern division manager of Columbia Pictures Corporation, left yesterday for New York before attending the Columbia convention to be held at Atlantic City on May 22, after which he joins the executives of Columbia in their convention at Los Angeles May 31. While in Los Angeles he will visit the Columbia studios in Hollywood and will return to Atlanta with news of new productions.

SAM MOSCOW.

The complete southern division, with the exception of New Orleans, will join him at the Atlantic City convention. From Atlanta, headed by W. W. Anderson, branch manager of the Atlanta office, the following salesmen will attend: U. T. Koch, Florida representative; M. T. Whitham, Alabama, and Frank Shepard, Georgia. From the Charlotte office, R. J. Ingram, manager, and all salesmen. From Memphis, J. J. Rogers, manager, and all salesmen. From Oklahoma City, Sam Benjamin, manager, and all salesmen. From Dallas, J. B. Underwood and all salesmen. The New Orleans office, headed by Houston Duvall, will go to the Los Angeles convention.

Garbo in 'Susan Lenox' Is Feature at Alamo

Greta Garbo soars to fresh heights of dramatic achievement in "Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise," showing at the Alamo theater Monday only.

In the picturization of the famous David Graham Phillips novel, directed for the screen by Robert Z. Leonard, Garbo negotiates a role demanding frequent transitions, endowing it with an emotional intensity that makes the characterization of the Swedish farm girl who rises to fame and wealth a real one. Her character is one that lives.

Clark Gable plays opposite Miss Garbo.

Capitol Theater Picture Recalls World War Days

The casting of characters exactly in accordance with type is illustrated perfectly in the selection of the leading players for "The Doomed Battalion," now at Capitol theater, a story of a remarkable chapter of the World War fought by the Austrians and Italians in the Dolomite Alps, by executives of Universal.

With the idea of conveying reality to the screen and sound track in mind, casting officials came to the conclusion that players who had had actual war experiences in the Austrian province of Tyrol—in other words, who had lived the parts they were to play—would give outstanding performances. They agreed that it was far easier to recall and re-enact experiences than it was to imagine them—to have felt the poignancy of war, to have felt the grandeur of the ive country, rather to simulate these things.

Tala Birell was chosen because she not only is a skillful actress, but because she suffered hunger and privation in Austria during the war and because she knows the Tyrol country far better than she knows Hollywood.

Luis Trenker was rightly chosen to play opposite her. During the World War he served as a captain of engineers in the Austrian army.

Victor Varconi got more than a bitter taste of war.

Gustav Von Seyfferititz was born at Innsbruck in the Austrian Tyrol. He plays the part of an Austrian field marshal, a part which his brother played in real life during the war. Captain Albert Conti was born at Trieste, Austria. During the World War he served as a captain in the Fifth Austrian Hussars, saw service on the Russian front, was captured and imprisoned.

Sidney Fox Starred In Tenth Street Film

Monday and Tuesday the Tenth Street theater presents "Murders in the Rue Morgue," Edgar Allan Poe's famous story of horror and fear. Bela Lugosi, of "Dracula" fame, and Sidney Fox have the major roles.

Wednesday, Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts will be seen in "The Unexpected Father," a hilarious comedy about a bachelor who strikes oil in his backyard and finds a small baby girl calling him daddy.

"Union Depot," showing Thursday and Friday, stars Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Joan Blondell in a thrilling story of a gay young man who falls in love with a stranded actress he meets in a large railroad terminal.

Saturday Joan Bennett stars in "She Wanted a Millionaire," a story of a beauty contest winner who chose riches and luxury instead of love. Spencer Tracy and Una Merkel have prominent roles.

Widows Get Cottages.

Additional cottages to shelter the widows and children of ex-service men will be erected near the Veterans of Foreign Wars' National Home, near Eaton Rapids, Mich., Robert F. Woodside, home president, has announced. Woodside said there are 12 widows and 125 children living in cottages there.

More than 18,000 gallons of beer were seized by Toledo police in the year 1931 and dumped into the Maumee river.

Truck licenses in Michigan for 1932 are expected to exceed 1931 in state revenue by $100,000.

Comedy Purveyors of the Stage This Week

Chester Morris In Rialto Film, 'Cock of the Air'

"Cock of the Air," the new air comedy, is showing at the Rialto theater now. This is Howard Hughes' latest production, and once again the producer of "Hell's Angles," "The Front Page" and other film sensations, crashes through with a hit picture.

"Cock of the Air," a United Artists' picture, is a brilliant picturization of a daring story. It is ultra-sophisticated comedy, minus the usual hokum and vulgarity associated with sophisticated pictures.

Extravagantly produced and brilliantly directed, "Cock of the Air" is sheer entertainment from start to finish.

It is played by a crack cast, headed by Chester Morris, and supported by Billie Dove, Matt Moore, Yola D'Avril, Walter Cartlett, Vivien Oakland and Louis Alberni.

Lavish settings and daring but deft treatment of a bold theme, combine to make "Cock of the Air" the sensation of comedies.

The story concerns the exciting love match between the romantic "ace" of the American air service, played by Morris, and the "toast of Paris," enacted by Miss Dove. Complications ensue when the "master" and "mistress" of romance meet on common ground from the basis of an amazing and highly-spiced tale of love and adventure in a World War background.

Morris, as the gay romancer for the first time, is sensational. This performance has already won for him an army of new fans, particularly among the feminine contingent.

Billie Dove is seen in a vampish impersonation for the first time, and gives the most intriguing performance of her career.

"Cock of the Air" was directed by Tom Buckingham, and the story and dialog was written by Robert E. Sherwood, noted critic and playwright, and Charles Lederer.

LITTLE THEATER PLAY TO BE GIVEN MAY 25

"Aren't We All," the fourth and last play of the present season of the Little Theater of the Studio Club, will be presented Wednesday, May 25. There will be one performance only and it will take place at the Woman's Club auditorium at 8:30 p. m.

Some of the minor characters have not been definitely selected.

ATLANTA TO OBSERVE 'MACON DAY' MAY 25

Wednesday, May 25, will be known in Atlanta as "Macon Day," according to Roy LeCraw, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Civic and business leaders of Atlanta have extended through the Chamber of Commerce an invitation to the leading business and civic leaders of Macon, through the Macon Chamber of Commerce, to come to Atlanta and participate in the day's program arranged by the Macon and Atlanta Chambers of Commerce as guests of the Atlanta chamber.

The day's program will begin with a reception at 11:45 a. m. in the Chamber of Commerce offices and the business and civic leaders of Atlanta are invited to attend and meet the delegation from Macon. At 12:30 a luncheon will be served in Hall No. 2 of the Chamber of Commerce building, and a program of Macon speakers will be presented, outlining what Macon and her section of Georgia are doing to carry on a progressive program to increase business and make conditions better. A musical program will also be presented.

In the afternoon a theater party will be tendered the guests from Macon at the Paramount theater as guests of E. E. Whitaker, manager. Beginning at 2 o'clock a golf tournament for the Macon visitors will be held at the Brookhaven Country Club. Two cups will be awarded, one for high score and one for low score.

President LeCraw, in discussing this activity, states that he feels that it will have a great effect in bringing Macon and Atlanta closer together, allowing the business and civic leaders to meet, dine and play together and discuss their mutual problems and form contacts.

The committee in charge of this activity is composed of the following: Robert P. McLarty, chairman of the forum committee; N. Baxter Maddox, chairman of the reception committee; Milton Dargan Jr., chairman of the golf tournament committee; E. E. Whitaker, chairman of the theater party committee, and others.

Don C. Bryant, president of the Macon Chamber of Commerce, and John L. Morris, manager, are working closely with the officials of the Atlanta chamber in making this meeting a success and they both state that they feel that this activity is timely and will be of much benefit to both communities. They further state that more than 75 of the leaders of Macon have been extended invitations to come to Atlanta on "Macon Day" and participate in the program that has been arranged. All directors and officers of the Macon Chamber of Commerce have expressed their intention of attending and some of the other leading business people from Macon who will be present are G. Glen Toole, mayor; Lee M. Happ, chairman of the county commissioners; Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer University; Dice R. Anderson, president of Wesleyan College; Ed B. Harrold, president of the Rotary Club; Ed T. Flanders, district governor of Rotary Clubs; H. N. Mitchell, president of the Lions Club; Morris Michael, president of the Kiwanis Club; Leo Sheridan, president of the Civitan Club; J. S. Mansfield, president of the Retail Merchants Bureau; Mrs. L. I. Waxelbaum, president of the Macon Woman's Club; Mrs. C. C. Boterweg, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club; Mrs. Thomas Harrold, president of the Utility Club; Miss Lorraine Zellner, president of the Pilot Club; W. T. Anderson, editor and publisher of the Macon Telegraph and Macon News.

Bob Montgomery, Will Rogers Top Grand Programs

Robert Montgomery will be seen Monday at Loew's Grand theater in "Lovers Courageous," a romantic comedy written especially for this star by Frederick Lonsdale, the celebrated English playwright. Starting Thursday, a long and vigorously suppressed desire of Will Rogers, world-famous comedian of the screen, bursts all bounds in "Business and Pleasure," his latest Fox Films production, adapted from the best-selling novel, "The Plutocrat," by Booth Tarkington.

In "Lovers Courageous," Montgomery's role is that of a happy-go-lucky Englishman whose ambition is to be a playwright and who consequently is always in hot water with his narrow-minded father who wants to make a postmaster of his son. The result is that he runs away from home and, after a series of interesting adventures as a sailor, cowboy and hotel porter in various parts of the world, finally ends up as a tobacconists's assistant in British South Africa. The attractive Madge Evans has the leading feminine role.

Will Rogers gets a chance as "top man" in a quartet. Most of his vocal efforts in the past have been confined to the bathtub or the wide-open cattle ranges of Oklahoma and Texas. He confesses though he has always nursed a desire to sing high tenor in a full-fledged quartet. All four of them are passengers aboard a cruise steamer en route to the Mediterranean.

INDIRECT RESULTS OF ADVERTISING WINS HIGH PRAISE

CLEVELAND, May 14.—(AP)—The "indirect results" of advertising are one of its most important functions, in the opinion of William H. Howard, advertising manager of the R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., of New York.

Howard told last night's session of the advertising affiliation convention here that by indirect results he means the additional merchandise sold to customers responding to advertisements of other items.

Herbert W. Hess, of the Wharton school of finance and commerce, University of Pennsylvania, told the convention that advertisers should "foster that mode of economic thinking which will sell at a profit the mountain of goods which our mass production methods have brought us."

New WJTL Artist

Roy E. Callaway, known as the "Boy from the South," when he sang over radio station KFI and KECA in California, who this week becomes a WJTL, Oglethorpe University station, staff artist on a commercial program. For periods of several months he was a well-known singer over WGST and WSB.

POPULAR SOPRANO TO BROADCAST TODAY

Sunday afternoons to many people mean Mina Hoffman's radio program over WGST, when the popular soprano gives a program of classics and semi-classics. Since she began work at the station several weeks ago she has become one of the most popular local artists on the air.

MINA HOFFMAN.

For many years Mina Hoffman has been well known in Atlanta music circles. Numerous concerts, club entertainments and church programs have featured her as a soloist. During the last five years she has sung over a number of the large radio stations in New York and other sections of the country.

On the Air Today

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, national chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, and Mrs. Archibald B. Roosevelt, national repeal week chairman, will be heard over WABC and the Columbia network in a radio appeal to the voters of the country to be broadcast from 9 to 9:15 o'clock tonight. Mrs. Sabin will talk briefly about the organization which she heads and will outline its campaign against the eighteenth amendment, while Mrs. Roosevelt's talk will signalize the opening of the national repeal week drive which will commence the following day.

Four bishops, including two American church leaders, another from India and the fourth from China, will speak in the "Church of the Air" periods to be broadcast over the WABC-Columbia network today. The first speaker will be Dr. Warren Lincoln Rogers, coadjutor bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Cleveland, Ohio, in the morning period from 8 to 8:30 o'clock. Three bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, attending its world service conference in Atlantic City, N. J., each will speak on "A Faith for Today" in the afternoon period from 12:30 to 1:15 o'clock. They are Bishop William Fraser McDowell, of Washington, D. C.; Bishop Wang Chih Ping, of China, and Bishop Jashwant Rao Chitamber, of India.

Toscha Seidel will be the featured soloist with the Columbia Symphony orchestra during the all-Tschaikovsky program to be conducted by Howard Barlow and broadcast over the WABC-Columbia network this afternoon from 1:15 to 2 o'clock. Seidel, with full orchestra, will open the concert with the second and third movements, canzonetta and finale, from the Concerto in D major.

Will Rogers will make his third appearance in the "Ziegfeld Radio Show" when he speaks from Los Angeles during the broadcast of this program over the nation-wide Columbia network, beginning at 8:30 o'clock tonight. Last Sunday the cowboy-humorist shared honors with Billie Burke and her daughter, Patricia, in the west coast portion of the program.

The Georgia Federation of Music Clubs, in its regular weekly broadcast from station WSB, will present Miss Margaret Morgan and Miss Edith West, members of Beta Chapter of Pi Mu, of the Bell Carroll Piano School, in a program of piano music at 6 o'clock tonight.

WGST Station Staff Artists

Book Reviews in Tabloid

I Feel Better Now. A volume of humorous verse. By Margaret Fishback, who sends it out over the land with the following message:

"I wish my frank and open face
Held just one tiny little trace
Of something that approaches guile.
I'd like an enigmatic smile
And heavy-lidded eyes instead
Of just a regulation head."

Greetings just the same!

The writer of the interesting verse which has been copied around the globe is connected with the great metropolitan house of "Macy's New York." When Miss Fishback joined the advertising department her eyes fell on an ad which she thought quite a funny little contraption, so she decided to make a joke about a peasheller, and other devices for capturing vegetables. She had lots of fun writing it and the public had more fun reading it. But you can't joke all the time so she wrote another calling it "All Joking Aside," and the public seemed to think that the young writer had a New York corner on humor and jokes, so to please the request of her dear public she collected this, that, and the other verse, which had been floating around in the advertising world, and sent out a little book entitled "I Feel Better Now."

Who is Miss Fishback? This is the next question. First she is a Washtonian, her father having been a prominent lawyer there, she is a graduate of Goucher, and, being in the class of the modern young woman who wanted a career, she went to New York, where her many experiences there would fill a book as big as Webster's dictionary. Finally, readers began to notice the work of "Marne," and then she began contributing to F. P. A.'s Conning Tower, light verse to Vanity Fair, The New Yorker, Saturday Evening Post, etc., so the friends of this maid of Manhattan now extend from New York to Atlanta and on down to Sea Island Beach, Miami and Palm Beach. The writer's verse is quotable at any place and at all times. The book is

"A pleasure to give but a volume to wish back Is 'I Feel Better Now,' by Margaret Fishback."

MARGARET FISHBACK.

NEW FICTION.

Poison Unknown. By Charles J. Dutton, author of "Streaked With Crimson," etc. Those who love mystery stories and read "Murder in a Library," will find this a most entertaining story by the same author.

Timothy Rogan's first assignment was to watch the house of a gentleman who was quite wealthy and who was very nervous having received several threatening letters. On his first night of watching a prominent physician dropped dead at this very man's table having been poisoned by some drug unknown to science.

There is much interest in the case and Harley Manners, whom the Dutton readers will recall, was engaged to handle the case. It was a mystery. There were no clues, no motive, no theories for the psychologist to work on, and before any headway was made at all another murder was reported which made all the ideas and plans Manners had woven around the first of no use at all. So he started all over again and this time from the viewpoint of the newest criminal psychology all of which was very slow work, but proved in the long run to be sure.

Mr. Dutton is a clever mystery writer and with his introduction of a new poison into his mystery stories he has given his readers plenty of excitement. Timothy Rogan may be forgotton, but readers will always remember the work of Harley Manners, the famous psychologist. (Dodd Mead & Co. New York.)

THE MODERN LIBRARY.

The Medici. By Colonel G. F. Young. The book is dedicated "To Miss Mary Josephine Allen, of Boston, United States of America, to whose enthusiasm for the remarkable family whose history is here told this book owes its origin." While there are in English several histories of three or four of the more important members of the Medici family, there is none, either in Italian or English, of the family as a whole. For this reason the author has written of them as a whole and it is a very interesting history.

Within a Budding Grove. By Marcel Proust. Translated by C. K. Scott Moncrieff—in one volume. This is the second novel in Proust's life work "Remembrance of Things Past," "Swann's Way" being the first of the series.

Human Nature and Its Conduct. This is one of John Dewey's most important books—an introduction to social psychology. By John Dewey.

Oriental Romances. Edited by Manuel Komroff. This is a collection of romances from Persia, India, Arabia, Japan and others. They are written in the most appealing style.

Fortitude. By Hugh Walpole. With introduction by the author. He dedicates the book to Charles Maude. "The best of friends and the most honest of critics."

GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE.

Lee, the Soul of Honor. An appreciation by an Orientalist with additional facts. By John E. Hobeika. Foreword by Lyon Gardiner Tyler, A. M., LL. D., president emeritus William and Mary College. Author of "The Cradle of the Republic," etc. The following is a quotation from an admirer of the great Lee:

"To all who love the south, this volume will be a treasure greatly prized. The author is a historian who as a historian has a depth of insight and sympathy with his subject that gives to the reader the inspiration of a personal contact—in fact he feels that he lived with Lee in the great events that made him a leader of his people, and spoken with him in the supreme hours when his strong soul made history."

The author as a Syrian lad of 11 experienced the horrors connected with being driven from the land of his birth by the Turks. "Leaving the land which bore the human footprints of the Man of Galilee," he came to the United States alone. Upon reaching manhood and after reading the life of Robert E. Lee, the Virginian, he became ideally impressed with this great soldier's character until he felt that he had to show his appreciation in some way and this he has done in "Lee, the Soul of Honor." The chapter, "The Man in Gray," with its attractive illustration, will impress the reader with the earnestness and the reference that is expressed. As has been said he brings to it all "the warmth of the Syrian suns and the fertility of the Syrian soil bear the ripened fruit in the abundant imagery of this oriental mind." It is a unique study of a great American by one who first saw the light in a foreign country. (The Christopher Publishing House, Boston.)

BIOGRAPHY OF MARC ANTONY.

The Life and Times of Marc Antony. By Arthur Weigall, late inspector general of antiquities, Egyptian government, and author of "The Life and Times of Cleopatra," etc. The reader of history and biographies perhaps knows that no biography has been written of Marc Antony since the days of Plutarch, so the author has gathered and collected a large amount of material, most of which is new and all of which makes a splendid foundation for the story of perhaps one of the most remarkable personalities in history, and called "the most human and attractive figures on the crowded stage of Rome's most glorious age, and, but for a quarrel, he might have become the sovereign ruler of the whole known world, a greater power than Caesar himself."

Marc Antony, one of the most remarkable personalities in history, plays the chief role, or is the central figure in a brilliant cast of characters—there's Caesar, Cicero, Catiline, Brutus, Octavian and many others, all of which formed a part of a historical pageant and once more become living, breathing beings, each contributing his share to a world's drama. And then comes the climax! A climax in which love and ambition play the leading parts and then the inevitable end—death.

This volume is considered by many an even finer work than the author's, "Nero," and proves to both reader and student that it is truly the work of a historian. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

A MODERN STORY.

Love for Two. Mildred Gilman. Author of "Bob Sister." Again the great metropolis of America is the central place, the hub of a fastly growing new world which has as many new ideas as the wheel spokes and which turns and turns in its effort to get somewhere.

The story of Mathilde, a modern young woman, whose ideas, ideals and life generally is made up of the ingredients which at the present time is the cause of so much unhappiness and restlessness in marriage, in the home and even in the business world.

There are very few men and women who are active in the world today who do not know this type of woman. She never knows what she really wants, why she can't find out, marries, has a home which she soon makes as restless as she is, her husband finally sinking to the position of "one who pines for a household." To all this is added her hobby for writing books, stories, articles, in fact, anything to give her an excuse to haunt the newspaper offices or write to magazine editors. She belongs to that great army of men and women who are the most useless group in the world.

This is a story that is best to leave to the writer and the reader, both know the type, and the reviewer admires the clever style of the writer, but finds no interest in opening the doors of a house and letting the public on the inside of a condition which is the real picture of a feminist and her family life. (Harrison Smith, Inc., New York.)

NEW TRAVEL BOOK.

From Siam to Suez. By James Saxon Childers. Author of "Through Oriental Gates," etc. The author, a native Alabamian, and once upon a time a well-known Rhodes scholar at Oxford, England, has written many interesting books which have been widely read. Upon his graduation he returned home but he soon became tired of his two jobs: Writing a newspaper column and teaching college sophomores in his home state, so he decided he would travel in the orient, the result of which was a most interesting travel book entitled "Through Oriental Gates." And there was another result, for he found himself stranded in a foreign land but there was always the Alabama town to fall back on, so he continued his travels which have now been published under the name "From Siam to Suez."

While Mr. Childers is not as well known as some of the older authors of "Traveltalks" this is his second brilliant travel book. It is written in a conversational style rather than giving directions to the usual annual flow of tourists. He knows how to describe what he is seeing and his many friends and old classmates are following him with a great deal of pleasure and many writers are enthusiastic in their praise of his ability to write among them being Richard Burton. (Appleton's Book, New York.)

ORCHESTRA ENLARGED, ANSLEY PRICES CUT

Carling Dinkler, president of the Ansley hotel, announced on Saturday the engagement of a larger orchestra and a reduction in food prices for the Rathskeller, famous dining place of the Ansley hotel.

Rudy Brown's eight-piece orchestra will furnish music in the Rathskeller every evening from 6 to 9 o'clock, it was stated. Dancing can be indulged in by those who care for it during the dinner period, without cover charge. The Rathskeller of the Ansley, with its blinking owls and air conditioned temperature, has intrigued many visitors to Atlanta.

"Despite the present sluggishness of business, we anticipate good business at the Ansley this summer," Mr. Dinkler said. "The political campaigns will bring many influential Georgians to the capital city, where most of the contenders have headquarters.

"The Ansley already has been selected as headquarters by Governor Russell, Eugene Talmadge, H. B. Edwards, Judge Terrell and Arley Tucker, which more or less establishes it as political headquarters in Atlanta. We are making plans for the further comfort and convenience of our guests by furnishing entertainment of the highest order at prices in keeping with the times."

The orchestra will broadcast from the Rathskeller over Station WGST on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 6:15 o'clock.

MASTER PRINTERS WILL GATHER HERE FOR CONVENTION

The Southern Master Printers' Federation and Southern School of Printing will open its fourteenth annual convention at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the Biltmore hotel. The meeting will be called to order by President C. A. Lick, of Fort Smith, Ark. An open discussion on topics pertinent to the printing business will form the program of the first session.

After luncheon there will be an executive session of the convention at which time the officers will make their reports and the election of officers will take place. A dinner in the evening will bring the meeting to a close.

This association is made up of leading printers from Florida, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Virginia, Texas, North Carolina, Kentucky, Missouri, South Carolina and Oklahoma. The officers are: C. A. Lick, Ft. Smith, Ark., president; H. F. Ambrose, Nashville, Tenn., vice president, and V. C. Garriott, Nashville, Tenn., secretary-treasurer.

J. B. Stewart, of Foote & Davies Co., is vice president for Georgia.

DRUGGISTS MEETING TO BE ENTERTAINED

Pedigree Dairies, of which B. B. George is manager, is sponsoring the entertainment of the Georgia druggists' convention on Wednesday at the East Lake Country Club, with C. L. Wood in charge.

Assisting Mr. Wood on the committee are Mrs. Lula M. Hutchins, official hostess of the Pedigree Dairies; Mrs. J. L. Hawk and Mrs. W. S. Elkin Jr., who will entertain the ladies at a bridge party from 4 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. J. L. Hawk and W. H. Owen will be in charge of a golf tournament for the men, beginning at 2 o'clock, and A. H. Walden will be in charge of games and contests.

A striking feature of the occasion will be the beauty parade, the winner to be proclaimed "Miss Pedigree," the prize to be a $5 gold piece. This part of the program will take place from 6 to 7 o'clock, and the judges will be Dr. T. C. Marshall, Dr. J. T. Selman, Dr. R. C. Coleman and Dr. W. S. Elkin Jr.

Following this will be various amusements until 8 o'clock, when an elaborate dinner will be served by the club, after which the guests will enjoy dancing. Perry Bectel's famous orchestra will furnish the music.

R. B. Whitlock, an official of Pedigree Dairies, has charge of the decorations.

SEARS TOURNAMENT WILL OPEN MAY 22

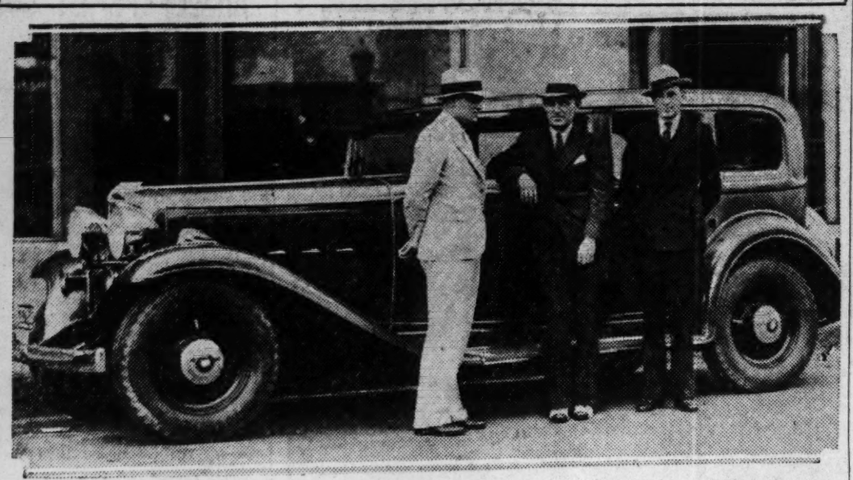

Sears, Roebuck and Company announced on Saturday that it was sponsoring a flight golf tournament and would give trophies and prizes to the lucky contestants. The tournament will be played between May 22 and June 6.

Contestants must register at Sears sporting goods department or with Billy Wilson, Piedmont Park pro. They will qualify at Piedmont Park this week and turn their cards in to Wilson. After the pairings are made the players may play on any course, turning their results over to Sears or their local pro.

Boomershine, president of the Boomershine Motors, Inc., local Pontiac dealers, to destroy the records of prices for their used cars. The Boomershine Motors are in the midst of a mammoth used car sale, and are advertising values heretofore unheard of, and the popularity of their cars is evident by the many people and buyers who have visited their display rooms this past week.

De Soto Reports Large Increase In Retail Sales

DETROIT, May 14.—For the second consecutive week, all weekly sales records in the history of the De Soto dealer organization were broken in the week ended April 20, when retail deliveries climbed to 1,885 cars. This showing exceeded by 6 per cent the record showing of the preceding week when 1,787 cars were delivered. These figures include Plymouth sales by De Soto dealers, in addition to De Soto.

April was one of the biggest months in the history of the De Soto dealer organization. Retail delivveries for the month, including Plymouth sales by De Soto dealers, mounted to a high total of 1,130 cars.

Sales were 72 per cent greater than April of last year when 4,151 cars were delivered at retail and 46 per cent greater than March of this year when deliveries totaled 4,907.

De Soto is the only war in its price range to show a gain over last year, and during March moved up to fourth place in the automobile business.

MASS. TOBACCONISTS PROTEST SMOKE TAX

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 14.—(AP)—Manufacturing tobacconists of western Massachusetts today sent a protest to Governor Ely against his proposed tax on tobacco, saying it would have a tendency to drive purchasers to adjacent states and would also encourage bootlegging of tobacco.

Tractor Tire For Locomotive Work Announced

AKRON, Ohio, May 14.—Another sensational low pressure tire was announced by Firestone Tire & Rubber Company engineers today—a 48x12 air balloon tire for switching yard use, which makes possible the switching of locomotives or whole strings of freight cars by four-wheel-drive tractors. This new tire runs all over the yard as if the rails were not there.

Firestone has been doing the exclusive work in the experimeating and developing of this tire for this service. It has been specified as original equipment on the Massey-Harris Company GP tractor for switching yard use.

This new switching yard tire embodies exclusive Firestone processes which originally made possible the introduction of the balloon tire by Firestone in 1923—processes which give the extra strength and endurance necessary for this rigorous switching yard service. Among these processes is gum-dipping which insulates every fiber and every cord with rubber, giving added strength and minimizing internal friction, the greatest enemy of tire life. The Firestone air balloon for automobiles has already been specified by a leading manufacturer of fine cars and the Firestone air balloon for airplanes has been authorized by the department of commerce for use on Ford tri-motor planes in transport service. Both were the first to win these recognitions.

The new tires for switching yard use are 48x12 size, of six-ply construction, operated at low air pressure. The low pressure and large contact area make it possible for these tires to cross ordinary railroad tracks without any undue bumping or jarring of the machine. They also provide sufficient traction to move a long string of freight cars.

It is proposed to use such tractors in place of switching engines in small yards or in congested areas. The use of tractors so equipped offers quite a possibility, and it will be possible for a tractor to run over the tracks or around trains to get at a patricular car which is to be moved without switching an entire string of cars that might be in the way in case an ordinary engine were used. They will also be very economical in small cities, or small yards where only a few cars are to be moved each day.

The operation of these tractors equipped with this new tire has been inspected by expert railroad men and given very high praise.

New Franklin '12' on Display At Franklin Motor Car Co.

After four years of the most intensive experimental and test work, the Franklin Automobile Company makes the most progressive step in its more than 30 years' history—the introduction of a 12-cylinder, 150-horsepower, supercharged, air-cooled car. For the first time in a motor car this new Franklin 12 incorporates the one thing that has given aviation its greatest progress—the high-powered, multi-cylinder, air-cooled engine.

The Franklin 12, which is available in four body styles, each by LeBaron, is characterized by distinctive and advanced styling, charm and artistry. The body models consist of a five-passenger sedan, seven-passenger sedan, limousine and four-passenger club brougham. The ample wheelbase of 144 inches has provided the designer with utmost latitude in attaining roominess and at the same time has given opportunity to produce the latest conception of streamlining, similar to that of modern airplane design.

Filling the next higher niche to the 1932 Supercharged Airman price of $2,345, it gives the Franklin Company complete price coverage in the fine-car field.

The exterior appearance has distinctive character brought about by the graceful slope to the hood front, which is carried also to the windshield and front door line. This design in combination with the piercing "V" of the hood front produces in effect the verve and spirit of air flight. The shape of the rear contour avoids the retarding pull of air pockets in much the same degree as the front dissipates wind resistance.

The low appearance of the car is accentuated by the deep doors which completely eliminate any intervening metal work between running board and body edge. The entire body is nicely cradled between the front and rear wheels, while the fenders, sweeping running boards, front and rear aprons, form a complete unit with no interruptions of the graceful contour. By extending hood panels straight back to the windshield and door lines, LeBaron has solved an artistic problem that has long beset designers.

Following most modern practice in multi-cylinder airplane engines the Franklin 12 motor is supercharged, the principle being identical with that so successfully employed on the Franklin Airman.

Compared with 12-cylinder engine standards, the Franklin 12 establishes another new point—that of economy. Tests over thousands of miles have shown that the actual gas consumption is appreciably less, this being attributed to the inherent thermal efficiency of air-cooling, combined with the effect of the supercharger. Wear and tear is considerably reduced, because Franklin has nearly 100 less parts than usual 12-cylinder practice.

This latest Franklin supercharged power unit is fundamentally an airplane-type engine with all its inherent reliability and high power characteristics. Cylinders are 3 1-4 inch bore by 4-inch stroke, with a compression ratio of 5.12 and deliver maximum power at 3,100 r. p. m. Its valve-in-head cylinders mounted in two banks at a 60-degree angle are distinctly Franklin construction. The efficient cooling is accomplished with simplicity, as the air draft is led directly to the space within the "V" and thence across the cooling fins on the two rows of cylinders down directly to the outside air. Spot-controlled temperature, which means uniformity of cylinder temperature among all 12 units, is obtained with equal facility as in the Airman model.

Naturally, the supercharger is the most important aid to the proper filling of each cylinder. It forces the mixture into the combustion chamber under pressure of air traveling as high as 110 miles an hour and eliminates the uncertainties and unsteadiness of suction.

The transmission utilizes the roller type of free wheeling mechanism which has proved so satisfactory in Franklin's Airman model. In addition, the same easy shift of the syncro-mesh gear set is also provided. The helical type of the second gear preserves the silence of operation, even in starting.

A distinct element of safety is provided in the low swung body. This lower center of gravity causes the car fairly to hug the road even at its highest speeds. Ease of steering is provided by the caster action of the front wheels and the cam and lever steering device, together with the nice balance of weight. A shimmy eliminator in the left front spring breaks up any vibrations that may cause the wheels to waver. The hydraulically operated brakes have drums of centrifuse construction with high retarding effect and long wearing ability. In addition to these safety elements, clear vision is provided by the narrow corner posts of the windshield.

While the first impression of the luxurious interiors is undoubtedly one of decided beauty, comfort nevertheless has been the prime consideration. Upholstery material is the finest broadcloth of pure Australian wool. Seats are luxurious in their yielding cushions and perfectly contoured backs. Unusual woodwork of genuine burled walnut, delicately colored, conveys richness and quality. The interior hardware is a creation exclusively Franklin's.

Ventilation of the body is regulated by two cowl openings, one in each side of the ridge line of the hood. Insulation of the hood against sound, heat and cold is worked out in great detail.

Riding ease comes from long, semi-elliptic springs encased in metal covers and mounted on ball-bearing shackles. Ride control for the rear springs compensates for road variations and makes possible uniform performance in city and country, under all weather conditions.

Nash Selected By Famous Speed Driver

Dave Evans, internationally famous star of dirt, board and brick track automobile racing for the last seven years, visited Atlanta on a business trip recently.

Driving a brilliant new blue Nash eight sedan, the veteran speed pilot's itinerary will take him through eight states of the southland, including his native soil of Texas.

The holder of 22 world's records for speed and endurance for automobiles, believed to be more than any other driver, Dave's A. A. A. championship career outlines a brilliant history of Miller, Duesenberg and Diesel development. He is the only driver ever to complete the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis speedway without a stop and last winter claimed the world's long-distance riding championship while traveling more than 14,000 miles without interruption on the Indianapolis speedway.

Mr. Evans, who recently announced his retirement from racing to enter business, came here as a representative of the Union Starch & Refining Company, of Columbus, Ind., manufacturers of corn products. He is well known to speed fans throughout the country, particularly in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. He was reared near Fort Worth, Texas; attended grade school at Fort Smith, Ark., and high school at Tulsa, Okla.

Fourteen years old before he saw his first automobile, Dave has made up for lost time, and mileage. During the war he enlisted at Dallas, Texas, and served in the aviation and medical corps. Previously he had studied medicine and practiced X-ray work for Dr. William C. Tennery, at Waxahachie, Texas.

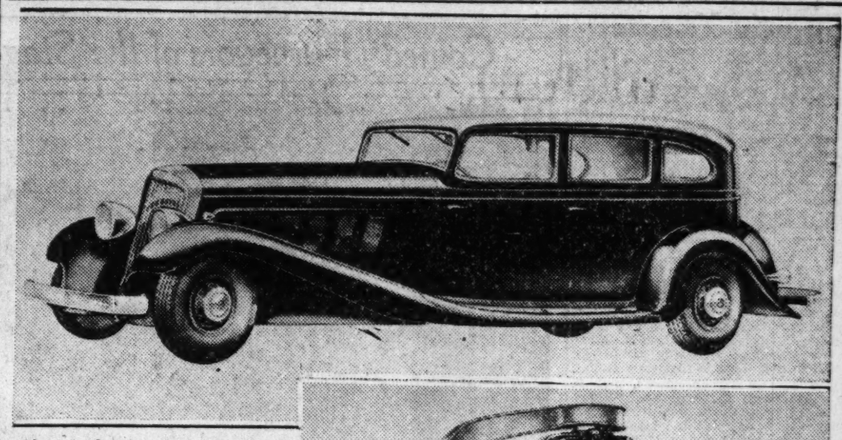

After the war, Evans spent six years in the movies and it was while doubling for Wallie Reid in racing and other dangerous scenes that he acquired a taste for the speedways, which led to competition on dirt tracks in 1924. The following year, during the boom period of the board speedways, he took his place in the blistering speed ranks with such heavy-footed stars as Pete DePaolo, Harry Hartz, Earl Cooper, Leon Duray, Ralph DePalma and Fred Comer. It was while traveling at a speed of 140 miles an hour in the wake of a wreck that took the life of Comer and wrought serious injury to Hartz at Salem, N. H., that Dave's car crashed through a guard rail and after being hurled 80 feet through the air he rose to his feet and walked off the track.

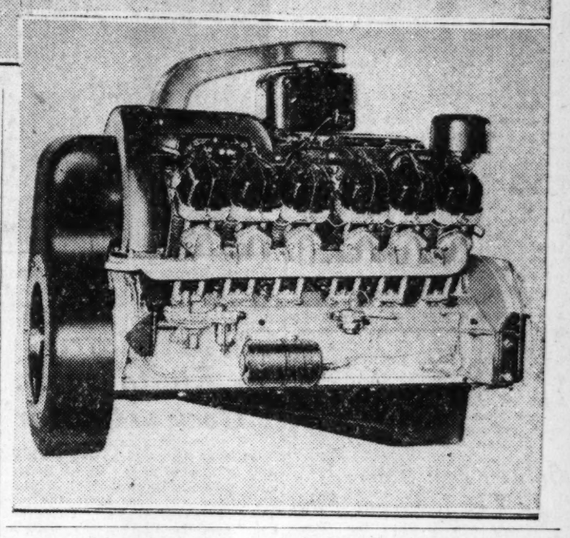

Since 1927 he has been a consistent contender in the 500-mile event at Indianapolis, finishing fifth in his first start that year and sixth in 1930. In the 1931 race he piloted the big Cummins Diesel Special and drove the oil burner, the first motor of its kind ever entered in the speedway classic, through the 500 miles without a pit stop. Later in the year he established a coast-to-coast record for motor trucks by driving a Diesel-powered machine carrying 17,000 pounds gross weight from New York to Los Angeles in slightly less than 97 hours.

Last December he returned to the Indianapolis speedway with the same truck and established a new world's non-stop automobile record by rolling up 14,600 miles, averaging 43 miles per hour, in exactly two weeks' driving, during which the motor was never stopped and the truck ran continuously after the first thousand miles.

Reluctantly, Dave retires from high speed competition, but as he grows older—and he's just 31—family ties are growing stronger and family pleas that he abandon racing are more insistent so, he says, he is leaving the bitter for the sweet; he is quitting the castor-scented race tracks for the sugar-coated job of a corn syrup and sugar representative.

Franklin New 12-Cylinder Here

The new Franklin air-cooled twin six, just announced by the Franklin Motor Car Company, is on display here in the show rooms of their dealers, 481 West Peachtree. Top, five-passenger sedan. Bottom, a view of the engine said by engineers to be an outstanding achievement in automotive circles.

HIGHWAY REPORTED IN GOOD CONDITION

Reporting that Georgia highways are in splendid condition, the Dixie Associated Motorists, Inc., Saturday issued a bulletin suggesting Sunday motor tours to various points, including Tate Mountain and Brunswick. Only a few miles on both routes are unpaved, the bulletin said.

Since the last rains, according to the bulletin, the highway department has rolled and scraped the unpaved roads and detours have been worked over.

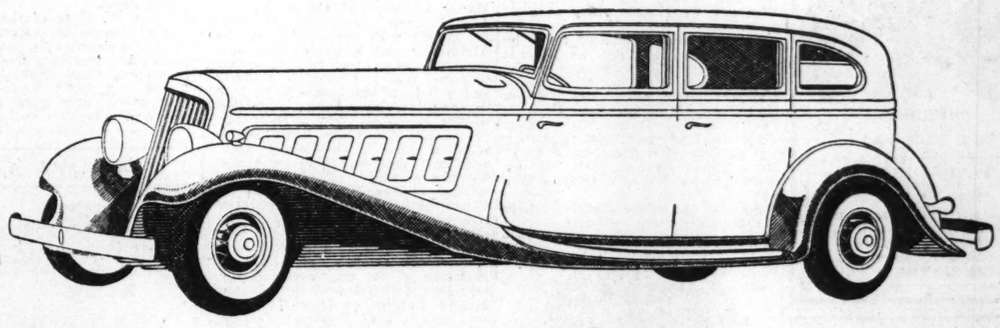

Among the woods that withstand damage for a long time without paint, the forest service lists white pine, cypress, cedar and yellow poplar.

ANNOUNCING THE

SUPERCHARGED AIR-COOLED

Twelve Cylinder

FRANKLIN

For four years Franklin engineers have studied, experimented, tested, proved—and now present the Supercharged, Air-cooled, Twelve Cylinder Franklin. For the first time in a motor car, this new Air-cooled Twelve incorporates the one thing that has given aviation its greatest impetus—the high powered, multi-cylinder, air-cooled engine.

To see the car is to feel instantly the freshness and brilliance that Le Baron has styled into the Franklin Twelve—the year's pattern of beauty and luxury. And when you drive this responsive, amply proportioned car of 144-inch wheelbase, that feeling is immediately transformed into thrilling admiration for the sensational performance which carries you to new luxury.

The Supercharged 150 horsepower air-cooled engine is extremely simple in operation, requiring 100 less parts than comparable water-cooled engines. So accessible is the engine and so free of complication that low maintenance becomes an important feature.

The Supercharger achieves flowing, turbine-like power, smoothness and acceleration by forcing a full charge of perfect mixture into every cylinder equally. Actual tests show gas consumption is appreciably lower. And engine life is much greater, for even at high speeds the engine is purring effortlessly. Pressure air-cooling adds greatly to economical efficiency and allows you to drive all day at high speed without overheating or loss of power. In Franklin there is no water to boil, freeze or leak.

You are invited to examine and drive the new Supercharged Twelve as an example of the really modern motor car. Franklin also offers the new Supercharged Airman, with 132-inch wheelbase and 100 H. P. airplane engine.

Miss Sterne To Wed Mr. Lawton At Fashionable Ceremony June 1

Particular social importance is attached to the announcement made today of the wedding plans of Miss Hannah Evans Sterne and Augustine Davant Lawton, because of the prominence of the families and of the popularity of the couple. The marriage ceremony will take place Wednesday, June 1, at 8:30 o'clock at All Saints' Episcopal church with Dr. W. W. Memminger officiating. A. H. Sterne will give his daughter in marriage.

The attractive bride-elect has chosen her sister, Miss Sue Brown Sterne, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Misses Lena Knox, Laura Hoke, Eleanor Lawton, sister of the future bridegroom; Harriett Westlake, of New York city, and Mrs. Stanton Watts Pickens. Little Miss Loyer Zahner will be the flower girl and small Edward Daugherty will act as ringbearer.

Kenyon B. Zahner will act as best man and the groomsmen will include Randolph Whitfield, James Griffith, of Savannah; Edwin Sterne and William Sterne, brothers of the bride-elect, and Joe Westbrook. The ushers will be J. Russell Porter, J. N. Harper, Charles Currie, C. F. Daugherty, Stanton Brown, of Waco, Texas, and A. B. Paterson, of New Orleans, La.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Sterne, parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club. Miss Carolyn Paullin will keep the bride's book. Mr. Lawton and his bride will leave by motor for a wedding trip of several weeks and on their return will live in Atlanta.

Preceding the wedding Miss Sterne and Mr. Lawton will be honored at numerous parties. Mrs. Stanton Pickens will be hostess at luncheon Friday, May 20. Mrs. J. Russell Porter and Miss Patty Porter will entertain Friday, May 20, at a small tea at their home on The Prado. Mrs. C. F. Daugherty and Misses Eleanor and Florie Lawton will entertain Saturday afternoon, May 21, honoring Miss Sterne. Mrs. E. G. Parker will entertain at bridge Monday, May 23, and Miss Ruth Rowbotham will be hostess at tea Tuesday afternoon, May 24.

Mrs. W. C. Royer will entertain at luncheon Wednesday, May 25, and in the afternoon Mrs. Wilson Kemp will be hostess at tea, when Miss Sterne will share honors with Mrs. Stanton Pickens, a recent bride. Miss Ria Davis will entertain at tea Thursday, May 26, when Miss Sterne will share honors with Mrs. William T. Hunter, the former Miss Margaret Harris, whose marriage was a recent event. Mrs. Carl Lewis will entertain Friday, May 27, at a bridge party. Miss Laura Hoke will entertain at luncheon Saturday, May 28, honoring Miss Sterne, and Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Whitfield and James Griffith will be hosts at a party complimenting Miss Sterne and Mr. Lawton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Harper will entertain at a buffet supper Sunday evening, May 29, and Monday evening, May 30, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Currie will entertain at supper. Mrs. Colquitt Carter Jr. will be hostess at luncheon Tuesday, May 31, when Miss Sterne will share honors with Miss Eleanor Johnson, also a bride-elect, and Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon B. Zahner will entertain at a buffet supper following the wedding rehearsal. Other parties being planned will be announced later.

Business, Professional Women Hear Address by R. C. Mizell

As a climax to National Music Week, the program of the dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, held at the Hotel Winecoff Wednesday evening, was largely a musical one.

The Morgan trio, composed of the Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Morgan and Ervin Morgan, violin, piano and cello, respectively, and Mrs. Grace Lee Brown Townsend, soprano, were the artists, and Miss Caude Sewell, chairman of the education committee of the club, was in charge of the program.

R. C. Mizell, president of the Taxpayers' League, was the speaker and was introduced by Mrs. Susie Caldwell. Mr. Mizell urged support of the league in its quest for leaders; in its program for a better attitude on the part of the citizenry toward government, and for a government which will give the greatest amount of service at the least possible cost to the taxpayer.

Mrs. William T. Healey, chairman of the Georgia Committee on National Prohibition Reform, and a member of the club, announced that Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and other eminent speakers would speak at the city auditorium on the evening of May 25. She also announced a contest open to the public for the best ten reasons why the eighteenth amendment should be repealed. Miss Ada Booth, chairman of the social service committee, made report of a special piece of social service work which the club voted to participate in.

Mrs. Cecil Fuller, first vice president and chairman of the membership committee, announced a May breakfast to be given Sunday morning, May 29, at Soap Creek. Automobiles will leave the clubrooms on Forrest avenue at 8 o'clock that morning.

Miss Leita Thompson, president, was authorized to name an additional delegate to the State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, to be held in Savannah May 16-17, and the club voted that Miss Thompson should go to the convention as the local club's official delegate, with all expenses paid. Among other delegates and members who will attend are Miss Dallis Dumas, Mrs. Cecil Fuller, Mrs. Susie Caldwell, Miss Jane Van De Vrede, Miss Rebecca Shuman, Miss Ada Booth, Miss Anna Wootan, Miss Lucigene Alexander and Mrs. Blanche Richy.

The guests at the dinner meeting, in addition to the musicians and speaker, were Miss Lucyle McGinnis, assistant treasurer of the Morris Plan bank; Miss Leita Chitwood, secretary of the Fort Payne (Ala.) Business and Professional Women's Club; Miss Flora Mitchell, member of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Winchester, Tenn.; Miss Betty Burdette, Mrs. Charles Robinson and Mrs. Telford, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Mary Meeks, of Barnesville.

The Delvers, discussional group of the club, will meet in the clubrooms on Forrest avenue the evening of May 24, and the June dinner meeting will be held in the new Frances-Virginia tea room the evening of June 8.

Georgia Service Star Legion Convenes With Decatur Chapter May 19-20

The convention of the Georgia Service Star Legion will be held in Decatur Thursday and Friday, May 19 and 20, with headquarters in the Hotel Candler. Mrs. J. C. Marlowe and William Pauley, and Mrs. Robert L. Hale is chairman of the general arrangements.

Hapeville Woman's Club.

Mrs. Edwin Helbig will speak to Hapeville Woman's Club at their regular meeting Thursday afternoon, May 19, at the city auditorium, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Helbig recently returned from Asheville, N. C., where she attended the national convention of the Needlework Guild of America, and her talk will be on the work and objectives of this organization.

The musical program will be in charge of Mrs. D. B. Evans. Tea will be served by Mrs. Luther Conine and her committee. This is an open meeting and the public is cordially invited. Hapeville club was awarded 13 ribbons at the fifth district of Georgia federation's flower show on May 11. Those having entries were Mesdames O. C. Holmes, Roy Conine and Chester Martin.

Kle Club Party.

The Kle Club held its monthly spend-the-day party at the home of Mrs. J. L. Murphy, 10 Rockyford drive, N. E., recently. Mrs. J. T. Malone was co-hostess with Mrs. Murphy.

Members present included Mesdames Ed F. Bond, George C. James, D. M. Clarke, A. D. Everett, W. L. Hammock, T. E. Sturdivant, C. E. McCrary, James J. Condon, Frank Golden, Flo Newcomer. Visitors were Mesdames Carolin Ruler, Gladys Cox, Adele Shannon and Grace Cooper.

Jewish Council Meets Monday.

The annual meeting of the Council of Jewish Women will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the High Museum of Art on Peachtree street. Mrs. Ernest Morrison, program chairman, announces that Lewis P. Skidmore, director of the art school, will speak on "Modern Art."

Mr. Skidmore has had interesting background and experience in his field. After receiving his bachelor of fine arts degree from Yale he studied for several years at the Beaux Arts school in Paris, after which he taught for 10 years in the Mechanics Institute in New York. Before coming to Atlanta he taught for 18 years in the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, New York.

Officers for the forthcoming year will be elected and tea served during the social hour following the meeting.

Phi Mu Alumnae.

Phi Mu Alumnae chapter will be the guests of Mrs. George B. Hoyt at her home, 831 Myrtle street, Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Bridge will be played for an hour, after which the nominating committee will present names for election of new officers, and other business will be transacted. All Phi Mus are invited.

Harmin Collegiates

Beautiful Miss Sara Jennings, who was recently voted by her schoolmates as the most attractive girl at Wesleyan College, in Macon, Ga. Miss Jennings is the daughter of Mrs. W. J. Jennings, of Thomasville, Ga., and is an acknowledged belle among members of the college set throughout the state. Sketched by Cleo Mansfield, staff artist, from a photograph by Hillyer C. Warlick, of Macon.

Valuable Prizes To Be Given Away At Brace Fund Benefit Recital

An additional feature that will put the audience on tiptoe with eager anticipation at the Sarah Wagstaff Rogers benefit recital at the Erlanger theater Thursday afternoon, May 19, is the giving away of a long list of valuable prizes, doned by friends of the crippled children at Scottish Rite hospital, whose brace fund will reap the benefit from the proceeds of the recital.

Heading the list in interest to a large portion of the audience is the prize of a permanent wave from Antonio's studio; a manicure, given by Anderson & Magee, and articles of feminine appeal, as perfume from the Biltmore drug store, a compact from Selman's pharmacy, and an electric iron donated by a friend. Beaumont Davison and the Leonard studios have each given an order for photographs; there are gifts from J. P. Allen's, the Caroline Shop, Binder's and Regenstein's, a picture from the Lyda Nash and Katharine Daley Shop, and bookends from another friend. That the sterner sex not be forgotten, there is a polo shirt from Muse's and a shaving set from Taylor's pharmacy. A number of dry cleaners have donated cleaning coupons, the list including Capital City, De Luxe, Eugene Harris, Henry's, Howard's and Wall's, and such delectable condiments as a cake from Kamper's and one from another friend, and candy from Davison-Paxon's, Norris, Nunnally's and Whitman's.

Tickets are on sale at the Blue Goose Shop, in the Fox Theater building, the Caroline Shop, at Tenth street, and the Boots Walker library at Allen's, and will be on sale at the box office of the Erlanger from 10 o'clock Tuesday morning at 50 cents and $1. Woman's auxiliary of the Scottish Rite hospital, sponsoring the recital, are indeed grateful to these kind folk whose hearts are touched by the crippled children's plight and who are contributing in this way to the financial success of the undertaking.

Nor are these all. Antonio's studio, with conspicuous generosity, is furnishing all make-up for the dancers; Mrs. Harry L. Barnitz has contributed original and artistic posters; Bryan Akins, of the Amusement Enterprise Company, has been invaluable in his assistance; the Conger Printing Company, W. R. Bean & Son, the Long Printing Company, Georgia Power Company, Rich's, Inc., and the Rich shoe department have all cooperated to make success assured.

And while appreciation is in order, the center of all this artistic activity, Sarah Wagstaff Rogers, expresses a fine sentiment, shared by the parents of her little pupils, that her object is "not merely to develop strong, beautiful little bodies, poised and graceful, but to develop as well a grace of spirit that comes with working for a charitable objective such as this."

Home Demonstration Clubs Hold Meetings.

Every Woman's Home Demonstration and 4-H Girls' Club in old Campbell county, now a part of Fulton county, were met last week by Misses Lucy Wood and Alice Drake, home demonstration agents, of Fulton county. New songs were taught in preparation for the county camp this summer. All girls completing their work will be allowed to attend this camp. Interesting talks on gardening were given at the women's clubs by J. L. Gilmore, vocational agricultural agent, of Fairburn. The county camp was also discussed.

Miss Lucy Wood will give a demonstration in bread-making at the Whittier Mills Monday and a demonstration in vegetable cookery at Russell High school Tuesday. Miss Ruby Nance, assistant home demonstration agent, will hold meetings with the Fulton County 4-H Girls' Clubs this week. All girls' sewing will be checked and help will be given with their record books.

Domestic Art Class Plans Fashion Show

Domestic art class of Washington Seminary, taught by Mrs. Lavinia Johns, will have a fashion show Wednesday, May 18, after the chapel period. Miss Rosebud Leide will recite an introductory poem, followed by the girls who will model the four dresses that they have made. They will include silks, cottons, etc., and there will be sport, afternoon and evening dresses modeled.

Fulton Rebekah Meets

Fulton Rebekah lodge met Tuesday evening. Mrs. J. G. Crumley, president of the Rebekah assembly of Georgia, was a guest. The noble grand, Miss Mildred New, presided, and a program was rendered. Little Misses Betty Jane and Laura Frances McArthur gave songs and acting. These little girls are the grandchildren of Past President Mrs. E. A. McArthur.

Fulton Rebekah lodge feels proud to have had the president, the warden, the chaplain, the musician and past presidents, Hughes and McArthur, present at this meeting. This lodge meets every Tuesday evening. Visitors are welcome.

Parsonian Club.

Mrs. A. C. Edwards was hostess to the Parsonian Club at her home on Pelham road Wednesday.

The members of the club present were Mesdames J. B. Deavours, J. L. Finch, Ed Miller, J. B. Campbell, S. C. Scribner, B. K. Laney, H. O. Denny, W. F. Wooden, A. C. Edwards and J. M. Bosworth. Mrs. Wilbur Edwards was a visitor and assisted her mother in serving tea.

Atlanta Women Voters To Observe Good Will Day

Plans were made at the meeting of the International Co-operation Class of the Atlanta League of Women Voters held last week for the observance of Good Will Day, which takes place Wednesday, May 18. It is significant that the foreign affairs committee of the senate has just reported favorably on the United States' attitude to the World Court, and this should awaken added interest in World Court discussions at this and all times. May 18 is the anniversary of the opening of the first court at The Hague, which met in 1899, and from this meeting the present World Court grew. Among speeches to be made Wednesday is one by Dr. Willis Sutton at the Y. W. C. A. auditorium, and League members are urged to attend. The class in international cooperation meets with Mrs. Sinclair Jacobs, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at the High Museum and the group will continue its discussions on the relations of the United States to the League of Nations, and Article 16 in the League covenant, which deals with substitutes for sanctions. Since the conference is now meeting in Geneva and since the National League of Women Voters has definitely sanctioned the United States' entrance into the World Court, these discussions are interesting and timely and are open to the public.

The group from the Atlanta League of Women Voters who are studying child welfare, under the leadership of Mrs. Paul Ackerly, meets Friday afternoon, May 20, at 3 o'clock at the High Museum. There will be reports from the various members on different branches of city-wide activity in juvenile care. Mrs. Tom Arnold and Mrs. Paul Ackerly, who visited the juvenile court, will give a comprehensive account of their investigation. Mrs. Richard Trotter, who interviewed the probation officer, will speak. After the meeting the group will go to the Hillside Cottages for a trip of inspection. The Hillside Cottages are considered models of all that is modern and correct in juvenile care and training.

The staff workers of the Atlanta League of Women Voters handle all the office work, and the director reports that volunteer work done by conscientious women is functioning perfectly. An assistant director is in charge each day with three staff workers, and all days are filled except one vacancy on each of three days, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, when someone who can type is needed. If there are members who are available they will be welcome. On Monday and Wednesday Miss Eleanore Raoul is in charge, on Tuesday Mrs. A. R. Brittain, on Thursday Mrs. Leonard Haas, on Friday Mrs. W. F. Caldwell, and on Saturday Mrs. W. L. Hunnicutt.

Mrs. Connally Fetes Civic Club Board

Mrs. R. T. Connally, second vice president of the Civic Club of West End, entertained the executive board at a luncheon Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Halpin, following a business session presided over by Mrs. W. L. McCalley, first vice president. A group of club members made the pilgrimage to Tallulah Falls school Friday.

Garden division will hold their flower show in the clubrooms Tuesday, May 17, at 3 o'clock. Members of the club are invited to exhibit any flowers they have in bloom. The spring flower show is an important feature of the club and garden division. Mrs. L. Z. Fleming, chairman of the Needlework Guild, will sponsor an all-day sewing and box luncheon at the club Wednesday, May 18, at 10 o'clock.

Another event of Wednesday will be the first of a series of "Vanishing Teas," sponsored by Mrs. Jesse Manry. Those accepting Mrs. Manry's invitation are Mesdames James F Bockius, G. A. Richardson, Thomas L. Slappey, Jesse Manry, C. C. Chamberlain, Otis Witherspoon, R. T. Connally, J. H. Savage, W. Carl Raper, Floyd Cox, E. O. Thornton, A. R. Harbin, L. A. Hollingsworth and L. Z. Fleming.

Mrs. A. R. Harbin and Mrs. Olivia LeGett will sponsor a bridge party Tuesday afternoon, May 24, at the clubhouse, at $1 per table. Plans were made to sponsor a play at an early date, under direction of Mrs. Lynwood Jester. Mrs. C. E. Broach, library chairman, requests any one having magazines to bring them to the club at the next meeting. The Civic Club is sponsoring two girls in school, one at G. S. C. W., at Milledgeville, and the other in one of the high schools in the city, and they are gratified to know that both are honor pupils.

Club Members Win Flower Show Ribbons.

Grant Park Woman's Club won four ribbons at the spring flower show of the Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs held Wednesday at the Atlanta Woman's Club. Mrs. D. F. Smith was winner for five beautiful roses. Mrs. W. R. Allgood won red ribbon for one rose. Mrs. W. R. Duke won white ribbon for lemon lily. Mr. Charles F. Huber won white ribbon for pink peony.

Ladies exhibiting flowers were Mesdames W. H. Lee, D. W. Hopkins, D. F. Smith, W. W. Murphey, C. W. Heery, Carl Karston, Stiles Glass, Charles Huber, W. R. Allgood, W. R. Duke, M. D. Stephens, R. B. Crusselle, Eloise Loftis, G. P. Buchanan. The committee to collect and arrange flowers for show included Mesdames W. H. Lee, D. W. Hopkins, Stiles Glass and Carl Karston.

True Blue Council Plans Birthday Party.

Gate City O. E. S.

Gate City Chapter No. 233, O. E. S., meets Monday evening at 8 o'clock at 160 Central avenue. After the meeting the public is invited to attend the Mother's Day program which will be presented.

Miss Shivers, Mr. McKinney Will Wed at St. Mark's Church

Atlanta and Chattanooga society will be interested in the announcement made today of the wedding plans of Miss Louisa Shivers and Russell McKinney, whose marriage will be an important event of Saturday, June 4, taking place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at St. Mark's Methodist church. Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, pastor of the church, will perform the ceremony, and the bride-elect will be given in marriage by her brother, R. H. Hardwick.

The lovely bride-to-be has chosen her sister, Miss Dorothy Shivers, as junior maid of honor and Miss Marian Tolle, of South Orange, N. J., a lifelong friend of Miss Shivers, will act as maid of honor. The bridesmaids will include Misses Frances Boykin, Judy King, Mamie Raine and Marguerite Anderson.

Mr. McKinney will have as his best man his father, Thomas H. McKinney, of Chattanooga, Tenn. The groomsmen will include Ed Norman, John Logan and T. H. McKinney Jr., all of Chattanooga, and Ed Patton, Leo Sudereth, of Atlanta. Acting as ushers will be Ryburn Clay, Frank S. Boykin, Harrison Jones, Richard Garlington, Samuel Mangham and Harold Rogers.

Members of the bridal party and immediate families will be entertained at the Piedmont Driving Club by Mrs. Lester L. Shivers, mother of the bride-elect, following the wedding. Mr. McKinney and his bride will leave immediately afterwards for a wedding trip of several weeks, after which they will live in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Preceding the wedding numerous parties will honor this popular couple. Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Boykin will entertain members of the bridal party at a buffet supper following the wedding rehearsal Friday evening, June 3. Mr. and Mrs. Ryburn Clay will be hosts at a supper at their home on Cherokee road Saturday evening, May 28. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rogers will entertain at midday dinner Sunday, May 29, at their home on Argonne drive. Among those who will entertain are Misses Mamie Raine, Marguerite Anderson, Judy King and others. Mrs. Shivers will entertain at a trousseau tea Wednesday afternoon, June 1, from 4 to 6 o'clock at her home on Montclair drive in honor of her daughter. No formal invitations will be issued, but all friends of the honor guest are invited, through the press, to call during the afternoon.

Meador-Miller Bridal Personnel Is of Particular Interest to Society

Of particular interest to society is the personnel of the bridal party of Miss Julia Lowry Meador and Lieutenant Troop Miller, of the aviation corps of the United States army, their marriage to be a brilliant social event of Saturday afternoon, May 28, taking place at 5:30 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church, on Peachtree street. Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the church, will perform the ceremony in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends. All of the pomp and glamour of the military traditions will be reflected in the impressive details pertaining to the ceremony, which will duplicate the plans of Colonel Troop Miller, U. S. A., and Mrs. Miller, when they were married over 20 years ago, in Knoxville, Tenn.

Bridal Party.

The lovely bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Thomas Dent Meador, and she has chosen as her maid of honor, her attractive sister, Miss Josephine Meador. The bevy of charming bridesmaids includes Miss Ethel Woodruff, of Columbus, Ga.; Miss Mary Vereen, of Moultrie, Ga.; Miss Adeline Winston, of New York city; Miss Rosa Miller, of Chattanooga, Tenn., sister of the bridegroom-to-be, and Mrs. Oliver Healey and Misses Eleanor Johnson, Caroline Paullin, and Elizabeth Spalding, of Atlanta.

Lieutenant Miller will have as his best man his cousin, Frank Smith Jr., and his groomsmen will include his brother officers in the aviation corps, Lieutenant Douglass M. Kilpatrick and Lieutenant H. Q. Huglin, of Langley Field, Va., and Lieutenant R. F. C. Vance and Lieutenant Heyward Hansell, of Maxwell field, in Montgomery, Ala. Completing the list of groomsmen are Lieutenant W. C. Sweeney, Lieutenant Christian H. Clarke Jr., and Lieutenant R. A. Ports, of Fort Benning, and Lieutenant W. F. Grisham, of Fort Oglethorpe.

Senator John S. Cohen, Lowry Arnold, Henry Porter, William Lowry Meador, the bride-elect's uncle; Dr. Frank Boland and Deloney Sledge, Dr. W. S. Goldsmith and Wickliff Goldsmith will be ushers. Little Miss Julia Clarke Orme will act as flower girl and John Knox Jr. will be ringbearer.

Series of Parties.

A series of parties will compliment Miss Meador preceding her marriage to Lieutenant Miller, the initial event to be Miss Elizabeth Spalding's luncheon, given Wednesday, May 18, at the Capital City Club. Miss Ethel Woodruff's luncheon will be given Monday, May 23, at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Miss Caroline Paullin entertains at luncheon Friday, May 27, at her home on Andrews drive, in honor of Miss Meador, and Mr. and Mrs. William L. Meador's dinner-party honoring their niece, Miss Meador, and her fiance, Lieutenant Miller, will be given at the opening of the Brookhaven Country Club, on Thursday evening, May 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Healey's party is scheduled for Friday evening, May 27, following the rehearsal of the wedding at the church, the hosts entertaining at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme, on Valley road, in Tuxedo Park.

'The Making of a Golden Eaglet' To Be Presented at Rich's, June 3

"The Making of a Golden Eaglet" will be presented by the Girl Scouts at a rally to be given at Rich's Friday, June 3, at 3:30 o'clock. The development of character building and training is shown in this presentation, as each phase of the Girl Scout program is displayed by girls receiving awards this month. From the simple test that the girl takes to become a tenderfoot scout, through the second class and proficiency badges, such as homemaking, outdoor, health, music, and dancing, there is the joy of accomplishment until the eaglet badge is finally earned.

Highest Award.

Golden eaglet is the highest award given to any Girl Scout and is the final aim of every girl. It is an honor available to any Girl Scout, who, in character, fitness and ability, represents that fine all-around type of girl which it is the object of the organization to foster. More important than literally meeting the requirements is the spirit in which they are met. The Golden Eaglet should be outstanding not only in her knowledge of the technical skills of Girl Scouting and her ability to apply them, but even more in her daily practice of the Girl Scout laws, in the qualities of happiness, kindliness, courtesy and dependability developed by them.

To be eligible for this award a Girl Scout must have been an active member of a Girl Scout troop and registered in good standing at national headquarters for three consecutive years just prior to the date on which the application is made. She must be a first-class Scout, and have 21 merit badges; must be recommended by her court of honor in her troop and have camped at least two weeks in a Girl Scout camp. As an evidence of an appreciation of the Girl Scout laws, and promise and of service to others she must train another girl in the first-class rank. Mrs. Frank D. Holland, commissioner of the Atlanta Girl Scout council, will present four golden eaglets to girls having been approved by the National Girl Scout committee on badges and awards.

The play to be presented by the First-Class Senior Girl Scout troop will include demonstrations of the merit badges, which will be in charge of the leaders of individual troops. The girls receiving the hostess badge will act as hostesses, and will receive and serve the Girl Scouts and their parents and friends. Girls registering for six weeks at the general camp will be in a camp scene, and will help Mrs. John Miller, who will take camp registrations.

Camp Civitania.

As the week-end camping program at the Girl Scoutcamp, Civitania, closes May 15, over 100 girls are registered for the summer camping season. Since the camp opened in September to the leaders for troop camping, there have been 20 troops for overnight or week-ends. The winter quarters accommodate 20 girls and these have been filled to capacity on each occasion. A total of 682 girls have spent at least one day at camp, cooking their own meals over an open fire, learning to make themselves comfortable with the things offered in the woods, and enjoying the unusual opportunities of nature study.

The week-end camping program is directed by the troop leader or captain under the supervision of the local council. The activities and programs are planned by the girls themselves, through their court of honor, with the leader acting as advisor. The campers are divided into groups of eight, called the patrol, and each patrol elects its own leader. This patrol system lies at the very roots of the Scout movement, shaping its underlying philosophy not less than its everyday program. Share in the work and play and plans and decisions of the troop, the patrol and the court of honor means training in co-operation and democracy, and for intelligent citizenship. Dr. Elizabeth Kemper Adams, a well-known psychologist, calls patrols "the most modern sort of training in group mindedness." The days are full of Girl Scout games, nature lore, woodcraft, and when there are responsibilities fairly divided, the girls have more fun than when their outing is only a carefree trip.

Mrs. Cohen Honors Miss May Friedman.

Mrs. S. G. Cohen entertained at a bridge-luncheon Wednesday at Rich's tea room, honoring her sister, Miss May Friedman, a bride-elect of June.

The guests included Mesdames Gilbert Brodkin, R. L. Willner, Maurice Rich, I. W. Spielberger, Ben Diamond, A. G. Reisman, Louis Samet, Joe Goldwasser, Morris Goldstein, M. Friedman, W. B. Spielberger, H. Stern, Miss Celia Weinberg, Miss Irene Bernath, Mrs. Jake Friedman, Mrs. Isadore Borochoff, Miss Stella Spielberger, Mesdames Max Silverman, Dave Spielberger, I. D. Friedman, Ben Kaplan, Jacob Pries, Alex Bernath, Louis Borochoff, Mendle Boorstin, Murray Simon, and Herman Barrus, of Chicago.

Sigma Mu Phi Gives Dinner-Dance.

Sigma Mu Phi legal fraternity of the Atlanta Law School assembled Friday at East Lake Country Club for its annual dinner dance, and Chancellor Scarborough addressed the members and their friends. E. L. Kimbie acted as master of ceremonies, and Chauncy Middlebrooks introduced the principal speaker, Judge Shepard Bryan. Judge Alexander W. Stevens, of the Georgia court of appeals; Hon. F. A. Hooper Jr., newely elected honorary member of Chi chapter; Hon. E. E. Watkins Jr., of the Atlanta bar, and Past Chancellor Scott Lay Jr. made talks. E. L. Davis was chairman of the entertainment committee, and it was due to his efforts that the program worked so smoothly. Smith H. West was in charge of the publicity committee.

Rebekah Assembly.

Last meeting of the assembly year of the third district of the assembly, was held with Clara Rebekah lodge recently in the hall of Clara lodge. Mrs. Loreta Scates, president of the third district of Rebekah assembly, presided. Mrs. J. G. Crumley, president of the Rebekah assembly of Georgia, was present at this meeting, and other officers and past officers of the Rebekah assembly present were Mrs. C. C. Holt, warden of the assembly; Mrs. P. L. Broom, chaplain; Mrs. M. C. Strickland, secretary; Mrs. A. C. Bishop, past president; Mrs. Gussie Tripp, past president; Mrs. Maud Hughes, past president, and Mrs. E. A. McArthur, past president.

The following officers were elected for next year: Mrs. T. W. Brown, president; Miss Laura McArthur, vice president; Mrs. E. A. McArthur, secretary; Mrs. Gussie Tripp, treasurer. The president of the district presented her co-workers with tokens of appreciation as she closed her year's work. Mrs. Scates has had a successful year as an officer.

Chairman of Publicity Writes Of Baptist W. M. U. Activities

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, chairman of publicity, writes of activities of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union, as follows:

"Mrs. W. W. Stark, state chairman, is optimistic over increased interest in stewardship. This work is definitely carried on in the various localities of the state under the supervision of 76 associational and 539 local chairmen. The enrollment of tithers shows marked increase during the past month. Mrs. E. E. Steele, of Winder, has been elected chairman for the east central division. Mrs. W. T. Martin, chairman, announces the appointment of 43 new chairmen in local societies in the department of personal service. During the past year 1,876 societies, adult and young people, were engaged in organized personal service, and through them many thousands of dollars were expended for the needy.

Institutes Planned.

"Institutes for the training of teachers in mission study are being planned in virtually all associations of the union, and many have already been held. Outstanding among these was the three-day institute of the Atlanta association under the direction of Mrs. B. D. Quarles. An achievement of this department was the compilation of a handbook of methods for teachers which has very recently been released from the press. Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, is state chairman of this department. Mrs. L. O. Freeman, director of publicity, asks that press chairmen continue active in giving organization news to the public through the press, but suggests the advisability of an increased used of daily papers.

"The department of white cross under its new leader, Mrs. Charles Cater, of Quitman, is now active in aiding an effort to secure a biplane fluroscope for the Georgia Baptist hospital. There is no instrument of this kind, which is most expensive, in the immediate southern states. Gifts to the fluroscope will not be credited on apportionments. The white cross committee is still active in furnishing supplies to the Warren Memorial hospital, China, where these gifts are of special necessity during this time of war and distress. During the year, $2,516 in love gifts have been used to supplement the scholarship allowances of children of foreign missionaries now attending school in America. Memorials have amounted to $279.40. During the 16 years of its existence Margaret fund has aided in the education of 240 sons and daughters of foreign missionaries, and scholarships have been given amounting to $204,722. Mrs. W. T. Henry, of Atlanta, is state chairman of this fund.

Graduating Exercises.

"The graduating exercises of the W. M. U. Training school took place May 2 with Mrs. Maude R. McClure, of Columbus, former principal, delivering the annual address. Among the graduates was Miss Floride Smith, of Milledgeville. Miss Gladys Williams, of Athens, has been awarded a scholarship for the next school year. Mrs. J. C. Lanier, of West Point, is Georgia trustee of this school. Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, historian, has been requested to write a history of the union's 50 years of life and progress. As a feature of the recent golden anniversary celebrations, Mrs. George Westmoreland prepared an informative leaflet giving the origin and early activities of W. M. U.

"Miss Mary Christian, state secretary of young people, is calling attention to the 10-day southwide young woman's auxiliary camp at Ridgecrest, N. C., June 14-24. Last year there were in attendance 300 girls and 20 of these were from Georgia. Besides traveling expenses the actual cost of the camp is an enrollment fee of $2, and $2 per day for room and board. Miss Christian will attend and have part in the direction of the camp. During the month Mrs. A. F. McMahon, secretary-treasurer, was a program speaker at annual W. M. U. meetings in Macon, Athens, Chatworth, Dalton, Tunnel Hill, Lakeview, Lylerly, Rome and Cedartown. Contributions to the co-operative program for April were $14,457."

Atlanta District of W. M. S. Holds Annual Meeting at Wesley Church

Approximately 350 women representing the membership of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society of the Atlanta district attended the annual meeting at the Wesley Memorial church, May 5-6.

The auxiliary of the Park Street Methodist church, with an attendance of 80, won the silver loving cup presented annually by Claude Bennett, local jeweler, for largest attendance.

Mrs. E. N. Good, secretary of the district, presided over the meeting. Conference officers who assisted were: Mrs. M. E. Tilly, who gave the membership plans, and Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, who had charge of the noon devotional on Thursday, conducting this in the form of a retreat. Mrs. Awtry used for her subject "Be Still and Know That I am God."

Featuring the Thursday morning program was a talk on "Parent Education" by Mrs. Clifford Walker; a study in advertising by Mrs. Mary R. Kent, and echoes of the council meeting by others present. Thursday afternoon the Young Women's Circle, of Park Street, gave a forceful demonstration of the missionary dollar at work.

Friday morning the program had for its central theme, "Our Work in Georgia," and the different phases were presented by Miss Janet Head, of the Wesley Community house, and Miss Bert Winter, conference rural worker. Dr. R. B. Eleazer lectured on "Christian Citizenship," and the Rev. Ellis A. Fuller, of the First Baptist church, led the noon devotional.

Mrs. Hugh Harris, on Friday afternoon, taught the first of the rural billion accredited lessons and the closing number was presented by a group of children in a demonstration of world friendship.

Garden Division Will Hear Mrs. Palmour and Mrs. Loveless

Mrs. Oscar Palmour and Mrs. Myer Loveless will be the speakers on the program of the garden division of the West End Woman's Club at the meeting of the division on Wednesday, May 18, at 10 o'clock at the clubhouse, 1100 Cascade road. Mrs. Palmour is the first vice president of the Garden Club of Georgia and is a recognized authority on the growth and culture of chrysanthemums. She is an author of a book and numbers of magazine articles pertaining to this subject.

Mrs. Loveless will speak on "The Small Garden." She is past president and organizer of the West End Garden Club and has been responsible to a large extent for the success of the garden movement in West End. Having one of the most beautiful and attractive gardens in her section, her wide experience in this work makes Mrs. Loveless the proper person to impart her knowledge of gardening to other flower lovers of West End.

This will be an open meeting and Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, chairman of the garden division, extends an invitation to those interested in flowers to attend. Following the meeting tea will be served by Mrs. Clark M. Settle, first vice chairman of the division. Anyone wishing transportation to the club is requested to call Mrs. J. H. Dodson, automobile chairman, Raymond 1531.

At the recent flower show staged at the Atlanta Woman's Club by the fifth district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, the following prizes were awarded to members of the garden division of the West End Woman's Club: a blue ribbon to Mrs. J. H. Atwell for a single bloom exhibit of the Lady Hillington rose; a red ribbon to Mrs. W. N. Ponder for single exhibit of a Paul Neyron rose; a white ribbon to Mrs. W. G. Baskin for a single bloom of a white Killarney. In the bowl exhibit of gaillardias, the first prize was awarded to Mrs. Thomas and a white ribbon went to Mrs. J. H. Phagan for her exhibit of iris, one variety.

WHITEN TEETH a shade a day

Yellow, stained teeth are not natural. For proof start using Kolynos—a half-inch of this scientific dental cream on a dry brush, twice daily. In 3 days your teeth will look fully 3 shades whiter!

This remarkable dental cream cleans teeth so much whiter than other preparations you've used because it contains two remarkable ingredients. One—the finest cleansing agent known—foams into and cleans out every fissure, removes decay-causing debris, erases ugly tartar and yellow. While the second ingredient kills millions of germs that swarm into the mouth and cause most tooth and gum troubles. Thus the mouth and teeth are quickly cleaned right down to the beautiful, natural white enamel without injury.

Now if you want gleaming white teeth free from decay, and firm, pink gums free from disease start using Kolynos, with its unique Dry-Brush Technique. You'll never regret it. Buy a tube today.

Mrs. Morgan Gives Program Highlights Of Rome Meeting

Mrs. B. T. Morgan, superintendent of publicity of the Missionary Society of the Rockmart Methodist church, writes interestingly of the annual meeting of the Rome district:

"The Rome district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society met in Rockmart Tuesday and Wednesday, May 3-4. A representative number was present both days.

"Mrs. Warren C. Cantrelle, of Carrollton, secretary, with her splendidly worked out programs, brought much inspiration and help to every department of the work. The outstanding feature of the first day's session was the lesson on 'The Rural Billion,' conducted by Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, vice president of the conference. The book is a magnificent portrayal of rural life.

"Tuesday evening the young people of Rockmart presented 'The Land of the Morning Calm,' a dramatic playlet depicting life in Korea, written and directed by Mrs. Alva G. Maxwell, conference superintendent of literature and publicity, which was one of the highlights of the meeting and was received enthusistically.

"Outstanding on the Tuesday morning program was the 'Study in Advertising' by Mrs. Maxwell. Mrs. Maxwell stressed the power of the printed page and called attention to the valuable space contributed weekly by The Atlanta Constitution to the Federated Church Women of Georgia. She appealed that this space be filled with interesting, worthwhile information.

"Other interesting features were round table discussions of phases of departmental work, a display of inspirational posters, and a talk by a life member."

Y. W. A. Counselors Support Missionary

At the last meeting the Y. W. A. counselors and presidents voted to continue meeting through the summer months, assembling the first Saturday afternoon of each month in Rich's conference room.

Miss Vera Atkins, Y. W. A. leader of the Atlanta association, spoke regarding the support of a missionary, Miss Adele Lain, in Brazil, and outlined the method passed on by the mission board. A motion was made and carried to undertake this program and Miss Evelyn Harwell, mission study chairman, was elected to act as treasurer of this fund which Y. W. A.'s have pledged to contribute to monthly through their representative at the counselors' meeting. The amount given may be listed on the quarterly reports under the item of "Other Subjects."

Camp life and its benefits for Y. W. A.s will be at Koweta May 21 and 22. Buses will leave the Union station Saturday, May 21, at 2:30 o'clock. Fare will be 60 cents for the round trip. A full inspirational and recreational program has been planned, centering around the theme, "Christ Adequate." Registration should be made with Miss Mary Jones, secretary, at Baptist headquarters, by May 16. Fee is $2.25. Each Y. W. A. of the city is urged to send a representation to this annual outing.

The second quarterly Y. W. A. rally was announced for July 18 at the Kirkwood church.

Miss Rice Weds Grover M. Ford.

ARLINGTON, Ga., May 14.—The marriage of Miss Kathleen Rice to Grover M. Ford was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Rice, near Arlington, at 11 o'clock Thursday in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. Rev. H. M. Melton, of Norman Park, Ga., officiated. Mrs. Percy Doster, of Dothan, Ala., rendered "Venetian Love Song," by Nevin, and the wedding march from "Lohengrin." During the ceremony, "To a Wild Rose," by McDowell, was played.

The bride was attractively gowned in eggshell chiffon, with accessories to match, and a bouquet of pink rosebuds.

Mrs. Ford, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Rice, is a graduate of Arlington High school, and holds a B. S. degree from G. S. C. W., Milledgeville. She has done post-graduate work at the University of Georgia and for the past two years she has been instructor of mathematics of the high school, and head of the physical education department of the Berry schools at Mt. Berry, Georgia.

Mr. Ford is the son of Mrs. Belle Ford and the late William M. Ford, of Gadsden, Ala. He received his high school education from the Berry schools, his B. S. degree from Davidson college and later attended Emory University, where he received his M. S. degree. He also did a year's graduate work at Duke University. For the past two years he has been head of the chemistry and physics department of the Berry schools.

The bridegroom is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, Gamma Sigma Epsilon, Honorary Chemical Fraternity, Figmi Pi Sigma, Honorary Physics Fraternity and is a member of the Scabbard and Blade.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford left on their wedding trip for points of interest in North Carolina. On their return they will make their home at Gadsden, Ala.

Miss Braswell and Mr. Hendrix To Wed in Gainesville June 14

Miss Louise Braswell, of Gainesville, Ga., whose engagement is announced today to Maurice E. Hendrix, formerly of Canton, Ga., but now of Atlanta, their marriage to be solemnized June 14. She is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Maude Gresham Braswell and the late B. B. Braswell.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—An announcement of special interest is that of the engagement of Miss Louise Braswell to Maurice E. Hendrix, of Canton, Ga., the marriage to be solemnized June 14.

Miss Braswell is the only daughter of Mrs. Maude Braswell and the late B. B. Braswell. She is descended from the Greshams and Rhymes of Virginia and Georgia, who were among the first settlers in this country from England. Miss Braswell was graduated from Gainesville High school and attended G. S. C. W. at Milledgeville, Georgia.

Mr. Hendrix is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Hendrix, of Canton, Ga., and was graduated from Canton High school and also attended Georgia Tech. For the past six years he has been connected with the White Provision Company of Atlanta.

Miss Brooke Will Give Dance Recital May 21 at Egleston Hall

Miss Ruth Brooke will give a dance recital Saturday evening, May 21, at Egleston Hall on West Peachtree and North avenue. Talented pupils of the school will appear in groups and solos in a varied program and Miss Brooke will give a number of solos.

The Griffith School of Music will present Misses Anita Hubar and Ringer Hornsby, pupils of Mrs. Margie Griffith, on the harp. Miss Huber's harp solo will be "The Last Rose of Summer," by Flotow, and Miss Hornby's will be "Prierre," by Hasselmans. The duets which they will play are "The Song of the Volga Boatman," by Salzedo, and "Serenade," by Rogers. Mrs. Laura Lombard, accompanied by Joe Ragan, will sing two numbers entitled "Across the Hills," by Rummel, and "In Summer Hills," by Brahms.

An interesting part of the program will be the pantomime comedies by groups of the younger pupils including Virginia Simmons, Betty Jane Williams, Margaret Mizell, Alice Crandall and Carolyn Cauble. An unusual feature will be the dance interpretation of the poem, "Trees," by Carol Williams and Louise Swint, while the words are sung by Mrs. Laura Lombard. Louise Swint was awarded the Potter-Spiker memorial scholarship through the woman's club last winter. She was selected on a personality basis and had had no previous training. She has shown unusual ability and will also dance solos on the program.

The hall will be open at 7:30 o'clock and the recital will begin at 8 o'clock. The public is invited and no admission will be charged.

Miss Mary Green Appointed Instructor At Camp Toccoa

Camp Toccoa committee of Atlanta Council of Camp Fire Girls announces the appointment of Miss Mary Green as handcraft instructor for the summer of 1932 at the camp at Toccoa, Ga. Miss Green has attended Camp Fire camps for seven years, being a counselor for three years. She announces various new types of handcraft, with especial emphasis on woodcraft and carving, for the coming season.

Senior camp, in co-operation with the national yearly project, "The Home Harmonious and Enriching," will construct a log house, which will be the home of wood carving and rustic work. Brass and copper work will be added to the program this year for the first time. Batiking, dyeing, symbolism, beadwork and leather tooling will be again taught in this department. Miss Green will be assisted by Mrs. Violetta Mahood, expert in woodcraft; Miss Lucy Loflin, who will instruct in basketry, using wildwood materials growing on the camp site. Older girls in the leadership training course will assist in this department.

Girls desiring to register for Camp Toccoa may do so by calling at local headquarters on the fifth floor of Davison-Paxon Company. Camp Toccoa will be under the direction of Mrs. Laura V. Lombard and will be open from June 13 to August 6, including five periods of one and two weeks.

Music Club Presents Last Program

The last program of the season will be presented by the Atlanta Music Club Wednesday morning at 10:45 o'clock in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club. This program will be one of the study course series, with Mrs. Grace Lee Townsend, general chairman, in charge. Mrs. Walter H. Bedard, president of the club, has extended an invitation to the public for this program, the last program of the season being the customary "open house" of the Atlanta Music Club. No admission is charged.

Appearing on the program will be three representative artists from the Atlanta Conservatory: Miss Minna Hoffman, dramatic soprano; Miss Elizabeth Hopson, pianist, and Miss Hazel Wood, accompanist. Miss Hoffman will sing "Dawn," Pearl Curran; "May Day Carol," Deems Taylor, and "I Love Life," Manna-Zuca. Miss Elizabeth Hopson will play the first movement of the "Sonato Eroica," by MacDowell, and "Allegro de Concierto," Granados.

In addition to playing Miss Hoffman's accompaniments, Miss Wood will give a brief synopsis of the life of Deems Taylor. These artists are prominently identified with musical activities of the city.

Musical and Dramatic Talent To Contribute to Emergency Fund

Atlanta's best musical and dramatic talent will be displayed at the entertainment to be given Wednesday, May 18, at the city auditorium for the benefit of the sewing room of the emergency relief committee. This will be the closing activity of this group for the current season and the organizations invited to co-operate have responded with gratifying promptness and cordial indorsement of the work.

The Community theater contributed a playlet with Janet Millis Shepherd directing, and "The Trysting Place," by Booth Tarkington, is the offering which will be shown with the following well-known amateurs filling the various roles: Dorothy Fluker Stokes, Jack Woolf, Mrs. Hugh Harris, Louise Huddleston, Max Hall, James Reese and Arthur Stokes.

The Emory University Glee Club is too well-known and too generally admired to need more than a mere listing here, but the committee declares that the co-operation of this organization is deemed very valuable to the success of the performance.

Oglethorpe University contributes that delightful tenor, Vaughan Ozmer, and the talented pianist, J. T. Pittman, while the Boys' High orchestra and Tech High band will furnish special numbers.

A unique feature of the entertainment will be the participation of the Tech Y. M. C. A. Singers, directed by Robert Mell, said to be the only college Y. M. C. A. singers in the world. Dr. M. L. Brittain's indorsement of the work of the committee made this feature possible, as the singers do not usually respond to requests for entertainment features. The accompanist will be Miss Frances Croft and the group is composed of the following: J. W. Richardson, C. W. Pike, W. L. Young, F. Y. Speight, H. Z. McConnell, F. M. Green, C. E. Bailey, F. S. Mathews, J. R. Mitchell, W. R. Weems, J. R. Pickle, R. K. Smith, R. E. Hamby, J. G. Beachman, H. L. Parry, K. H. Hanna, C. F. von Herrmann Jr., E. S. Jones, I. D. Shearhouse, C. D. Johnson, R. S. Thomas, M. A. Birch, H. R. Hudson and S. C. Puckett.

Tickets are on sale at Cox's Prescription shop, in the Paramount theater building, from May 14 to 18, and at the auditorium on the evening of the performance. The price range put these tickets within the reach of public-spirited Atlanta citizens.

'How To Be a Clubwoman' Title Of Instructive and Interesting Book

"How to Be a Clubwoman" is the title of an interesting and instructive book which has come to the desk of the editor of Georgia Federation's Club Page in The Constitution. its authors being Helen Cowles LeCron and Edith Wasson McElroy. It is published by D. Appleton & Company, and the authors tell how to be a clubwoman and get full benefit from membership and render ample service in return and at the same time make the club association an erichment of home and personal life. Every type of clubwoman, no matter in what field her tics, literature, charity work, or other tics, literature ,charity work, or other activity—will find this book a complete and useful manual.

The authors write from wide experience with many different types of women's clubs, and from the practical understanding derived from conducting the club department of a popular magazine. In chatty, intimate fashion they discuss the place of the woman's club in the present-day social scheme and show how the most successful clubs are organized, directed, and managed. They tell of the duties of the club president and other administrative officers and describe ways to develop each office to its fullest usefulness and influence. A host of other topics—handling committees, meeting difficult situations, writing papers, making speeches, good maners, the Parent-Teacher's Association, reading club, athletic club, home economics club, publicity, etc.—are likewise covered in the volume, which further includes a model constitution and a chapter of seasonal hints for the conduct of a club all around the year.

Mrs. Le Cron and Mrs. McElroy are Iowans, descended from that early pioneer stock which established itself in pre-Revolutionary New England, gradually moving westward by covered wagon. Deeply concerned with social and civic progress, both authors early identified themselves with women's clubs, and made the most of their club associations in helping bring about needful legislation and various civic improvements. Mrs. Le Cron has long been associated with the Des Moines Women's Club and the State Federation of Clubs, and is a member of the Colonial Dames.

Mrs. McElroy is likewise a club woman of many years' standing, especially well known for her work in the department of women's affairs of the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce and in the Women's City Club. She is also a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Both have a wide following among club women through their work in the literary pages of the magazine, "Better Homes and Gardens," as well as for the club department which they have been editing in this magazine, and which has been closely followed by women's organizations the country over.

Marketing Stories Are of Interest And Benefit to Live-at-Home Plan

Walter H. Harrison, vice president of the First National Bank of Lavonia and chairman of the live-at-home program which has been carried on for two years in Georgia by the agricultural committee of the Georgia Bankers' Association and Extension Service of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, presented the live-at-home program at the Columbus convention. Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs adopted a motion that the president of the state body appoint one representative from the state-at-large to officially confer with the aforementioned committee for the purpose of helpfully co-ordinating the live-at-home efforts of the federated clubs of Georgia with the activities of the above named committee, with special reference to plans for distributing surplus farm products of the state now being stimulated by the successful activities of said farm committee.

Marking Stories.

Marketing stories, as related by farm women, are of interest to club women and thereby demonstrate the possibilities and the benefits reaped from a live-at-home program. Mrs. F. Y. Williams, of Gwinnett county, says in regard to her curb market: "I feel as though I have found the way I have long sought, that of adding something to the family income. I could have sold my eggs and butter to a peddlar at some price at home, but for the majority of my products there was no market at all. I have sold milk, butter, cottage cheese, eggs, chickens, vegetables, flower (wild and tame), canned products, syrup, hominy, cracklings, raisin bread and bulbs. In fact, most anything that can be found on a farm.

"One month my sales amounted to $53.61; another, 147.65, and another, $63.66. Can you imagine what that means to a farm woman with a family of six growing children? There never has been a time when I needed money more than now, for I am determined to educate these children, and their needs are many. Aside from the financial part, I have enjoyed the contact with other people. It gives me something to think about. I have had the opportunity to study the city people from a different angle and I have surely enjoyed knowing them. The marketing booth is meaning much to me and my family."

Mrs. George Webb, of the same county, president of the marketing association, has this to say about "marketing": "The old adage, 'burned child dreads the fire,' is certainly true in the case of the city customer and eggs. I mentioned eggs because they have been our chief commodity. Of course one cannot always tell from the shell of an egg what the breaking of that egg may disclose. It is evident that city people are burned children. It has taken weeks to break down their skepticism and build confidence. I can say with pardonable pride that this has been done to the extent that we are entirely unable to supply the demand for real infertile eggs.

"It is a regretable fact that the farmer is accused of placing the best-looking apples on top in the barrel. I am sorry to say that the accusation is not without foundation. Before the 'live-at-home' plan can be firmly established and successfully carried out through marketing surpluses, the farmer must build absolute confidence in his integrity, thereby lifting the marketing side to a higher plane. This can be done by meriting confidence, by offering for sale only the best. Although the work has at times been arduous, the new friends have been valuable. The good features of marketing have far outweighed the bad. The remuneration has been very acceptable, but cannot be counted in dollars and cents alone."

Miss Lulu Edwards says she "may establish a roadside market on her own place, or she may sell on a curb market, but her method is a demonstration to other farm women, and she is frequently visited by them."

Mrs. M. S. Tanner, from Flowery Branch, in a report last year wrote: "We have suffered from drouth this year, but I have not given up. I have grown Irish potatoes, beans, sweet potatoes, squash, cucumbers, English peas, tomatoes, peppers, okra, cabbage, onions lettuce turnips, greens, mustard, rape, pumpkin, salsify. I have also had strawberries figs, apples, peaches, grapes, melons, pears, English walnuts, black walnuts and hickory nuts.

"I furnish my family from the garden and we sold $200 of fruits and vegetables this summer. I canned about 500 jars from the garden and orchard. I've dried eight bushels of fruit and when we finish gathering we will have six to eight bushels of dried beans and garden peas. I bought a portion of my seed this year, but saved most of them from my garden last year."

Here is a report of a gardener from Grovetown, Ga., Columbia county, Mrs. Roxie B. Bugg: "I sold $7.65 worth of butter beans at 25 cents a quart! $4.55 worth of snap beans at 15 and 20 cents per quart; corn, $11; okra, $4.50; peas, $5.85; squash, $2. I sold eggs, chickens, milk and butter, scuppernongs, applies, plums and peaches. Most of these were peddled out to regular customers."

Mrs. Nix, a north Georgia gardener, wrote last year: "The drouth hit us hard. I have three-eights of an acre. We have been cut off about one-half on account of dry weather. I received a box of seed from the Red Cross and bought the rest. I have in my garden beans, cabbage, onions, okra, turnips, greens, lettuce, beets, tomatoes, carrots, squash. I have sold $30 worth of vegetables and canned more than I sold. I have plenty of cabbage for late kraut. I sold my vegetables at the curb market in Gainesville. I am planning for a better garden next year." Mrs. Nix has not lost courage.

"The first of April we began gathering strawberries that lasted about six weeks. The patch was one-third of an acre. The gathering cost nothing, as it was done by neighbors and friends who accepted berries for pay. The net profit was $165. Talk about your ups and downs, I surely had it with the bean patch. No stand, and it was so dry they could not grow—but in spite of it all, I made $75 on them."

Miss Whelchel, county home demonstration agent of Hall county, states in a new article: "It is no trouble to get farm people to diversify their farm program if there is a market at which they can sell the new crop for ready cash and at a greater profit than their crop of cotton will bring. Now that a market is established where all dairy products are sold at a fair price, I have the talking point I have long wanted to make my home dairying net the greatest profit at the least cost of production annually of all the farm crops. And to show how this crops is increasing I have in mind two farm homes, each home had one cow when the curb market was established in April, 1930. Now at one home I recall to mind four cows are being milked and at the other six cows are producing milk for the family. The surplus sold is paying the carrying charges for two tenant families to make crops on this farm. and 32 demonstrations in home dairying in 10 communities were given. In these communities 50 women and 10 4-H Club Girls tended 117 cows. These cows produced butter and milk that sold on a local curb market for 40 cents per gallon for whole milk, 20 cents per gallon for buttermilk, and A grade butter sold for 28 to 45 cents per pound.

"For several months we have shipped from 40 pounds to 150 pounds of butter per week to other markets. The men, women and girls who were taught by the demonstrations to produce standard dairy products sold their dairy products amounting to $4,575 and used $4,019 of these products at home, making a final dairy product total of $8,594 for the year 1930."

Lithonia Club Names New Committee Heads

Committee chairmen and department heads to serve during the coming year were named by Mrs. C. J. Tucker, president, at the May meeting of the Lithonia Woman's Club, held at the clubhouse, as follows: Finance, Mrs. Charles Davidson; constitution and by-laws, Mrs. C. B. Irwin; resolutions, Mrs. George Coffey; library, Mrs. E. P. White; publicity, Mrs. J. R. McConnell; department heads and fine arts, Mrs. D. P. Phillips; education, Mrs. E. E. West; public welfare, Mrs. Rachael Pippin; garden, Mrs. Alton Johnson.

The new year books were presented by Mrs. Wheeler Davidson, program chairman, and contain an interesting and instructive series of topics. Mesdames Pippin, L. R. Bradley and Floyd Brannon solicited advertising for the booklet. Miss Vivian Haslett, of the library committee, reported 248 books withdrawn during the past month. The Red Cross committee announced the collection of $32.50, and Mrs. Thurmond Nash was welcomed as a new member.

The program was sponsored by the garden division and presented Mrs. John Harper, of Atlanta, who gave an interesting and instructive talk on flower arrangement. Mrs. Harper illustrated her topic with cut flowers and assorted containers. Hostesses were Miss Elizabeth Pritchett. Mesdames E. P. White, L. P. Brooks, Mercer Marbut, F. F. Cagle and Alton Roberts.

Maysville Club.

Maysville Woman's Club held its April meeting at the home of Mrs. L. W. Eberhardt and was called to order by the president, Mrs. T. K. Miller. Mrs. W. G. Sharp was elected first vice president to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. C. W. McCurdy, resigned from that office. Miss Sara Whitaker, home demonstration agent for Jackson county, made an interesting talk and a scholarship of $6 to Camp Wilkins was given by the club.

Constitution and by-laws were read and discussed and visitors welcomed were Mesdames John Rylee, Sam House, of Winder; Lou Pounds, of Commerce, and Misses Ruby and Gladys Wilbanks, Sara Whitaker, of Jefferson; Mary Ray and Sabri Williams.

Miss Mary Hartley told of two trees recently planted in compliment of the past and present presidents, Mrs. M. P. Deadwyler and Mrs. T. K. Miller. Social hour hostesses were Mesdames Wilkie Rylee, Grover Rylee, G. A. Smith, Robert Telford and L. W. Eberhardt.

Jackson County Clubwomen Meet In Commerce, Ga.

A program commemorating the hundredth anniversary of George Washington featured the semi-annual meeting of Jackson County Federation of Women's Clubs held in April at Mrs. T. C. Hardman's home in Commerce, with Commerce Woman's Club acting as host. Officers of the federation, all of whom were re-elected for another year, are: President Mrs. C. E. Pittman, of Commerce; first vice president, Mrs. M. P. Deadwyler, of Maysville; second vice president, Mrs. L. H. Isbell, of Jefferson; recording secretary, Mrs. H. P. DeLaperriere, of Hoschton; corresponding secretary, Miss Claire Anderson, of Commerce; treasurer, Mrs. Royce Braselton, of Braselton.

The program for those in attendance, numbering 75, was arranged by Mrs. Isbel, and was as follows: Violin solo, Mrs. O. E. Shankle, Commerce; Introductory talk on Washington, Mrs. Isbell, Jefferson; piano solo, Miss Doris Hancock, Jefferson; "Youth and Manhood of Washington," Mrs. J. O. Braselton, Braselton; song, "Father of the Land We Love," Harold Purcell, Curt Collier Jr., Vernon Carter, Misses Mary Purcell, Mary Harris Collier, Mary Carter, all of Jefferson; "Washington, Leader of Men," Mrs. T. K. Miller, Maysville; reading, "Madam Butterfly," Miss Mary Pendergrass, Jefferson; "Washington, the Builder of the Nation," Mrs. H. P. DeLaperriere, Hoschton; chorus, "O Lovely Flower," Mesdames Colquitt Hardman, Claud Williams, Young, Miss Drake, all of Commerce, with Mrs. Edgar Jackson, pianist.

The business session was presided over by Mrs. C. E. Pittman, and reports were given on club department accomplishments in the county as follows: American citizenship, Mrs. J. O. Braselton; American homes, Mrs. Lloyd Lott; education, Mrs. M. B. Allen; publicity, Mrs. J. N. Holder; legislation, Mrs. Deadwyler; public welfare, Mrs. A. A. Rogers. The presidents of the five clubs composing the county federation gave interesting talks on the outstanding accomplishments of the clubs since the October meeting.

Mrs. T. C. Hardman was assisted in receiving club members by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Colquitt Hardman. An added feature to the pleasure of visitors were visits to the lovely flower gardens of Mrs. Charlie Truitt and Mrs. K. N. Sharpe. The federation meets with the Hoschton club in October.

1st. District Reports Interesting Activities

Mrs. G. M. Barnes, of Midville, publicity chairman of the first district federation of Woman's Clubs, issues the following resume of club activities during April: At the annual meeting of the Savannah City Federation Mesdames Willard Gregory, J. C. Metts, Peter Nugent, Benjamin Oxhard Jr., Francis Turner, Arthur Gordon, John A. Hutton were elected members of the public service council, and Miss Carol Openheimer was elected corresponding secretary. Each of the 18 component clubs reported in 50 words whether it considered its work this year worth while and why. All officers and chairmen also reported their work. The feature of the afternoon was the report of the president, Mrs. J. S. Howkins, who called special attention to the work of Mrs. Frank McIntire, chairman of the woman's relief of the unemployment commission.

Juniors and seniors combined in the April meeting of the Jewish Woman's Council. The report of the "Big Sister" work showed 21 little sisters and 25 workers. Donations of furniture, clothing, books, etc., have been made to the office. Mrs. Norman Mursky, chairman of the annual vaudeville, gave a fine report of the success of the entertainment. The Catholic Woman's Club has resumed its bridge tournament.

At the annual meeting of the Huntingdon Club officers elected were: President, Mrs. Julian K. Quattlebaum; first vice president, Mrs. Harold Tuthill; second vice president, Mrs. William Harper; recording secretary, Mrs. J. O. Bacon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Thomas Purse; treasurer, Mrs. William H. Connerat; board member from club at large, Mrs. Ralston Lattimore. The club's departments of education, forum, civic, library, dramatic, have held interesting meetings.

Mrs. John Bates presided at the meeting of the Millen Club, the feature being a parliamentary drill on amendments. The city has given a new park lot to the club which has been beautified, and 1,440 books were issued during April.

Fine arts department of Claxton Woman's Club sponsored the April meeting, and the president, Mrs. R. H. Burroughs, presided.

April meeting of Guyton Club was in charge of the junior division, and primary pupils, were presented on the program, and Miss Katherine Brannen reported the district executive board meeting held in Claxton.

Annual meeting of Statesboro Woman's Club featured the report of the retiring president, Mrs. Grady K. Johnston, whose administration has been marked with fine achievements. New officers elected are: President, Mrs. Thad S. Morris; first vice president, Mrs. Howell Cone; second vice president, Mrs. George Bean; secretary, Mrs. M. E. Grimes; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Percy Averitt; treasurer, Mrs. Alfred Dorman; parliamentarian, Mrs. S. C. Groover; press reporter, Mrs. Eunice Lester. The following chairmen were elected: Program, Mrs. W. S. Hanner; education, Mrs. G. Y. Wells; public welfare, Mrs. J. S. Matthews and Mrs. Lowell Mallard; citizenship, Mrs. J. E. McCroan; membership, Mrs. Olin Smith; social, Mrs. Leffler De Loach; ways and means, Mrs. R. L. Cone and Mrs. Barney Morris; benevolence, Mrs. B. E. Paige and Mrs. Frank Williams; garden, Mrs. R. B. Ramsey.

At the April meeting of Metter Woman's Club, with the president, Mrs. B. E. Franklin, presiding, reports were given by district chairmen of the district executive board meeting. The Metter Club will entertain the district convention in October.

Midville Woman's Club's April meeting was in charge of the department of religion. A paper by Mrs. R. H. Comer on "Religion in the Home" was a feature. The public service department reported work with the Red Cross in distributing 150 sacks of flour to the unemployed.

President and Vice President

Presented above are two of the most charming and attractive officers of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs elected at the 36th annual convention held the first week in May in Columbus, and from left to right are the president, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, and Mrs. W. B. Smith, of Tennille. Mrs. Gholston is the fourteenth president of the organization.

Canon Clubwomen Raise Many Sums For Activities

"Depression and Curtailment" have been words repeated like an echo from every direction, but there certainly has been neither depression or curtailment in the labor and financial accomplishments of the Canon Woman's Club this past year. A very considerable sum of money has been expended, and permanent results have been accomplished. How has it been done? By co-operation, and the many "little put together have made the much,"—these with continually keeping at the task spell the secret.

Several entertainments of various kinds and degrees have netted good financial returns, especially the "Old Maids' Club," and "MissBlue Bonnet." A fashion show, under the management of the county demonstrator, Miss Milford, was sponsored by the club, and the demonstration at the county fair was assisted to the extent of $700. The George Washington bicentennial furnished topics for several of the regular meetings, the young people of the high school assisting in the programs. Two inmates at the Milledgeville sanitarium were remembered at Christmas with small gifts. Homes and Garden Week was emphasized by a special meeting with a most excellent program. But the outstanding work of the club for the year was the completion of the improvements at the cemetery at a total expense of $81.10. Assuming one-half of the expense of installing a water system with drinking fountains in the schoolhouse, which amounted to $52.25; assisting to the extent of $15 in the repairs on the roof of the school building and the planting of 21 shrubs, and a George Washington memorial tree in the schoolyard. Also 125 bulbs, 162 trees and 1,770 shrubs were planted during the year. A total of $77.25 paid for improvements in and about the school building.

"The earth has been promised to the meek for their inheritance, but Mrs. Ottie Ridgeway, the historian, is willing that this report of work done during a decidedly 'off' year shall go down to posterity as worth-while accomplishment in which we are justified to rejoice.

Bowden Club Hears Constructive Subject.

Frances Liggett Wey and student aid foundation were the constructive subjects featured at Bowdon Community Club's May meeting held at the clubhouse. Mrs. H. M. Bird told of the life of Mrs. Wey in connection with this foundation, how the idea originated and the wonderful benefit it has been to the many girls using it as a means to get an education. Mrs. Wey strove to make the fund $50,000 and since her death the women who are carrying on are trying to make her wish come true.

Miss Pauline Morris rendered a piano solo, and Miss Lucile Johnson gave a piano solo. Mrs. Paul Morris presided during the program, and the president, Mrs. M. L. Johnson, was in the chair during the business session. Splendid reports were given by the treasurer by Mrs. H. M. Bird, who was chairman of the recent Georgia product dinner. The chairman urged members to pay their dues in areas and reminded that the next year fees are due soon. She appointed Mesdames R. K. Pitts, J. W. Adams and D. P. Holmes on the nominating committee for electing officers to report at the next meeting.

Rock gardens and pools inspired members of the Bowdon Garden Club with much creative vision in horticultural matters, at one of the most enjoyable meetings of the season held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. H. M. Bird with Mrs. Bird and Miss Lola Beck as hostesses.

Miss Willie Curtis Dye and Mrs. Jennings furnished the music for the occasion, and a motorcade was formed and some of the interesting pools and gardens in Bowdon were visited.

The garden club met May 11 at the home of Mrs. W. A. Stephenson, with the hostess and Mesdames R. K. Pitts and J. W. Barnes in charge of the program.

Important Features Mark May Meeting Of Tennille Club

Two outstanding features marked the May meeting of the Tennille Woman's Club held Friday at the clubhouse with Mesdames G. C. Daniel, Wilbur Smith and George Franklin as hostesses. The first was an impressive service honoring the memory of Dr. D. E. McMaster who for years was trustee of the club property and taking part in this program were Mesdames Roy Smith, W. C. Little, A. E. Gilmore, George Franklin, Wilbur Smith, A. S. Brown, and Miss Margarite Smith.

The second was the signal honor shown Mrs. R. F. Theis when she was made honorary president of the club for life, this action on the part of the members being in appreciation of the unparalleled work of Mrs. Theis, who as chairman of the building committee, has done more to raise funds towards the construction and upkeep of the handsome clubhouse than any one member. During the years since the building was started, not one meeting has passed without her reporting money raised, the sum total of which has been approximately $2,000, most of which was made from rummage sales, and the $8,000 building is clear of debt.

W. C. Little was made trustee of the club property to succeed the late Dr. McMaster. The club voted to keep open house at an early date, having as guests of honor the men who generously donated bonds to the club. The meeting featured the installation of officers, including Mrs. Roy Smith, president; Mrs. W. B. Smith, first vice president; Mrs. H. M. Franklin, second vice president; Mrs. Will Brantley, recording secretary; Mrs. F. T. Brock, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. G. Smith, treasurer; Mrs. A. E. Gilmore, registrar; Mrs. Wilbur Smith, librarian; Mrs. A. S. Brown, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Malone Heads Twin Cities Club.

Twin Cities Presidents' Club of Sandersville and Tennille held a meeting Thursday at the Colonades, home of Mrs. H. M. Franklin in Tennille with Mrs. W. H. Colgate and Mrs. George Franklin as co-hostesses. Mrs. J. J. Harris presided and a feature of the business was to hear the report of the nominating committee made by Mrs. N. M. Jordan, and the election of the following officers: Mrs. S. B. Malone, president; Mrs. C. W Crump, vice president; Miss Emmie Johnson, recording secretary; Mrs. T. C. Wylly, corresponding secretary; Mrs. N. J. Newsome, treasurer; Mrs. H. M. Franklin, reporter.

This club has taken as its maih objective work for the hospital and the report of Mrs. A. A. Rawlings, chairman, showed sufficient funds to purchase a fracture bed to be used for charity patients. Miss Mae Jones, superintendent of the hospital, was a guest of the club and she was presented with the check to be used for this purpose.

Mrs. W. B. Smith and Mrs. H. M. Franklin gave reports from the state convention. Plans were discussed for the annual party which is quite a social event given in honor of the new presidents of the various organizations asked to join this club. The party will be held this year in the memory garden of Mrs. J. J. Harris at her home in Sandersville.

Alpharetta Club.

May meeting of the Alpharetta Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. R. D. Manning with Miss Deryl Manning as co-hostess and Mrs. J. P. Brooke presiding. At the suggestion of Mrs. Brooke, Cleanup Week was planned and adopted by the club. Mrs. R. A. Walters reported on work being done at the town cemetery.

Mrs. L. E. Jones had charge of the program, presenting Mrs. Will Jones in "The Value of Gardening for Children;" Mrs. Glenn Nesbit reading "Marigolds" and Mrs. Emmerson Maddox in a piano solo. Miss Woods, of the home economics department of Fulton county, gave an interesting talk on "Gardens and Club Work."

Comer Club Honors Mrs. J. W. Gholston At May Meeting

A meeting of outstanding importance and social interest was that of Comer Woman's Club on May 11, when members joined in honoring mothers of club members and giving due honor to a distinguished member, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, recently elected president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. At the home of Mrs. R. T. Eberhardt, fragrant with a wealth of blossoms, the meeting was held. with Mesdames J. D. Thompson, S. M. Simmons, L. F. McConnell and W. C. Groves being co-hostesses.

Mrs. C. S. Rome, president, presided and the meeting opened with a welcome tribute to mothers, after which Mrs. M. T. Payne gave "A Mother's Prayer for Her Daughter." With Miss Eleanor Thompson at the piano, music was given as Mrs. J. D. Thompson brought in the following visiting mothers: Mesdames W. P. Rome, C. W. Power, A. W. Chandler, Fannie Cooper and T. H. Sanders. Mrs. R. T. Eberhardt, program chairman read the mothers' chapter in the Bible, 31st chapter Proverbs; solo, "Old Irish Mother of Mine," was rendered by Mrs. J. W. Gholston, piano accompaniment being played by Mrs. C. L. Adair. Welcome to mothers by Mrs. J. D. Thompson, "Somebody's Mother," by Mrs. G. W. Whitehead; group of songs by Mrs. Gholston, and concluding the theme of Mothers' Day, Junior Bryant entered with a basket of nosegays, presenting one to each mother, while club members gave "A Toast to Mothers."

Mrs. Rome, in behalf of club, presented Mrs. Gholston with an exquisite vase of roses and delphiniums as a token of love from her club. The reports of public welfare and civic committees were of vital interest as splendid work has been rendered throughout the storm area in our country. Club voted to sponsor a town-wide cleanup on May 18 with the town council co-operating. Mrs. C. B. Ayers, chairman of nominating committee, presented the following officers, all of whom were unanimously elected: President, Mrs. J. D. Thompson; first vice president, Mrs. H. J. Whitehead; second vice president, Mrs. S. J. Carmichael; treasurer, Mrs. D. W. Porterfield; parliamentarian, Mrs. M. T. Payne; historian, Mrs. A. M. Wilkins, and chaplain, Mrs. R. T. Eberhardt.

Mrs. J. W. Gholston expressed appreciation to officers for their acceptance of the responsibilities of office and in behalf of the garden division Mrs. Ayers presented Mrs. Gholston, Mrs. Rome, retiring president, and Mrs. Thompson, new president, with old-fashioned nosegays, assuring them that the fragrant blossoms she presented were not half so beautiful as the blossoms in her heart placed there by the many tokens from these lovely women who have given so much of themselves in club work.

Mrs. Schley Heads Rockmart Club.

April meeting of Rockmart Womans' Club was held at the clubhouse with Mrs. B. T. McGarity and Mrs. D. P. Schley as hostesses. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. G. W. Jordan. Minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. J. L. Marshall, acting secretary for Mrs. Forest Hutchings. Officers installed were: Mrs. D. P. Schley, president; Miss Mabel Ballenger, vice president; Miss Nell Cochran, recording secretary; Miss Irma Hardage, treasurer; Mrs. J. Claud Simpson, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. G. W. Jordan gave the president's report with Mrs. D. P. Schley in the chair. Mrs. Schley gave the vice president's, Mrs. Howard Lane, the treasurer's; Mrs. S. J. Nichols, the corresponding secretary's; Mrs. R. C. Kytle, the grounds, and Mrs. J. L. Marshall the house.

Mrs. S. O. Jones, Miss Elma Jones, Miss Nell Cochran, Mrs. Tom Webber and Mrs. A. B. Baker were welcomed as new members. Miss Irma Hardage, chairman of public welfare, had charge of the program which featured; reading, Elaine Collins; piano solo, Mrs. Floyd; address by Rev. G. Barrett.

Miss Irma Hardage, Mesdames D. P. Schley and Albert Donnaud attended the seventh district meeting of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs held in Austell and represented Rockmart club.

Lyons Woman's Club.

Lyon's Woman's Club of Lyons held its May meeting at the city hall with Mrs. DeSaussure Gray, the president, presiding. The committee on finance and building reported donations of 12,000 brick, $10 in money and an electrical donation to be used in the clubhouse now under construction. Committee on public welfare reported co-operation with the Red Cross in the distribution of flour.

Mrs. Edwin Thomas was appointed to serve as librarian during the summer, and Tuesday was selected as the day for exchange of books. Mrs. DeSaussure Gray, in behalf of the club, expressed thanks to Miss Dorothy Banks for her efficient and faithful services as teacher of our English course; the club indorsing with rising vote.

Mrs. Carl Rogers voiced the club's thanks to Mrs. DeSaussure Gray, retiring president, for her untiring and most efficient services rendered during the past year. This was also endorsed by rising vote, after which Mrs. G. C. Hussey, president for the ensuing year, took the chair. Mrs. Hussey called Mrs. Ellis Pope, first vice president, to the chair while she gave a most inspiring report of her trip to Columbus as representative from Lyons to the annual Federation of Woman's Clubs.

The following program was rendered with the theme of Mother's Day carried throughout: "Mother Machree," piano solo, by Mrs. J. P. McNatt; "The Old-Fashioned Mother," by Mrs. E. J. Giles; "Danny Boy," "Love," vocal solo, by Lamar Barefoot; "Sleep On," vocal solo, by Louise Youmans; "That Wonderful Mother of Mine," "Arcadia," vocal solo, by Miss Scott; "Prelude," Rachmaninoff, by Virginia Gray.

Important Notice.

According to custom the Student Aid committee will hold no meeting after June 4 until late August. No applications will be considered during the summer as the books will be closed except for repayment.

Mrs. Gholston Greets Clubwomen In Her Official Message Today

Beloved Club Members of Georgia Federation, Honored Hosts and Friends of Columbus: It is with a meek and humble spirit that I stand before you and gratefully acknowledge the great honor and tribute that you have paid me today.

I recognize the important trust and sacred responsibility that the office of president of Georgia Federation carries with it. With dignity and grace it has been worn as a coronet by my distinguished predecessors, whose worthiness shall ever be to me shining examples of the fine womanhood of Georgia. However much I shall seek to emulate the virtues and achievements of our excellent Mrs. Fitzpatrick, our brilliant Mrs. Hays, our precious Mrs. Brantley, our capable Mrs. Brenner, and our faithful Mrs. Sanford, I would remind you that the Giver of all good gifts does not give to all alike. I do not claim any of the above requisites—I can be only myself, who has ever striven to do as best I could the task you set before me.

But I am aware of the true loyalty and splendid co-operation, so necessary to complete team work in any organization, which exists within our ranks. My faith in that, my faith in you, every member of Georgia Federation, sustain me and bid me dedicate to you my best efforts for the ensuing two years. I entreat your love and your prayers, as never before, that together we may face the future and hold aloft the fair name and high purpose of Georgia Federation.

To the gracious and hospitable friends of Columbus, who have endeared themselves, through their innumerable courtesies to each of us, I would add, that you and your fair city will occupy a prominent page in my "Life's Book of Beautiful Memories."

With this loving tribute to my friends her and elsewhere I close:

"It is my joy in life to find
At every turning of the road,
The strong arm of a comrade kind
To help me onward with my load.

"And since I have no gold to give,
And love alone must make amends
My only prayer is, while I live,
God make me worthy of my friends."

MRS. J. W. GHOLSTON,
Of Comer, President of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Hon. Henry T. McIntosh To Address Tallulah High School Graduates May 27

Hon. Henry T. McIntosh, editor of the Albany Herald, will be commencement speaker at the Tallulah Falls High school on the evening of Friday, May 27, when 15 girls and two boys will receive diplomas from the high school department of the school. The exercises will be held in the Isma Dooly auditorium and will assemble many patrons and friends of the school as well as a number of out-of-town guests who will come up for the occasion. Rev. Edward A. Daniel will give the invocation. Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees, will receive the graduates from the faculty and the diplomas will be presented to the high school graduates by Mrs. James E. Hickey, of Atlanta, who is the trustee sponsor for the class of 1931-1932.

The 15 girls of the senior class will wear dresses of white cotton voile made by themselves and candidates for graduation are: Bernice Adams, Clarkesville; Mary Corn, Demorest; Edith Edmonds, Tallulah Falls; Evelyn Gibson, Franklin, N. C.; Mary Glen, Sautee; Fred Gragg, Clarkesville; Ethel Hollyfield, Tiger; Fannie Hollyfield, Tiger; Mildred Lanier, Americus; Jessie Lawrence, Clarkesville; Marjorie McGee, Tallulah Falls; Bonnie Minish, Nacoochee; Fannie Rogers, Clayton; Enid Waldroop, Tallulah Falls; Naomi Wall, Cuthbert; Frank White, Tallulah Falls; Beulah Whitworth, Clarkesville. Georgia Division U. D. C. Functions In Harmonious and Enthusiastic Way

BY MRS. L. W. GREENE,
Of Sycamore, U. D. C. Editor.

If the editor has any comments to make this good day, they must indeed be gathered from dreams or hearsay—through her keenest mental survey, and she has employed all her faculties, seeking to ascertain what has minimized the erstwhile importance of the various departmental interests to that extent, that not an officer or chairman in all the realms of the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, have come forward with a desire or a request to be stressed in this issue of the official page. Possibly, it is that every loyal daughter must have achieved her ends, and consequently is enjoying hours of leisure and freedom from all semblance of wishful anxiety—just resting, as it were, on her oars. Whatever the true reason, the fact remains that it is a wise and understanding chairman who idealizes her work as a golden adventure, and yet realizes its imperious demands and especially inexplicable tendencies to lag and grow lifeless, when her interests go vacationing—that is the acid test.

At this time, admittedly, every activity of the U. D. C. is going forward in a brave, beautiful and enthusiastic way; every unit functioning and every vital interest keeping step, maintaining essentially perfect dependableness, by way of all the year-around cooperation. Mrs. I. Bashinski, president, has been showered with honors befitting her rank; she was Memorial Day speaker, in as many places as she could accept, and was asked to the unveiling of a memorial to General Albert Sidney Johnson, at Old Court House Lot, Ky. Mesdames J. J. Harris and Oscar McKenzie, past presidents, still give of themselves in time and devotion to the great cause—both accepting invitations as Memorial Day orators.

The results of the essay contest speaks volumes for the bountiful energy entailed and points quite flatteringly toward Mrs. Joseph Vason, chairman, and her committee. The U. D. C. song, written by Mrs. H. M. Franklin, removed the last handicap in reaching school-age hearts. Mrs. Julian Lane's committee report a vast number of graves of veterans marked and the Confederate Home, under the care of Dr. Patton, fairly glistening with spic and spanness—a prideful six months in U. D. C. work when one pauses for appraisal.

Less than a dozen Confederate veterans were present at the memorial exercises held in Marietta, writes Mrs. Mattie C. Lyon, president of the Kennesaw Chapter, U. D. C., but all honor was shown to the living and honored dead. The places of business closed; the Marietta Boy Scouts and Company 1, Marietta national guards, headed a procession of hundreds of school children and marched to the cemetery where all Confederate graves were decorated and a salute was fired over the graves and taps sounded. Rev. George F. Brown, pastor of the First Baptist church of Marietta, was orator, and was introduced by Judge W. H. Hawkins.

Woodland Chapter, U. D. C., was presided over by the president, Mrs. J. E. Peeler, and 28 members were present at the recent meeting. The chapter voted to contribute to the Raines memorial fund, and the leader of the Children of the Confederacy reported three new members, and a letter was read from Mrs. T. W. Read. During the program which followed Miss Mattie Woodall discussed the fight between the Merrimac and Monitor; Miss Lucy Clark spoke on "The Old Trail to Dixie," and Mrs. James F. Woodall played a beautiful piano solo. Memorial Day was also appripriately observed, the chapter sponsoring a special program in the Woodland school auditorium. Rev. W. E. McTier delivered a brilliant address. Other features of the program were a song, "Sleep, My Beloved," Mrs. R. C. Fryer Jr.; piano duet, Mrs. James F. Woodall and Miss Annie Clark Smith, and a violin solo was given by Mrs. James F. Woodall; reading, Miss Frances King. Prizes were awarded to Margaret Woodall and Frances King, students of Woodland High school, for best essays on the life of General John B. Gordon. Rev. Womble, pastor of Woodland and Talbotton Baptist churches, gave the invocation and benediction.

The program arranged by Mrs. E. T. Owens for the recent meeting of the Newnan Chapter, U. D. C., had for its inspiration "Our Confederate Navy," and taking part were Mesdames H. H. Murray, W. B. Barr and Miss Helen Long. Mesdames Cecil Hamilton and Frank Arnell sang "Nellie Gray," accompanied by Mrs. Bryan Fuller. The nominating committee, Mesdames T. J. Jones, W. A. Steed, J. R. McCalla, T. E. Patterson, W. E. Kennard, will choose the new officers, whose terms begin in May. Mesdames P. H. Drake, G. M. Reynolds, T. W. Sewell, Ed Drake, A. N. Brittain, C. A. Merck and Miss Mary Goodrum were hostesses for the meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. Drake, and which was attractively decorated with purple lilacs, iris and tulips.

Memorial exercises, under the direction of the chapter, with Robert L. Austin as master of ceremonies, featured the following program: Selections, Sunshine Makers orchestra, directed by Professor O. W. Taff; U. D. C. state song, Mrs. H. M. Franklin, schools; invocation, Rev. Ronald C. Young; song, "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," Mrs. Elmer Lovern; reading, "Music in Camp," Miss Sara Bryant; song, "Tenting Tonight," Charles Floyd; introduction of speaker, Walter Sanders; address, Ellis Arnall; music, orchestra; benediction, Rev. F. D. King.

May meeting of the Turner County Chapter, U. D. C., was the guest of Mrs. Nora Lawrence Smith, at her home in Ashburn, with Mrs. John W. Long, the president, presiding. A neat sum was realized on Tag Day. Mrs. J. C. Means gave an interesting report of Memorial Day. One veteran and one widow of a Confederate veteran have died recently, and the chapter furnished flowers for the funerals. The following officers were elected to serve for another year: Mrs. John W. Long, president; Mrs. J. S. Shingler, first vice president; Mrs. L. W. Greene, second vice president; Mrs. J. C. Means, recording secretary; Mrs. C. V. Perry, corresponding secretary; Miss Laura Sue Hawkins, historian; Mrs. Alex Story, registrar; Mrs. R. L. Greene, treasurer; Mesdames Nora Lawrence Smith and J. C. Means, publicity; Mrs. K. P. Baker, parliamentarian; Mrs. J. B. Boyd, chaplain; Miss Mary Julia Stubbs, scrapbook; Mrs. J. A. Comer, music. The chapter will not meet through the summer.

May meeting of the Phil Cook chapter, U. D. C., of Montezuma, was held at the clubhouse, the president, Mrs. F. M. Mullino, presiding. After business features usual to all meetings, Mrs. J. A. Happ made a report on the recent John B. Gordon essay contest held in the schools. An interesting program, arranged by Mrs. Herbert Brannan included piano solos by Misses Frances Neal and Nanita Guerry, and a sketch on Confederate reminiscences in the Hunt family by Mrs. Jere Moore. Plans were completed for a benefit party for the Stratford Memorial foundation, which will be given at an early date at Sunset lodge, by Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, general chairman of the foundation. A committee composed of Miss Annie May Gibson and Mesdames Leon Shumate and D. W. Easterlin served tea and sandwiches at the conclusion of the program.

Mesdames T. W. Reed and Janie A. McCrary were hostesses to Laura Rutherford chapter, U. D. C., at the home of Mrs. Reed in Athens, for the May meeting. Reports were given by different committees covering spring activities that were of interest especially of the large reception and Memorial Day exercises. Memorial exercises were held in the boy's auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. building. The address was made by Dr. W. H. Wrighton, professor of philosophy, University of Georgia. A lovely dinner was given by the chapter at the Y. M. C. A. building in honor of the veterans living in Clarke county. The report of the chapter treasurer, Mrs. Janie A. McCrary, showed that all star chapter requirements had been met, all obligations paid and a neat sum was left in the treasury. Thanks were extended to Mrs. Cobb Lambkin for her gracious hospitality in the use of her home on the occasion of the chapter reception in March. Mrs. Frank D. Bell, of Charleston, S. C., and Miss Ernestine Head, of Toccoa, were reported as new members.

Mrs. J. M. Rogers, chairman of nominating committee, made a report, recommending that all officers who had served during the past year be re-elected, which was adopted. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. T. W. Reed; first vice president, Mrs. George A. Thomas; second vice president, Mrs. Paul Hadaway; recording secretary, Mrs. Willie Lou Whitehead; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Janie A. McCrary; treasurer, Mrs. R. L. Patterson; registrar, Mrs. R. H. Bickerstaff, and historian, Mrs. George S. Mayne.

A bronze tablet marking location of Major General Howell Cobb's headquarters as commander of the Georgia reserves during the latter part of the War Between the States, was unveiled by the Sidney Lanier chapter, U. D. C., on Mulberry street, Macon. The memorial bears the following inscription: "Headquarters Major General Cobb, commander reserve forces of Georgia (all of the state militia). President provisional congress (the body that formed the Confederate States of America). Member of Confederate congress. Speaker of the house of representative (United States congress). Secretary of the treasury of the United States, 1857-1860. Erected by Sidney Lanier chapter, U. D. C., May 4, 1932." Honorable John T. Boifeullet, of Macon and Atlanta, lauded this southerner as a patriot, orator and statesman and a man of flawless character; paying a glowing tribute to the career of Major General Cobb as he addressed the chapter and guests at a meeting in the Lanier hotel preceding the unveiling of the tablet, by little Howell Cobb Jr., of Albany, Howell Cobb and Miss Mary Lamar Irwin, both of Athens. Miss Carolina Patterson, state historian, U. D. C., also a relative of General Cobb, presented the grandchildren present. Mrs. Tinsley Rucker, daughter of General Cobb, was regretfully absent. Other descendants attending were: Mrs. Nathaniel Stewart, Americus; George C. Cobb, United States consul to Newfoundland; Mrs. Howard Bucknell, wife of the secretary of the American legation of the Republic of Panama; Mr. and Mrs. Howell Cobb and Howell Jr., of Albany; Howell Cobb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Cobb, of Athens; Mrs. W. Elliott Dunwoody Jr., Macon. Howell Cobb Erwin and Mrs. Erwin, Mrs. John G. Harrison, president of the chapter presided at the exercises. This makes the third memorial erected in tribute to heroes of the south.

Roberta Harris Wells U. D. C., of Watkinsville, met for the May meeting at the home of Mrs. H. T. Hodges. The following new officers were elected: Mrs. W. R. Johnson, president; Miss Mattie Mullikin, vice president; Mrs. R. H. Downs, secretary; Mrs. A. C. Camp, treasurer; Mrs. Roy Fowler, registrar; Mrs. C. B. McRee, recorder of crosses; Mrs. Roy Crowley, historian; Mrs. H. T. Hodges, director, C. of C. Memorial Day was observed and dinner served to veterans and widows. Seven prizes were given for the essays in the contest on John B. Gordon. Eighty-seven essays were written.

Miss Elizabeth Fort Will Wed J. H. Jenkins in Columbus May 19

Pictured above is a charming likeness of Miss Elizabeth Winifred Fort, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Hicks Fort, of Columbus, whose engagement is announced today by her parents to James Horace Jenkins, of Columbus. The wedding will be quietly solemnized Thursday, May 19, at St. Luke's Methodist church in Columbus.

BY LATIMER WATSON.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 14.—Of outstanding interest throughout Georgia is the announcement in today's papers of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Elizabeth Fort and James Horace Jenkins, the wedding to take place Thursday at 10 o'clock in the morning at the St. Luke Methodist church.

Miss Fort is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Hicks Fort, and is a popular and talented member of the younger social set. After graduating from the Columbus High school she attended Wesleyan College and conservatory of music, receiving diplomas from both schools at the same time. She was awarded the scholarship in music on her graduation and returned to Wesleyan. Since her graduation Miss Fort, who is a finished musician, has been organist at the St. Luke Methodist church.

The bride-elect is a young woman of personal charm and beauty. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and of the Orpheus Club. Miss Fort is identified with families prominent in Georgia and Alabama. Her father, T. Hicks Fort, is recognized as one of the leading criminal lawyers in Georgia, and is prominent in politics throughout the state. He managed Governor Hardman's campaign and served as a member of his staff. His parents were Elizabeth Hicks Fort and William Fort, of Tuskegee, Ala., originally from South Carolina. On her maternal side the bride-elect is the granddaughter of Frances Williams and Jacob A. Albright, of Alabama. Mr. Albright was a well known educator serving as superintendent of schools in Lee county. At the time of his death he was a member of the Alabama legislature.

Mr. Jenkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Jenkins, whose families are identified with the history of Muscogee county. On his paternal side he is the grandson of Mrs. Horace Jenkins and the late Mr. Jenkins, a prominent planter. His maternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, of Upatoie, Muscogee county. Mr. Jackson, well known throughout the state, was a member of the legislature from Muscogee county. He is a nephew of Dr. Miguel Jackson and Mrs. A. B. Binns.

Mr. Jenkins is a graduate of Emory University where he was a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and of the Glee Club having accompanied the club to Europe. He is now connected with the United Oil Company, in Columbus.

The wedding of Miss Fort and Mr. Jenkins will be quietly solemnized and the Rev. Pearce Harris, pastor of the church, will officiate in the presence of the families and a few friends. Mrs. Edward Swift Jr. and Mrs. Chester Stephenson will render a program of nuptial music preceding the wedding. There will be no attendants.

Immediately following the wedding Mr. Jenkins and his bride will leave for a wedding trip and on their return will take possession of their new home.

Pet Parade Planned At Egleston Hospital For May 28

The annual pet parade to be staged Saturday, May 28, on the grounds of the Egleston Memorial Hospital for Children is creating great interest among all lovers of animals. The parade will begin at 2 o'clock and will be led by a large white horse 35 years old, the property of Mrs. James R. Bachman, who will be a contestant for the largest and oldest animal. "Rosie," the elephant owned by Asa G. Candler has been entered by Miss Helen Candler for the prize for the largest animal. Prizes will be awarded to the fattest animal, the thinnest, the largest, the smallest, the prettiest, the smartest, the most unique pet, the best looking animal rescued from the streets and given a home, the youngest animal and the oldest animal.

The stunt class will follow the parade and will occasion great interest. Trained dogs from a real circus will take part in this act, also two trained bears owned by Tom Coggins and Stumpy Thomason. A carnival air will be added by several side shows; among them will be Foster Fitzsimmons with his Punch and Judy show; a "Rainbow Trail," and Mrs. J. O. King as the "Old Woman in the Shoe," presiding over a grab bag, real clowns as spellers, Junior League girls selling balloons and soft drinks, a "Krazy House," ponies to ride and many other attractive features.

Admission will be 25 cents for grown people and 10 cents for children and the parade is sponsored by the board of the hospital, of which Mrs. Frank Holland is president, assisted by Mrs. Stacy E. Hill and Miss Yoland Gwin in charge of entries and the program.

Georgia W.C.T.U. Will Unveil Bronze Tablets in Atlanta June 19

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard, of Macon, Editor.

Sunday, June 19, will be a red letter day in the calendar of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the date selected to unveil the two bronze tablets at the State W. C. T. U. headquarters, 1436 North Highland avenue, N. E., in Atlanta. These tablets contain the names of those who made possible the headquarters. On one tablet are the names of those who contributed $500 each to the endowment fund and are known as founders; the other tablet contains the names of those contributing $100 each and they are known as builders.

The headquarters, a handsome brick home in spacious grounds, valued at $45,000, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McPherson, could not be accepted by the W. C. T. U. until it had raised a cash maintenance fund of $15,000, the interest of which pays for the upkeep. This maintenance or endowment fund was contributed under the inspiration and leadership of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, financial secretary. Honoring the donors of that fund was her idea, and she will help plan the unveiling ceremonies. The program will be announced later.

The W. C. T. U. has furnished the home throughout and made improvements on the property. It has become a force for righteousness, and a necessity to the enlarged activities of the organization. Thousands of pages of literature on the many departments of W. C. T. U. endeavoring for "the triumph of Christ's Golden Rule in custom and in law" go from its office each week, and posters, books, badges, songs and all manner of W. C. T. U. supplies. Mrs. Mary Scott Russell is the official headquarters hostess and an efficient, charming, ideal hostess she is. Miss Ruby Rivers, trained in office work and in W. C. T. U. methods, is the headquarters secretary, and keeps things humming filling orders from all parts of the state.

It is expected that great numbers from out of Atlanta as well as local members and friends will attend the unveiling June 19.

Alcoholic Beverages.

Those who write against prohibition never refer to the reason for its enactment little by little until the benign 18th amendment was incorporated in the constitution of the United States. It was because intoxicating beverages, of whatever name, contain alcohol, and alcohol is a poison—a cumulative poison—a poison which creates a craving for itself—a habit-forming drug. Those who use it underestimate its strength and overestimate their own strength, therefore mothers and ministers and others who love humanity and would save childhood from harm worked through years for its outlawry. Moral suasion had been fully tried. Legal suasion was necessary, as in the case of other evils. Prohibition has never been anything but a blessing; its violation causes evils, just as the violation of the Ten Commandments causes evils and suffering. God has never repealed the Ten Commandments.

An advertisement says, "Alcohol will remove stains from summer clothes." To which one who knows, and all who lived in saloon days know, replied: "Yes, it will also remove the summer clothes, the winter clothes, the spring clothes, and the fall clothes, not only from the back of the man who drinks it, but from his wife and children as well. Alcohol will remove furniture from the home, rugs from the floor, food from the cupboard, lining from the stomach, kidneys from the back, liver from the side, hair from the head, and sight from the eyes. Alcohol will remove a good reputation, a man's business, a man's friends, a happy look from children's faces, a prosperous man to a pauper's grave, a man from respectable society to the penitentiary, a man from the highway to heaven to the road to hell, and will make a wildcat out of an otherwise inoffensive citizen. As a remover of things, alcohol has no equal."

Meets in Fitzgerald.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, Marietta, state W. C. T. U. president, was the speaker at the east section of the third district meeting in Fitzgerald Thursday. Her subject was "Open Doors of the W. C. T. U." and was based on the Bible text, "I know thy works; behold, I have set before thee an open door and no man can shut it; for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name." Her address was marked by enthusiastic optimism as she listed the open doors of W. C. T. U. endeavor "which no man can shut."

Judge A. J. McDonald, of the superior court, made a talk in which he answered some of the arguments against prohibition. "Some people claim they want the prohibition law repealed because it is not perfectly enforced." He asked, "What law is perfectly enforced? There have been 4,000,000 cases of violation of the narcotics law, 34 per cent of criminals were violators of that law, but there is no agitation for its modification or repeal," he said. Referring to the harm resulting from intoxicating drink on youth, he said, "If some fellow came into a community selling a concoction that would injure or kill horses, cows or hogs, as intoxicating liquor does our youth, such a one would be run out of the community, as he should be. Our people should be protected from those who would injure individuals."

More than 100 were in attendance. Delegations were present from Abbeville, Ashburn, Eastman, Fitzgerald, Chauncey and Ocilla, and visitors from Macon, New Jersey and Florida. Quarterly reports showed progress along all lines except finances. When Mrs. August Burghard, of Macon, was introduced as state editor, she brought greetings from the 500 members of the Macon organization, among them the 89 new, pledged, paid members received this year.

Miss Mary Hodges, of Hawkinsville, who joined the W. C. T. U. when it was organized in Georgia 49 years ago, who is in her 87th year, was introduced. She told of hearing Frances Willard. Miss Hodges was presented with flowers and given the white ribbon cheer. Mrs. M. M. Stevens brought greetings and Mrs. Alice Harrel, of Eastman, made the response. Mrs. J. H. Allen, state director of the evangelistic department, made a splendid talk on her work. Mrs. W. M. Mott, state evangelist, led the noontide devotions, a discussion of the trees of the Bible and of history and lessons learned from them. Mrs. Farrand Osborne, of New Jersey, sang Joyce Kilmer's song, "Trees."

James Hale sang two solos, accompanied by Miss Corinne Ellis. Donald Massey played a saxophone solo, accompanied by Mrs. Mott. A quartet was also enjoyed, composed of Mrs. Frank Ward, Mrs. Marion Massee, Mrs. James Evans and Mrs. Holtezendorf. Rev. Mr. Hamilton, of the Northern Methodist church, led the devotionals. Other pastors present were Rev. J. H. Allen, pastor of the M. E. church, South, in whose church the meeting was held; Rev. W. H. Mott, of the Fitzgerald Christian church; Rev. W. H. Budd, of Hawkinsville; Rev. Mr. Kern, of the Baptist church, and Rev. W. C. Bryant, of Abbeville.

The seventh W. C. T. U. organized within a month by Mrs. Florence E. Atkins was at Jesup. The officers are Mrs. D. M. Clark, president; Mrs. H. L. Sease, secretary; Mrs. E. J. Nix, treasurer. Active charter members, 12; honorary members (men), 9.

Stop, Look and Listen.

A lover of young people asks boys and girls, "Does it mean anything to you that the supreme court of the United States upholds prohibition; that the public schools, your teachers, the educators, passed a resolution for the 18th amendment at the last national meeting; that the Parent-Teacher Association passed dry resolutions; that the National Federation of Women's Clubs declared itself dry; that the grange 800,000 farmers are overwhelmingly dry; that the church—you could not live safely six months in a city or community which banished churches—is firm as a rock for prohibition; that the young people's societies of Christian Endeavor, Epworth Leagues and B. Y. P. U. are pledging for prohibition; that the thousands of W. C. T. U. women stand Gibraltar-like for prohibition; that Allied Youth are "on the march" for prohibition; that millions of Christian people, countless law-abiding citizens believe in the 18th amendment? Don't be fooled; the country isn't going wet!"

Macon Plays Host to Legion Auxiliary Convention on June 23, 24 and 25

By Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert, Publicity Director for Georgia Department.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 14.—Plans are now being formulated for a brilliant convention of the Georgia Legion Auxiliary to be held in Macon June 23, 24 and 25. General Walter A. Harris is serving as chairman of the general convention committee, and announces that the program will provide pleasure and profit to all who attend. Besides the business sessions, there will be barbecues, dinners, dances and teas. The Macon auxiliary unit is planning attractive features and one of these will be a tea honoring the gold star mothers of Georgia. All units are invited to have their gold star mothers present and in the receiving line. A record-breaking attendance of Legionnaires and auxiliary members is expected to spend these three days in the hospitable convention city, Macon. Commander Quimby Melton, of Griffin, will preside over the sessions of the Georgia Legion, and Mrs. J. M. Toomey, of Atlanta, will conduct the convention of the Georgia auxiliary.

Poppy Day, May 28.

Twenty-six units in Georgia that did not observe November 11 as Poppy Day are urged to plan for a poppy sale on May 28, a day that will be observed thus in many states of the Union. Rehabilitation and child welfare work will receive the funds raised from the sale. There is a crying need for this work in every unit during these distressing days and the poppy sale will make possible a large amount of needed relief work. The state chairman of poppy sales, Mrs. Roy Cooper, 2815 Lombardy court, Augusta, Ga., will gladly furnish every unit with information and suggestions concerning plans for Poppy Day.

Memories and Memorials.

"Memories and Memorials" was the subject of the splendid program arranged for the Milledgeville unit by Mrs. Russell Bone, chairman of the committee on memorials, at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. C. G. Cox with Mrs. George McWhorter and Mrs. C. L. Moran as co-hostesses. Mrs. Stewart Wooten, president, presided at a short business meeting and Mrs. Bone introduced the program. Mrs. Howard Bert Ennis, French war bride, sang the "Marseillaise" in her native tongue and told of how the poppies grow wild in France. She also read two very beautiful poems on the poppy. Mrs. C. B. McCullar spoke on "Looking Backward With Tenderness and Forward With Courage." Mrs. R. E. Long sang two war songs. After the program, a social hour was enjoyed.

Resume of Cordele Unit Achievements.

The Cordele Dispatch of recent date carried an excellent story prepared by Mrs. O. A. Willocks, chairman of community service in the Cordele unit, reviewing the work of the year. The unit has proven itself a valuable asset to the life of the community, not only carrying its own projects to a successful conclusion but also co-operating with other organizations in all efforts toward civic betterment. Through the penny box funds were raised to furnish 40 needy children with food, clothing, shoes, books and fuel. Entire families in distress were aided. Funds for community service were also made by the sale of Christmas boxes and pencils. Through a local firm, the unit developed an advertising scheme which has realized a good monthly income. The unit has been mindful of its post, giving the proceeds of suppers and bridge parties to the post to aid in the completion of the new Legion clubhouse. A bicentennial program was rendered by the unit and a cherry laurel tree was planted on the grounds of the clubhouse.

Columbus Unit Presents Fidac Program.

One of the most colorful programs ever given in Columbus was the Fidac program on Portugal presented by the local Fidac chairman, Mrs. Joe Walters, assisted by Mrs. R. L. Buxton. Portugal's colorful beauty was brought out by the profusion of vari-colored flowers decorating the Woman's Club house for the unit meeting, and by the interesting collection of posters depicting the scenes and natives of Portugal. The attractive Fidac scrapbook was displayed. State Fidac chairman, Miss Mattie Kate Bagley, made a comprehensive talk on Fidac and its auxiliary, the history, purposes and accomplishments of these two great international organizations. Mrs. Walters read with color and expression her original "Journeys Into Portugal." Starting at the border line of Spain, her hearers were carried in delightful imagination from city to city until Lisbon was reached. One could almost see the masses of flowers, sidewalks of colored tiles, gay homes of plaster and porcelain, fountains and castles centuries old.

Attired in Grecian robes with rainbow effects, Misses Marjorie Berry and Frances Dexter rendered "The Dance of Peace," and Miss Francine Joy, in a native costume, gave the Portuguese dance. Dressed in peasant costume, Miss Araminta Harper recited a "Prayer From a Very Young Heart." Mrs. J. O. Methvin, accompanied by Mrs. Garnett Shackelford Jr., sang the Portuguese national anthem, and presented the manuscript to the unit for the scrapbook. Refreshments simulating the red wines, peasant bread, fruits and nuts of Portugal were served. The tea table was centered by a tray of fruits beautifully arranged by a local fruiterer, a native of Europe. There was a large attendance of members and friends; visitors from a distance were Mrs. Samuels, from the Indiana auxiliary; Mrs. Aingell, of Oklahoma; Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Degenaan, from the New York state auxiliary.

The business session was presided over by Mrs. H. F. Gaffney. After the salute to the flag and the preamble, led by Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert, Mrs. Henry Hunter reported that the unit had secured 26 new members for the post. Mrs. C. H. Tigner, memorial chairman, reported that the Legion would mark all graves of World War veterans, that baskets of flowers were placed in the Legion plot on May 26, and that cards and flowers were sent to the Gold Star Mothers on Mother's Day. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. J. R. Youmans; first vice president, Mrs. Henry Hunter Jr.; second vice president, Mrs. Walter Howard; third vice president, Mrs. George McKinney; treasurer, Mrs. Owen McNulty; recording secretary, Mrs. B. F. Spivey; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Roy Christie; chaplain, Mrs. Rufus Jones Jr.; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. D. A. Striffler; historian, Miss Lucy May George; members of the executive board, Mrs. H. F. Gaffney, Miss Mattie Kate Bagley and Mrs. Frank David.

Valdosta Unit Addressed by Miss Rowena Ward.

At the last meeting of the unit in Valdosta, the outstanding feature of the program was an address on child welfare by Mrs. Rowena Ward, renowned for her ability and achievements in this work. Mrs. T. W. Oliver presented Mrs. Ward, who spoke feelingly of our duty in these days of stress to remember always that the greatest aim of charity is to give help in such a way that we strengthen and build, and not merely lift. The warning during these days of many crushed spirits was very timely and the committee from Valdosta unit are striving to keep this ideal before them.

As usual, this unit has had a very active spring season. A large benefit party of recent date netted a good sum for their work. Three new members have enrolled, Mesdames R. J. Elliot, W. B. Barnum and R. P. Carver. The auxiliary gave valuable aid to the legion post in staging the "Legion Follies" at the Ritz theater. A delightful occasion was the dinner at which the auxiliary board entertained the post board. Ideas and suggestions were exchanged, and it was voted that this be made an annual affair, to increase the pleasure and effectiveness of the work of both organizations.

April 6 has been designated as the day for annual services for the World War dead, and heads of women's civic and patriotic clubs of Valdosta will be guests at the May meeting of the unit. Mrs. A. B. Clyatt is president of this active unit and Mrs. Preston Brooks is the publicity chairman.

Trophies at State Convention.

In the last bulletin from state headquarters, Mrs. Toomey issues the following information concerning some of the trophies to be awarded at the state convention in Macon in June.

Joe Carr Trophy—This trophy is to be awarded to the unit doing the greatest amount of good for its post during the year. This contest will be judged at the department convention, and a separate report of this work should be handed to Mr. Carr before 6 p. m. the first day of the convention.

Membership Trophies—These will be awarded along the same lines governing the awarding last year. General excellence trophy will likewise be awarded under last year's rules. Historical trophies will be awarded. Membership, general excellence and historical trophies will be awarded under the same rules as those of last year.

Publicity for Georgia.

National A. L. A. Bulletin of May carries a story of the conferences held in several states. The conference held in Georgia is featured, with speakers and their subjects given. Two photographs appear, one being a close-up of Mrs. Frederick Williams, national president, delivering her address and seated back of her are Mrs. J. M. Toomey, department president; Mrs. Bun Wylie, state regent, D. A. R., and Mrs. Susan Caldwell, secretary of the council. The other picture portrays a group on the platform, Mrs. Toomey, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Caldwell, Mrs. Wylie, Mrs. Frank Dennis, of Eatonton; Mrs. Waldrop and Mrs. Gilmore, national officer and chairman. Georgia Auxiliary members will be interested in this notice given to the successful conference held in Georgia.

Senior Play At Russell High.

Friday evening, May 20, at 8:15 o'clock, Russell High's annual senior play will be presented at the city auditorium in East Point. The prices of admission are 15 and 25 cents.

The cast is headed by Amy Cleckler and William Whigham. The supporting cast includes a score of other talented young people from the senior class, all of whom are admirably suited to their roles.

The play to be given is "Nancy Ann," and it is being coached by Misses Margaret Allen and Mildred Pendergrass.

D. A. R. Plan Highlight in Celebration Of Washington Bicentennial May 18

BY MRS. SIDNEY O. SMITH, Of Gainesville, Ga., State Editor.

Perhaps the highlight in Washington bicentennial celebrations over the state will occur Wednesday, May 18, when the D. A. R. of the cities of Savannah, Augusta and Waynesboro will re-enact Washington's journey to Georgia which occurred in May, 1791. The inspiration of the idea of this occasion comes from Mrs. R. J. Travis, state chairman of preservation of historic spots, at whose country home, Avalon, will be held a reception for the distinguished guests in Savannah.

The celebration will start in Savannah and the program as sent in by Mrs. H. T. Tuthill, chapter editor, is as follows: Celebrations marking the visit of Washington to Georgia 200 years ago will be held the middle of this month, the bicentennial May program here to culminate with the erection May 17 of a tablet on the site of the inn at Barnard and State streets, where Washington stopped on the occasion of his visit. The three Savannah chapters, D. A. R., will unite in placing the memorial and the celebration will continue with ceremonies in Augusta and Waynesboro, where historic memorials will also be placed by many of the guests attending all three events. Brigadier General R. J. Travis will be principal speaker both here and in Waynesboro and Augusta, and the distinguished guests who will come to Savannah for the occasion include Mrs. Bun Wylie, chairman of the Washington bicentennial celebration of the Georgia D. A. R. and honorary state regent, and Mrs. Julian McCurry, state regent, D. A. R.

Following the program which will take place at 5 o'clock there will be a reception at Avalon, the country home of Mrs. R. J. Travis, state chairman of marking of historic spots. The committee in charge of the unveiling of the tablet is Miss Henrietta Capton, chairman; Mesdames J. E. D. Bacon, Lowry Axley and P. P. Boggs. The program is as follows: Music, reading of Washington's prayer, Rev. P. N. Gresham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; salute to the flag, introduction of principal speaker by Mrs. P. P. Boggs, regent Bonaventure chapter, D. A. R.; address by Brigadier General R. J. Travis, introduction of distinguished guests by Mrs. George J. Butler, regent Lachlan McIntosh chapter; presentation of tablet to Mayor Haynes, Mrs. Edgar Oliver, regent Savannah chapter, D. A. R.; acceptance by Mayor Haynes, presentation of tablet to Emmet Wilson by Mrs. J. E. D. Bacon, past regent Lachlan McIntosh; acceptance by Mr. Wilson for Odd Fellows; benediction, Rev. P. N. Gresham, "Star-Spangled Banner," with unveiling of tablet. The young daughters of two regents, Miss Ellen Butler and Miss Roberta Boggs, will unveil the tablet.

From Savannah the participants go to Waynesboro. There a boulder, placed in front of Munnerlyn House, where Washington spent the night, is to be unveiled. Receiving in the room where Washington stayed will be Mrs. Edgar Agerton, regent Edmund Burke chapter; Mrs. Carroll Garlych, Gadsden, Ala., present owner of the estate; Mrs. Herbert Franklin and Mrs. Bun Wylie, honorary regents, D. A. R., and Mrs. Julian McCurry, state regent. The marker will be unveiled by Rosa MCauley, granddaughter of Mrs. Hugh McMaster, official hostess for the Rotary lunch for visitors, and Peyton Thompson Jr. General Robert J. Travis, speaker at Waynesboro, will also be the speaker at Augusta, final stop of the pilgrimage.

Augusta D. A. R. are placing a monument five miles from Augusta on the old Savannah road marking the spot where General Washington was met by Governor Edward Telfair, Judge George Walton and Major General John Twiggs. The program as sent in by Mrs. A. H. Brenner, regent of the Augusta chapter, is interesting, for many of those having part are descendants of famous early Georgians. After the unveiling of the marker the speakers and out-of-town guests will be entertained at supper at Meadow Garden by the chapter, the hostesses receiving in colonial costumes.

The program to be presented in Augusta follows:

Music by the band of the United States Veterans Hospital No. 62; call to order by the regent, invocation, Rev. Frederick E. Smith, chaplain-pastor. First Baptist church; introductory remarks, Mrs. August H. Brenner, regent Augusta chapter, D. A. R.; unveiling of tablet by lineal descendant of Major General John Twiggs; "Star-Spangled Banner," salute to flag, the American's Creed; Augusta's welcome to President Washington: "The Welcome of Governor Edward Telfair," Mayor William D. Jennings; "The Major General to his Commander-in-Chief," John D. Twiggs, lineal descendant of Major General John Twiggs; "From a Signer of the Declaration of Independence," James E. Harper, collateral descendant of George Walton; "Brigadier General William Glascock, trustee of Augusta, 1780-1790," by George B. Barrett, lineal descendant; "A Citizen of Augusta," Joseph B. Cumming, lineal descendant of Thomas Cumming, first intendent of Augusta; "The Academy of Richmond County to the Patrons of Education," Honorable Lawton B. Evans, LL. D.; selection by American Legion drum and bugle corps. The George Washington bicentennial: "The Bicentennial," Mrs. Bun Wylie, of Atlanta, state chairman, retiring regent, Georgia Society D. A. R.; greetings, Mrs. Julian McCurry, of Athens, state regent, D. A. R.; "The George Washington Highway," Mrs. Robert J. Travis, of Savannah, D. A. R. chairman of historic spots; address, General Robert J. Travis, of Savannah, president Georgia Sons of the Revolution; acceptance of marker by commissioners of Richmond county, by Marvin Wolfe, chairman; music, "Dixie;" address by General Peter Traub; music, "America," American Legion drum and bugle corps.

FINAL VALUE....

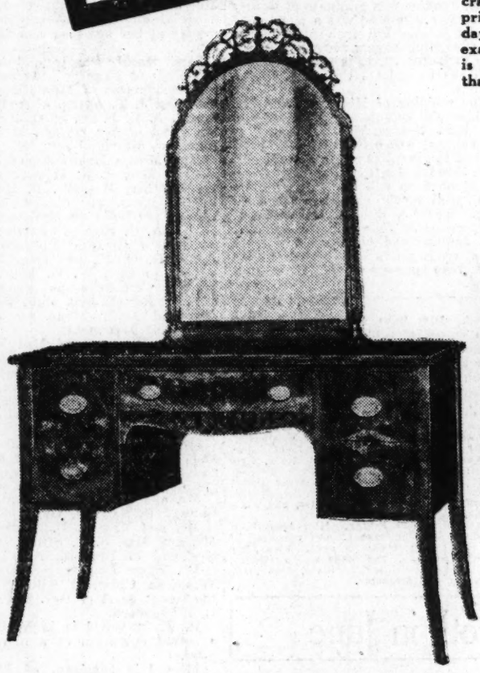

....The Greatest Purchase of 1932

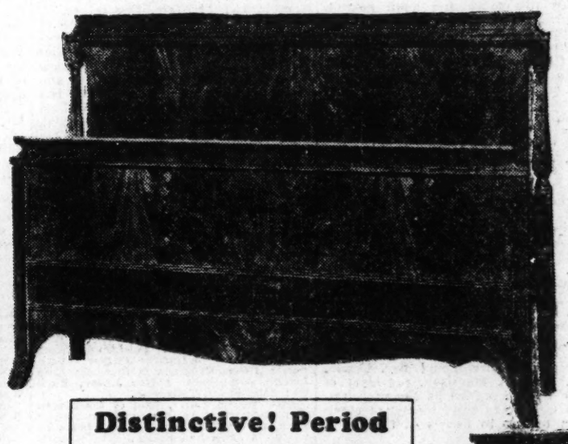

Eclipsing Anything We Have Ever Offered Before Even In This Sale of Haverty's

Sensational Factory Furniture PURCHASE

SAVINGS TO YOU OF OVER 1/2

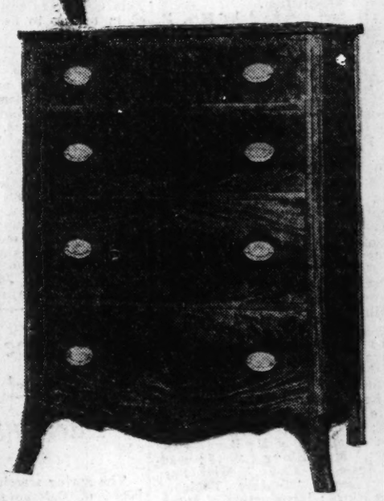

A fitting climax to one of the greatest sales in our history. A three-piece bedroom suite — made by skilled craftsmen from the best material money can buy—at a price even lower than is usually asked for ordinary everyday furniture. Don't be misled by the low price—it is exactly one-half what it would sell for regularly. There is more style, more quality and more value in this suite than we have ever seen in any suite priced at $89.50.

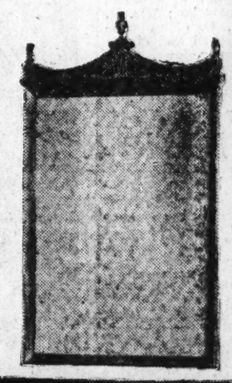

We agree with you that it sounds impossible for such a quality suite to sell for $89.50. We don't ask you to take our word for it—we don't even ask you to be influenced by these actual photographs of the merchandise. We had rather you withhold your opinion until you can see the furniture — then we know that you will agree with us when we say it "eclipses anything we have ever offered."

Distinctive! Period Suites! Sheraton or Hepplewhite!

Quality 18th Century Magnificent Vanity, Bed and Chest $89.50

Again Haverty steps forth with still newer and greater values! If you want authentic period design in your furniture, you can have it in this suite. If you want superior construction, that, too, is to be had in this suite—If you only want to pay a small sum for your bedroom suite—you can still have the style and quality desired—if you are fortunate enough in being one of those who buy this suite, that we feel is "the greatest purchase of 1932." VOL. LXIV., No. 336. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 15, 1932.

Miss McCoy And Mr. Rankin Will Wed

Of cordial interest to friends and relatives is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Lester McCoy of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anne Wyoline McCoy, to Vance Olney Rankin Jr. The marriage to be solemnized in the early summer. The lovely bride-elect is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Lester McCoy, of Atlanta. On her paternal side Miss McCoy is descended from the Perkins and McCoys, of North Carolina and Virginia. Her paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. John Milledge McCoy. The bride-elect's mother, before her marriage, was Miss Annie Delle Lester, youngest daughter of Stiron and Nancy Ann Lester.

Miss McCoy has one sister, Mrs. A. Marvin Mason, of Charlotte, N. C., and two brothers, Bonnie Lester McCoy, of Atlanta, and John Charlton McCoy, of Tulsa, Okla. She was graduated from Girls' High school, of Atlanta, and for the past year has made her home in Charlotte, N. C.

Mr. Rankin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Olney Rankin Sr., who have been influential citizens of Atlanta for a number of years. His grandfather, the late Dr. James Cofield Mitchell Rankin, of Belle Mina, Ala., was descended from the Warrens and Campbells of colonial days of Virginia and North Carolina. His paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Elizabeth Rasbury Rankin, of Tennessee, was descended from the Benhams and Campbells, of Virginia.

Mr. Rankin's mother, Mrs. Johnie King Rankin, is a descendant on her paternal side from the Kings, Shirleys, Maxwells and Brooks, of Virginia. On her maternal side from the Flemisters, Chisms, Wilsons and Penningtons, all of Virginia, who came to Georgia after the Revolution. He has two sisters, Miss Veone Rankin and Miss Susie May Rankin, and two brothers, James King Rankin and William King Rankin. He re-

Miss Martha McCaw

JUNE brides-elect occupy the social spotlight and adorn today's feature page, with Miss McCoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Lester McCoy, leading the page, her engagement being announced today to Vance Olney Rankin Jr. Miss Sharp, daughter of Mrs. Wister Sharp, will wed William Jasper Keeling, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Atlanta. Miss Chambers is a daughter of Judge Hugh Chambers and Mrs. Chambers, of Macon, and her engagement is announced to Robert Douglas Feagin Jr., of Macon. Miss McNeill is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert John McNeill, of Tignall, Ga., and she will wed Frank Coleman Pate, of Crawfordsville and Unadilla, Ga. Miss McCaw is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Nichols McCaw, of Macon, and her engagement is announced to Joseph Morris Almand, of Macon, formerly of Lithonia. Bascom Biggers made the photograph of Miss Sharp, and Miss McNeill's was made by Elliott's studio. Warlick's studio made the photographs of Miss Chambers and Miss McCaw.

Miss Sharp To Be Bride Of Mr. Keeling

The announcement made today by Mrs. Wister Augustus Sharp of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Ninetta Sharp, to William Jasper Keeling, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Atlanta, is of wide social interest, the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-elect being members of prominent southern and New England families. The marriage will be very quietly solemnized Saturday, June 4, at the home of the bride-elect on Fifteenth street with only members of the two families present.

Miss Sharp is the sister of Miss Sarah Sharp and Wister Augustus Sharp. Her father, the late Wister A. Sharp, was numbered among Atlanta's most beloved and popular citizens and as senior member of the well-known firm, Sharp & Boylston Real Estate and Renting Company, was recognized as a leader in this city's business circles.

Mrs. Sharp was before her marriage Miss Ninetta Day, daughter of the late Thomas Jefferson Day and the late Mrs. Cornelia Chisholm Day, beloved Atlanta residents, the former being a native of Tennessee. Mrs. Day was originally from Kentucky, where her family has occupied an important position for generations. In addition to the Day and Chisholm families, the attractive young bride-elect is a descendant of the distinguished Perry family of this state.

On her paternal side Miss Sharp traces her ancestry through the aristocratic Barmore, Rasor and Richey families, of South Carolina, whose forbears were extensive plantation owners of that state. Her paternal grandparents were the late Robert Clement Sharp and Mrs. Sarah Richey Sharp, who were beloved and influential citizens in South Carolina.

Miss Sharp is a popular member of Atlanta's younger society and has a wide circle of friends who will be interested in the announcement of her engagement.

Three in Family Wed at Twenty.

Twenty is a lucky age and lucky number in the families of Miss Louisa Shivers and her fiance, Russell McKinney, whose wedding plans are announced elsewhere in The Constitution today. For this lovely titian-haired bride-elect will be the third member of her family to tread the orange blossom path at the age of 20, in addition to the fact that two members of Mr. McKinney's family were married at that age. Mrs. Lester L. Shivers, mother of this future bride, plighted her troth just after she had passed her teens, and Mrs. Richard Hardwick, the former Miss Carolyn Shivers and a sister of Miss Louisa Shivers, became the bride of Mr. Hardwick at the same age. It is a coincidence that Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McKinney, of Chattanooga, Tenn., parents of the bridegroom-to-be, were also married at the ages of 20.

Following their marriage Mr. McKinney and his bride will reside in Chattanooga, Tenn., where their apartment on Missionary ridge will afford a marvelous view of the entire city and several picturesque mountain ranges beyond. Every detail of the furnishing of this apartment is being carefully planned by this couple and will be entirely complete when they return from their wedding journey. Despite her mere 20 years, no doubt, this charming bride-elect will preside over her home with a poise and graciousness that could be envied by hostesses with years of experience.

Surprise Luncheon Fetes Bride-Elect.

Attesting the extreme popularity of the honor guest with her associates was the surprise luncheon tendered Miss Frances Clarke, a charming bride-elect of May, by the young ladies of the Credit Service Company, where Miss Clarke was employed until the announcement of her engagement recently. Miss Marguerite Anderson, a close friend, who will act as a bridesmaid when Miss Clarke becomes the bride of Dr. Caldwell Holliday, invited her to luncheon and asked her to be at a popular tea room at a certain hour on Friday. No sooner was the dainty blond bride-elect seated at the table than the entire group of young ladies burst into the room, completely surprising the honor guest.

An artistic arrangement of spring flowers and burning tapers decorated the table in the private dining room, where the guests were seated. At the end of the luncheon a beaming waiter bore in a tray heaped with dainty packages, which was placed in front of the honor guest. Each of the young ladies present had contributed a gift and presented Miss Clarke with a handkerchief shower for her trousseau.

Hope Chest Contains Exquisite Handwork.

For many years Miss Ninetta Sharp has fashioned dainty articles and done exquisite embroidery on handsome linens for her hope chest, in anticipation of the time when she would marry and need the generous supply in her own home. Today the announcement made of the engagement of Miss Sharp to William Jasper Keeling culminates a romance begun in childhood days, continued throughout school days, and with equal constancy even after the future bridegroom moved to Washington, D. C., for residence. The beautiful linens and dainty lingerie made by this charming brunet will form an important part of her trousseau and will be especially treasured because of the many careful stitches done by her skilled needle.

In addition to the handwork of the bride-elect, herself, this interesting hope chest contains numbers of garments and linens made for her by friends or sent to her by friends traveling to other cities. Perhaps most prized of the array, however, is the heavy white bedspread knitted for Miss Sharp by her grandmother, the late Mrs. T. J. Day, of Atlanta, who worked with untiring fingers that she might make some contribution to the future home of her beloved granddaughter.

Radium Springs Is Scene of House Party.

Picturesque Radium Springs, near Albany, Ga., is furnishing the setting for a delightful house party this week-end. Misses Anne Wynn Fleming and Louise Moore, members of the debutante coterie of the past season; Miss Mary Middleton and Francis Gilbert, all of Atlanta; Jim Hayes and John McKenzie, of Montezuma, Ga., are among the attractive members of the younger contingent enjoying the party. Miss Moore and Miss Fleming went to Montezuma Friday, where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Oscar McKenzie before leaving by motor for Radium Springs.

A nationally known orchestra will furnish the music for the dance Monday evening, which will attract the younger set from a radius of several hundred miles. Golf on the sporty course and swimming in the crystal clear water from the springs will be on the program for the day, and the Atlantans will return to the city Tuesday.

Miss Wilkes Weds John T. Carlton At Ceremony May 7

An interesting announcement made today is that of the marriage of Miss Alee Estelle Wilkes to John Thomas Carlton, the ceremony having taken place May 7 at the Rock Spring Presbyterian church, with Rev. Wallace McPherson Alston, former schoolmate of the bridegroom, officiating. Oscar L. Benson, of Athens, college classmate and fraternity brother of the bridegroom, and Miss Helen Plaginos, of Gainesville, were attendants.

Mrs. Carlton is the daughter of H. T. Wilkes, of Perry, Fla., where she was numbered among popular members of the younger set. She studied music at Southern College, in Lakeland, Fla.

Mr. Carlton, the son of Mrs. J. E. Carlton, of Decatur, is a graduate of the University of Georgia, where he was a prominent student, having served as editor of the Red and Black, treasurer of the Pan-Hellenic council, president of Sigma Delta Chi, journalism fraternity, and was a member of the Demosthenian debating key circle, the Gridiron club, Blue Key fraternity, and the Cigma Chi fraternity. At present he is a member of the editorial staff of the Atlanta Georgian, and he and his bride will live at 1302 West Peachtree street.

Miss McNeill Weds Frank Pate in June

WASHINGTON, Ga., May 14.—The sincerest interest of a wide circle of friends in Georgia and South Carolina is centered in the announcement of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. McNeill, of Tignall, of the engagment of their daughter, Frances Isabel, to Frank Pate, of Unadilla and Crawfordville, the marriage to be solemnized at an impressive church ceremony in June.

The bride-elect, is an only daughter, numbering among her ancestors the Heards of Revolutionary fame, and the Blairs, of South Carolina. She possesses exquite beauty of the Irish type with blue eyes and dark hair. Miss McNeill is a graduate of Wesleyan College, and for the past year has been teaching in the high school at Crawfordville.

Mr. Pate is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Pate, of Unadilla, and a descendant of John Knox and Thomas Moore. Immediately following his graduation at Unadilla High school, Mr. Pate accepted a position with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and is now stationed at Crawfordville.

Roberts—Stone.

DOERUN, Ga., May 14.—An announcement of interest to a wide circle of friend is that made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lambdin Roberts of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sara Elizabeth Roberts, to Allen Edward Stone Jr. The attractive bride-elect is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts. After graduating from the Doerun High school she continued her studies at LaGrange College, LaGrange, Ga., where she was a member of the Alpha Phi Beta sorority. At present she is a member of the Morgan High school faculty.

Mr. Stone is the only son of Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Stone, of Doerun. He attended the Georgia School of Technology and is a prominent young business man engaged in farming.

Vickery—Ridgeway.

CARNESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—A marriage of interest was that of Miss Ossie Vickey to Duel Ridgeway, which was solemnized Saturday, April 9, in Walhalla, S. C.

Mrs. Ridgeway is the daughter of J. C. Vickey, of Royston, Ga. She is a graduate of Young Harris college and is a member of the faculty of Bethlehem school.

Miss Louise Hutchinson To Wed W. J. Estes Jr. at June Ceremony

Miss Louise Hutchinson, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Otto Hutchinson, of Haralson, Ga., whose betrothal is announced today to William James Estes Jr., of Jonesboro and Senoia, the marriage to take place June 11. Staff photo by Bill Mason.

HARALSON, Ga., May 14.—Engaging the cordial and sincere interest of a host of friends throughout the state is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Otto Hutchinson of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Louise Hutchinson, to William James Estes Jr., of Jonesboro, Ga., formerly of Senoia, Ga., their marriage to unite two of Georgia's prominent families.

Miss Hutchinson is the only daughter of her parents, who are leading citizens of Meriwether county and are prominently identified with the religious, social and financial development of the community. Tracing her lineage to include some of the oldest and best-known families of the state, Miss Hutchinson is a charming representative of southern aristocracy. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hutchinson, beloved citizens of this county, and the late Dr. and Mrs. B. M. Owen, of Hollonville, Dr. Owen having been an outstanding figure in the practice of medicine.

The bride-elect's mother, from whom she inherits personal charm and graciousness, was before her marriage Miss Ethel Owen, the only daughter of her parents and the sister of Colonel Emmett Owen and Dr. J. C. Owen, of Griffin. The bride-elect's only brother is Lewis Hutchinson.

Miss Hutchinson received her early education in the schools of West Point, Ga., being a graduate of the West Point High school. Later she received a degree from the Georgia State College for Women, at Milledgeville, Ga., where she was an outstanding student and specialized in expression. Since finishing school she has been an admired belle in social circles and is a favorite with young and old alike, due to her charm of manner and gentleness of disposition. Graceful and slender, she is an attractive blonde and possesses deep blue eyes.

Mr. Estes is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Estes, who are ranked among the best-known citizens of Senoia, Ga. He is the grandson on his paternal side of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel J. Estes, pioneer citizens of Meriwether county, who for many years were leading and beloved residents of Gay, Ga. His maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Blakely, of Meriwether county, who originally came from South Carolina, his mother having been before her marriage Miss Bessie Gordon Blakely, a belle and beauty of the state. The future bridegroom's father, William J. Estes, is license inspector of the highway department of Georgia.

Mr. Estes is a graduate of the Senoia High school and he finished his education at the University of Georgia, at Athens, where he received a B. S. A. degree and figured prominently in college activities. Following his graduation he was assistant agricultural agent of Fulton county, and is now the county agent for Clayton county, with headquarters at Jonesboro, where he and his bride-elect will reside.

He is the brother of Misses Martha Jane, Ruth and Mary Claude Estes.

Miss Hutchinson and Mr. Estes have chosen Saturday, June 11, as the date for their marriage, which will be beautifully solemnized at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon at the Haralson Methodist church, the occasion to assemble a large company of friends and relatives.

Miss Maddox Weds Mr. Rivers, Camilla, At July Ceremony

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., May 14.—Of widespread interest is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Nancy Maddox to Julian Rosser Rivers, of Camilla, the wedding to take place on July 14 at the First Methodist church in Bainbridge. Following her graduation from the Bainbridge High school the bride-elect attended Wesleyan Conservatory of Music in Macon, where her election to the presidency of the student government attested her popularity and ability. Graduating from Wesleyan, she pursued her musical education in New York city, where she was a pupil of the renowned Ernesto Berumin. She later held a position as teacher of music in the Richland High school and now in Camilla occupies a similar position.

She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson Maddox, of Bainbridge, her mother being the former Miss Mamie Callahan. Her maternal grandfather was the late John W. Callahan, who was a leading citizen of Binbridge, having held the offices of alderman, mayor, member of the legislature, state senator and chairman of the board of county commissioners. Mrs. John W. Callahan was the former Miss Hattie Johnson, a descendant of the famous Johnson and Tatum families of North Carolina and Georgia. On her paternal side Miss Maddox traces her descent from a reigning family of Wales, who came to Maryland in the seventeenth century. Her paternal grandfather was John S. Maddox, who served two terms in the Alabama legislature from St. Clair county, Alabama.

The bridegroom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Cullen Rivers, of Camilla. His lienage contains such prominent family names as Wilson, Bradford and Rosser. He is a direct descendant of Governor John Bradford, of North Carolina, who, as a colonel in the Revolutionary army and as a member of the Halifax assembly, assisted in establishing American independence. His grandfathers on both sides were prominent members of the South Georgia Methodist conference. He is a prominent young businessman of Camilla, where the couple will make their future home.

About Wedding Invitations

These absolutely necessary articles for the wedding occasion are subject to criticism more than any other feature.

Even the wedding dress is not scrutinized so closely as the invitation, for the latter goes into the hands of strangers as well as of every invited guest and is apt to be considered the forerunner of the style which characterizes the wedding.

These days, most people are well informed concerning the requisites for stylish invitations.

The material of which the envelopes and sheets are made should be of approved shade; the shapes should be those that fashion has most recently decreed and the engraving should be done by artists whose reputation insures the highest degree of skill. All these requirements are met in the extensive plant and more than fifty years experience of the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co. This house has established a high standard of product known all over the United States; the imprint of its name upon an envelope is a guarantee that the invitation is of correct form and style.

If you are particularly interested send for samples which will include a variety of styles within a wide range of price. Address J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., 103 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Georgia.

Those invited were Misses Mayme Atcheson, Wade Bookout, Dorothy Cofer and Mary Kate Cofer, Mrs. Mamie Holcombe and Mrs. Denny Stewart, of Griffin, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Piper and Mr. and Mrs. Aiken Piper, of Griffin; Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Cofer, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Smith, Mrs. Willie Mae Huey, Fred Taylor, T. J. Ross, Paul Burnett and Emmett Johnson.

St. Francis Street Garden Club.

The fifth monthly meeting of the Newnan Avenue and St. Francis Street Garden Club, of Colonial Hills, East Point, met Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Rhodes, 136 Newnan avenue. There were several interesting talks and reports of committees, as well as exhibitions of roses grown by members of the club. The community is already beginning to realize benefits from the activities of this and neighboring clubs and St. Francis street, from Newnan to Main, is planted with Lombardy poplars, alternating with crepe myrtle planted along the sidewalks, which enhance the natural beauty of this end of the Colonial Hills.

Contests in growing various kinds of flowers, planting and shaping shrubbery, development and trimming of lawns, building and beautifying lily pools, installing porch boxes, bird houses and outdoor swings are the main objectives commanding the active attention of the members of this garden club. Rose and dahlia growing constitute the principal rivalry and it is expected that this will result in the production of some beautiful specimens of these garden aristocrats.

Members of the Younger Social Contingent Who Will Participate In the Horse Show To Be Held at Piedmont Park on May 20-21

Social interest centers this week in the horse show, which for the fourth consecutive year will draw the finest civilian stables in this section and the best military mounts of the Fourth Corps Area to the show ring at Piedmont park Friday and Saturday afternoons, where they will compete for blue ribbons, handsome trophies and coveted stakes.

Notable saddle horses are coming from Charlotte and High Point, N. C., and from Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn., to enter gaited saddle classes and the combination saddle-and-harness events to strengthen competition in the most difficult civilian classes, wherein outstanding local entries will compete for honors.

Seasoned show teams from Fort Oglethorpe, Fort Benning and Fort McPherson will vie for honors in the hunting, jumping and polo classes, providing color and variety to the two-day program that will signalize the annual exhibition of the Atlanta Horse Show Association, of which Herbert D. Oliver is president and Colonel Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A., is executive manager.

Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls School, who are sponsoring the event as a benefit for the mountain institution on whose behalf they function, will be represented at the show grounds by a dozen active committees comprising virtually the entire membership of this splendid organization. A special committee of young matrons headed by Mrs. John O. Chiles will serve as ushers; another large group under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Frank Boston Jr. and Mrs. Carlyle Holleman will conduct the sale of official horse show programs; Mrs. John O. Donaldson has assembled a capable group to assist in the sale of sandwiches, while Mrs. Deloney Sledge heads a similar committee to dispense drinks. Mrs. Harry Cannon heads another group in charge of confections.

The advance sale of admission tickets will continue at horse show headquarters in the Walton building—telephone Walnut 0668—throughout Thursday, moving to the show grounds at Piedmont park Friday morning, where Mrs. W. Eugene Harrington, general chairman for the young matrons' sponsorship, will continue the box seat sale at the gate. Mrs. Bernard Neal, chairman of general admission ticket sale, will have an able committee at the show grounds to handle the gate sale.

Boxes are $12 each per day, or $20 for the two days. Each box contains six seats. A limited number of reserved grandstand seats have been provided, and these will be available only on the advance sale now in progress under Mrs. Harrington's direction at headquarters, and are $1 each. The general admission seats available at the gate are likewise $1 for adults and a special price of 50 cents has been established for children.

Enthusiastic riders numbered among the younger social contingent are pictured in the accompanying photographs mounted on their favorite horses, which they will enter in the horse show to be held May 20-21 at Piedmont park by the Atlanta Horse Show Association and sponsored by the Young Matrons' Circle of Tallulah Falls. At the upper left is Gregory Wilson, son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, mounted on Major Forrest, owned by Philip McDuffie. At the center, above, is a charming likeness of Miss Elise Terhune, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Westervelt Terhune, riding her own horse, Conquest. At the lower right is shown Bobby Bray, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Sims Bray, riding Brownie, clever little pony from the stables of the Garden Hills Riding Academy and owned by Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Wheeler. At the lower center is Miss Josephine McDougall, winsome little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calhoun McDougall, riding Patches, from the Garden Hills stable. Photographs by Bill Mason, staff photographer.

Miss Florence Banks To Wed Henry Coley.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 14.—Society will find its greatest interest this week in the wedding of Miss Florence Banks, daughter of Mrs. George Y. Banks, and Henry Coley, which will be solemnized Saturday at 11 o'clock in the morning at the First Presbyterian church. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. Robert S. Boyd, pastor of the church, in the presence of an assemblage of fashionable society.

There will be no attendants, the bride and groom entering together. The ushers will be Hyman Fields, E. A. Feimster Jr., Fred Crayton and William Coley Jr., of Atlanta.

A program of nuptial music will be rendered by Mrs. W. J. Burrus at the organ and Mrs. William I. Hudson Jr., violinist.

Mr. Coley and his bride will leave for a motor trip to be planned en route and on their return will take possession of their home in Wynnton.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Barschall Andrews entertained with a tea as a compliment to Miss Florence Banks and Mrs. William Alexander, who has recently moved to Columbus from Hardaway, Fla.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Andrews, Miss Banks, Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. Walter Hudson. Presiding at the tea table was Mrs. William H. Young Jr., and assisting in entertaining were Mrs. E. A. Feimster Jr., Mrs. Edward Swift Jr., Mrs. Pearce Baker, Mrs. Aldine Pound, Mrs. John Uncles, of West Point, N. Y.; Miss Cynthia Chappell and Mrs. Robison Brown.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Andrews entertained with a buffet supper, having as guests the members of the receiving line with their husbands and James Fletcher, James Huff and Henry Watson Jr.

Saturday evening Miss Banks and Mr. Coley were honored with a dinner party, at which Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hudson were hosts. Sharing honors with them were Mr. and Mrs. William Alexander. Later they attended the Cotillion Club dance. The invitation list included 30 members of the younger set.

W. B. A. Honors Supreme President.

Woman's Benefit Association will celebrate the birthday of Mrs. Bina West Miller, of Port Huron, Mich., supreme president of the Woman's Benefit Association, May 18. The reviews of Atlanta and the north Georgia district will hold a meeting Tuesday evening, May 17, at 8 o'clock at the W. B. A. clubrooms, 70 Houston street. The birthday class of new members of the different reviews will be initiated.

The entire month of May is given for birthday celebrations. Classes of candidates and district rallies will be held over the entire United States and Canada. Drive for junior members will continue through the month.

Miss Chambers To Wed Mr. Feagin At Ceremony in Macon June 14

MACON, Ga., May 14.—Marked social interest is centered in the announcement made today by Judge Hugh Chambers and Mrs. Chambers of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elmina Chambers, to Robert Douglas Feagin Jr., the wedding of this popular young couple to be solemnized June 14.

Miss Chambers, a beautiful brunette, was graduated from Lanier High school, and later graduated with second honor from Wesleyan College. Since that time she has been a member of the faculty of Lanier High school for girls.

On her maternal side, the bride-elect is descended from the Butts family who were active in the early history of the state. One of the oldest counties in the state bears the family name, being named for Captain Samuel Butts, of Revolutionary fame. Miss Chambers' mother was the former Miss Elizabeth Butts, of Millen, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Butts, Mr. Butts being a prominent railroad official of that part of the state.

On her paternal side, Miss Chambers is the granddaughter of the late Judge and Mrs. Franklin Chambers, originally of Irwinton. While residing in Irwinton, Judge Chambers represented his county in the legislature and was also a member of the senate for several terms. Later he became a resident of this city and was a member of the Macon bar for a number of years before his death. Judge Hugh Chambers, father of the bride-elect, is judge of the municipal court of Macon. Miss Chambers' grandfathers on both her paternal and maternal side were Confederate veterans, serving the south throughout the War Between the States.

Mr. Feagin attended Lanier High school and later was graduated with an A. B. degree from the University of Georgia. At the university he was a popular member of the S. A.-E. fraternity, the Sphinx honorary club and was manager of the varsity 1932 football team. He studied law under Elijah Maynard, and passed the state bar examination in June 1931. He is now teaching at Lanier High school for boys.

Mr. Feagin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Douglas Feagin, of Macon, his mother being the former Miss Janette Wright, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Pope Swift Wright, of New York city. On his maternal side, he is descended from the Swift and Elliot families of Pennsylvania and New York. His maternal great-grandfather was the beloved Elisha Pope Swift, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Pittsburgh, for 40 years. Mr. Feagin's father was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Feagin, of Sumter county, prominent citizens of this state.

The bridegroom-elect is a lineal descendant of Abraham Pearson, the first president of Yale, and of John Eliot, called in history, "the apostle to the Indians."

Mrs. James Cromer Is Elected Regent of Atlanta Chapter D.A.R.

Mrs. James Dawkins Cromer was elected regent of Atlanta chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the meeting held Saturday afternoon at Craigie House with the regent, Mrs. Thomas Coke Mell, presiding. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Drury Powers, first vice regent; Mrs. John Morris Sr., second vice regent; Mrs. William Barnes Smith, recording secretary; Mrs. Owen McConnell, corresponding secretry; Mrs. McWhorter Milner, treasurer; Miss Annie Lauie Hill, registrar; Mrs. Moreland Speir, librarian; Mrs. W. C. Carpenter, historian; Mrs. Charles F. Rice, auditor, and Mrs. Thomas H. Morgan, chaplain.

New members of the board of management elected for 1932-1934 were: Mesdames Thomas C. Mell, Bun Wylie, John M. Slaton, Elizabeth T. Winship, Roy Collier, Thomas A. Ratliffe, Beverly Du Bose and Miss Byrd Blankenship. Board members to serve from 1931-1933 are: Mesdames Eli A. Thomas, E. R. Kirk, James L. Logan, Thomas C. Whitner, John William Smth, George Breitenbucher, J. Whiteford Russell, Max E. Land, Mrs. J. Whiteford Russell was chairman of the nominating committee, whose members included: Mesdames E. R. Kirk, Thomas C. Whitner, Eli A. Thomas and Charles F. Rice.

Mrs. Cromer is an outstanding member of the chapter and a representative southern woman, having been the former Miss Minnie Hillyer, daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. George Hillyer. Mrs. Cromer is well fitted by her executive ability and magnetic personality to serve as regent and has had experience in holding number of offices. She is a member of a number of important patriotic organizations and takes a prominent part in the civic life of Atlanta.

Annual reports were given by the officers and by the delegates to the national congress in Washington, D. C., by Mrs. Howard McCall and Miss Virginia Harden. Mrs. Bun Wylie, retiring state regent, Georgia D. A. R., and Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, national vice president, Daughters of the American Colonists, spoke of the highlights of the congress. Mrs. Thomas H. Morgan, chairman of the executive board, announced that the chapter would have a scholarship at North Avenue Presbyterian school to be known as the Hattie Wilson High Memorial scholarship.

Mrs. C. V. LeCraw, chairman of music, presented Mrs. T. L. Stokes in a group of songs, accompanied at the piano by Miss Helen Schaid. Mrs. Mell, retiring regent, presented the chapter with two volumes of the D. A. R. lineage books and a handsome silver flower bowl. Mrs. Mell's regency has kept Atlanta chapter at the peak of efficiency. She has been untiring in her efforts to promote every undertaking sponsored by the chapter. She has recently been elected state corresponding secretary, Georgia D. A. R., and state president of the Georgia Society, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America.

A reception was held and the new officers welcomed. Mrs. W. H. Smaw was chairman of flowers, and tea was served by Mrs. George Breitenbucher and members of the house committee.

Ladies' Auxiliary Sponsors Benefit.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Order of Sleeping Car Conductors will give a benefit bridge and dinner May 20 at 12 o'clock at Sterchi Brothers' store at 116 Whitehall street. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. A. M. Turner, Raymond 7076; Mrs. E. F. Helstein, Vernon 1343; Mrs. B. Brantley, Raymond 3446. Tickets are 50c each. Among the numerous prizes which have been secured for the occasion is a handmade spread.

Primrose Club Plans Flower Show For May 17

Primrose Garden Club will hold its spring flower show at the Piedmont Driving Club Tuesday, May 17, at 3 o'clock. The flowers will be on display from 3 until 5 o'clock and an invitation is extended to members of local garden clubs and to all flower lovers to attend. The chairman, Mrs. George Campbell Jr., and the co-chairman, Mrs. Norman Cooledge, request that all exhibits be in place by 12 o'clock noon so that the judges may begin judging promptly.

Miss Neva Caudle To Wed Mr. Crook

LaGRANGE, Ga., May 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilhoit Caudle, of LaGrange, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Neva Caudle, to Claude Harris Crook, of New York city, and the announcement will be read with interest by the many friends of the young couple throughout the south. The marriage of Miss Caudle and Mr. Crook will be solemnized at the home of the bride's parents in LaGrange on June 8, and afterwards they will make their home in New York city.

Miss Caudle is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caudle and has been an admired member of the college contingent. She possesses exquisite brunette beauty and a magnetic personality. After graduating from LaGrange High school Miss Caudle attended Georgia State Teachers' College at Athens for two years and later received her bachelor of arts degree from LaGrange College. Miss Caudle is also a graduate in expression. Miss Caudle was an outstanding member of the student body at both schools and was prominent in social and literary activities. She was voted the most attractive girl at Teachers' College and LaGrange College and was a member of the Tau Upsilon Tau Club, Altionia Literary Society, Curtain Raisers' Dramatic Club and Phi Sigma Theta sorority. She taught for a year at the LaGrange Academy of Arts and has been a member of the faculty of the Greensboro school for the last year.

Mr. Crook is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Crook, of Selma, Ala., formerly of Athens. He attended the University of Georgia and was a member of the University Glee Club and Four Horsemen and Bull Dog orchestras. Mr. Crook is a Chi Psi and for the last year has been connected with the Ocean Steamship Company in New York.

Mrs. Warren White Addresses C. A. R.

Mrs. Warren D. White, retiring president of the Atlanta Chapter U. D. C., addressed the children of the Margaret A. Wilson Chapter Children of the Confederacy Monday afternoon on the many glorious deeds of the veterans, illustrating with examples of love and chivalry. This meeting was held in honor of Mrs. White, with Isbell Herzberg, president, presiding. Jimmy Medlock and Virginia Bradley presented the flags and in the absence of Evelyn Harrelson, recording secretary, the minutes of the previous meeting were read by Annie Margaret Presson, corresponding secretary. Nancy Hill talked about the radio program presented recently by the Margaret A. Wilson chapter. Harry Erwin told of his impressions and experiences in the Memorial Day parade and exercises.

The following new members were welcomed into the chapter: Ralph Ramsey, Betty Ramsey, Jean Ramsey, Gloria Scarborough, Rebie Stewart, Lawrence Bradley Jr., Gertrude Bradley, Kathryn Mitcham, Fariah Black, Jack Hall, Jimmy Medlock, Jane Asbury, Judson and Norton Asbury. The following visitors were present: Mesdames Warren D. White, W. S. Colman, James A. Erwin, Arthur Hale, S. A. Cruickshank, G. C. Barrow and Warren Bradley. At the close of the meeting, little Virginia Bradley presented Mrs. White with a large basket filled with flowers gathered by the children from the gardens of Snap Bean Farm.

Alley-West Engagement Enlists Interest of Society in Georgia

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., May 14.—Enlisting the interest of friends and acquaintances throughout the south is the announcement made today by Mrs. Isham Walker Alley, of Cartersville and Atlanta, of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Evalyne Walker Alley, to Robert Lovick West, of Cedartown and Cartersville. The marriage will be solemnized in May at the First Baptist church in Atlanta, the exact date to be announced later.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the Cartersville High school and later she went to G. S. C. W., where she received honors. Since completing her education she has been connected with the Atlanta public schools and for several years past has made her home in Atlanta, where she has been active in social and educational affairs.

Among her forebears are men and women who have long been prominent in the progressive and cultural affairs of the nation. The bride-elect's mother was the former Miss Elizabeth Evridge, daughter of the late Mary Padgette and William Evridge, who came to Cartersville from North Carolina. On her maternal side the bride-elect is descended from the Padgette's of Virginia, and the Wright and Williams families, of South Carolina, all of whom achieved fame during the Revolution.

The bride-elect's father, the late Isham Walker Alley, whose parents were Richard and Caroline Alley, of Albany, Ga., was an influential citizen of Bartow county, always active in the civic and religious enterprises for the upbuilding of Cartersville and the community. On her paternal side she is descended from the Alleys and Walkers of South Carolina, and the Dickersons of Virginia.

The bridegroom elect is the son of Frances J. West and the late Mattie Lou Peacock West, of Cedartown. His grandfather was the late Dr. Francis West, son of Dr. George West. On his paternal side he is also descended from the Hoogs, another pioneer family of Polk county. His maternal grandfather was the late Judge Robert Lovick Peacock, of Madison, and is descended from the Priors, through whom he is related to Sydney Lanier.

Mr. West has been connected with Goodyear Clearwater Mills for several years at the main office in Cartersville. He holds the position of purchasing agent for the company's southern plants, and he and his bride will make their home at Cartersville.

Roberts-Smith Wedding Is Set For June 8 at Druid Hills Church

The Druid Hills Methodist church will be the scene of the wedding ceremony of Miss Idabelle Roberts and H. Eugene Smith, who have chosen Wednesday, June 8, as the date for their marriage because of the fact that the bride-elect's parents, Colonel and Mrs. Edgar L. Roberts, were married on that day of the month. The ceremony will be fashionably solemnized at 8 o'clock in the evening, and Dr. John Brandon Peters, pastor of the church, will read the marriage service in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

The lovely young bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Colonel E. L. Roberts, and she has chosen as her matron of honor her mother, Mrs. Roberts.

Miss Farris Pritchett, of Macon, cousin of the future bride, will act as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Mary Craige, of Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Martha Hearn, Mrs. L. A. Hawkins Jr., Miss Dorothy Smith, of Columbus, sister of the bridegroom-elect; Mrs. Thomas S. Rogers and Mrs. Guy M. Torrance.

Sam Merritt, of Americus, will act as best man for Mr. Smith, and the groomsmen will be Lynn Pritchett Jones, cousin of the bride-elect; Wallace Kilgore, Hugh Couch, E. N. Smith, Guy M. Torrance and Ray Moore.

Wedding Reception.

Immediately following the ceremony at the church, Colonel and Mrs. Roberts will entertain at a wedding reception at their home on Mcrningside drive. Mrs. Perry Lee Guest will keep the bride's book, and assisting in entertaining the guests will be Mrs. Walter Candler Jr., Miss Katherine Gober, Mrs. Lawrence Holtsinger, Miss Flora Mae Tumlin, Mrs. Glenn Toole Jr., of Macon, Ga., and Mrs. Horace Collinsworth Jr.

A series of interesting social affairs has been planned in compliment to Miss Roberts, who is one of the most popular members of Atlanta society, and her fiance, Miss Martha Hearn and Mrs. Lawrence Holtsinger have planned a luncheon to be given at the Henry Grady hotel Wednesday, May 18.

Mrs. L. A. Hawkins Jr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Rogers will be hostesses at tea Friday, May 20, at the home of Mrs. Hawkins' mother, Mrs. R. D. Ison, on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Bridge Party.

Mrs. J. C. Moss, aunt of Miss Roberts, will entertain at bridge Tuesday, May 24, at her home on Andrews drive in compliment to her niece. Mrs. Perry Lee Guest's tea on Friday, May 27, will also be a complimentary gesture to this bride-elect.

Mrs. Guy Torrance and Mrs. Glenn Toole Jr. have chosen Friday, June 3, as the date for their luncheon, and Mrs. Walter Candler Jr. will give a luncheon on Thursday, June 2.

Miss Farris Pritchett will entertain at the Biltmore hotel on Monday, June 6, honoring her cousin. Following the wedding rehearsal Tuesday evening, June 7, Miss Dorothy Smith, sister of the future bridegroom, will be hostess at a buffet supper at the Biltmore.

The dates of other parties planned for Miss Roberts and Mr. Smith will be announced later.

Miss Elsie Aiken Weds Mr. Bennett At Impressive Ceremony at Church

The marriage of Miss Elsie Aiken and Troy Bennett was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Grace Methodist church with Rev. Robert Z. Tyler, pastor of the church, officiating in the presence of relatives and friends. Palms, ferns and calla lilies decorated the church. Baskets of the lilies were placed on the altar alternating with seven-branched candelabra holding white burning tapers. Preceding the ceremony an appropriate program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Grace Gaffney at the organ. Mrs. L. O. Kimberly Jr., sister of the bride, sang "Because," by Guy D'Hardelot, and "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs Bond.

Miss Dorothy Aiken, sister of the bride, and maid of honor, was gowned in a becoming model of pink crepe trimmed with silk net and fashioned along closely-fitted lines. She wore a large pink picture hat and carried a shower bouquet of pastel-shaded garden flowers with blue predominating.

Miss Margaret Aiken, niece of the bride, was gowned in a yellow crepe trimmed with silk net and fashioned along the same lines as that of the maid of honor. Her picture hat was yellow with other accessories to match. She carried a shower bouquet of pastel shaded garden flowers with orchids predominating.

Clyde Bennett acted as his brother's best man and the groomsmen were Sam Quigley and Dr. Ralph H. Aiken, brother of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, G. Seals Aiken. Her patrician beauty was enhanced by her wedding gown of powder blue crepe trimmed with real lace and fashioned along princess lines. She wore a large blue picture hat of Swiss horsehair with other accessories to match. She carried a bouquet of white roses showered with swainsona and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. C. E. Aiken, mother of the bride, wore an attractive model of navy blue chiffon trimmed with cream lace. Mrs. J. W. Bennett, mother of the bride-groom, was gowned in a pretty black chiffon trimmed with ecru lace. Mrs. Rachel Bowen, grandmother of the bride, wore a pretty model of black crepe. The shoulder bouquets were of pink rose buds and sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett left immediately for a wedding trip and upon their return will make their home in Atlanta where they will be popular additions to the younger married contingent.

Cherokee Garden Club To Hold Flower Show Wednesday, May 18

The fourth spring flower show sponsored by the Cherokee Garden Club will be held at the Piedmont Driving Club Wednesday, May 18, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. George Street and Mrs. Charles Orme, chairmen of the show, assisted by Mrs. Henry Tompkins, Mrs. G. A. Nicolson Jr. and Mrs. Norris Broyles, committee on arrangements, have made interesting plans for the show and all members are urged to exhibit. The Cherokee Garden Club invites all flower lovers to attend the show at which Mrs. Street and Mrs. Orme will be assisted in receiving by officers of the club, committee chairmen and members. Officers of the club are Mrs. Glenn Ryman, president; Mrs. F. W. Blalock, first vice president; Mrs. J. D. Osborne, second vice president; Mrs. Floyd McRae, Jr., treasurer; Mrs. Norris Broyles, recording secretary, and Mrs. Waldo Mallory, corresponding secretary.

The following classes in which exhibits will be arranged and the chairmen are named:

Class A—Interclub Competition. Occasional tables are to be shown in the loge of the club and the following clubs have been invited to compete: Peachtree Garden Club, Planters Garden Club, Mimosa Garden Club, Habersham Garden Club, Druid Hills Garden Club, Neighborhood Garden Club and Piedmont Garden Club. Chairman in charge of Class A, Mrs. William Huger.

Class B—Sunday night buffet supper tables.

Class C—Informal 1932 luncheon tables for the bridge foursome. Chairman in charge of Class B and Class C, Mrs. L. F. Montgomery.

Class D—Fruit, vegetables and flowers—or fruit and flowers—or vegetables and flowers as composition group. Chairman in charge of Class D, Mrs. Henry Tompkins.

Class E—Floor stands with arrangement of flowers, vines or shrubs. Chairman in charge of Class E, Mrs. Howell Caldwell.

Class F.—Silver picture frames with flat arrangement of flowers under glass. Chairman in charge of Class M, Mrs. Joel Hurt.

Class G—Arrangement of any flowers in white container. Chairman in charge of Class G, Mrs. W. F. Manry Jr.

Class H—Arrangement of any flowers in bottles, tea pots and pitchers. Chairman in charge of Class H, Mrs. Clark Howell Jr.

Class I—Arrangement of roses in any container. Chairman in charge of Class I, Mrs. Hugh Inman.

Class J—Arrangement of white flowers in black container. Chairman in charge of Class J, Mrs. Charles Rawson.

Class K—Arrangement of any flowers in clear glass container with use of stems to count. Chairman in charge of Class K, Mrs. R. L. Foreman Jr.

Class L—Arrangement of any flowers in metal containers. Chairman in charge of Class L, Mrs. William Parker.

Class M—Miniature arrangement of any flowers not over eight inches complete. Chairman in charge of Class M, Mrs. John Grant Jr.

There will be an award of merit for the finest flower arrangement in the show.

There will be a sweepstakes prize (president's trophy) for the outstanding exhibit, this to include the above classes as well as "specialties" at entrance, orchestra stand and alcove. These specialties are the interesting surprises of the show for the guests and are being carried out by some of the most artistic members of the club.

Mrs. John Copeland will serve as chairman of properties and Mrs. G. A. Nicolson Jr., Mrs. Charles Orme, Mrs. Norris Broyles, Mrs. Arthur Clarke, Mrs. Brooks Morgan and Mrs. Sherwood Hurt will be chairmen of specialties.

Dr. Sheldon Heads Guild of Organists

Dr. Charles Sheldon was elected dean of the Georgia chapter of the American Guild of Organists at an informal dinner at the Green Tree Tea room Tuesday evening. Dr. Sheldon succeeds Mrs. Bonita Crowe.

Dr. Sheldon is well known throughout the south as one of the foremost organists of this part of the country. He is organist at the First Presbyterian church and at the Jewish synagogue, having held both positions for many years, and is city organist of Atlanta. His radio programs have won him a large following over the country, and his efforts in the advancement of organ music and performers have prominently identified him with musical circles.

Others officers elected were: Mrs. John Felder, sub-dean; Mrs. William Griffith, registrar; Mrs. Victor Clarke, secretary; George Lee Hamrick, treasurer; Mrs. Stephen Banta, librarian, and Joseph Ragan, auditor.

Merited recognition of Mrs. Crowe's leadership was given in an article describing the activities of the guild during the 1931-32 season in the last issue of the "American Organist," a signal honor, since this magazine seldom gives space for individual recognition. A picture of Mrs. Crowe and a personal sketch of her accomplishments appeared with the article.

Siegel-Glassman Wedding Plans

Of interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement made today of the wedding plans of Miss Anne Siegel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Siegel, and Harry Shea Glassman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dave B. Glassman.

The wedding will be an event of Tuesday evening, May 24, at the Jewish Progressive Club. Rabbi Tobias Geffen will perform the ceremony before a large assemblage of friends and relatives. Immediately after the ceremony the bride-elect's parents will entertain the guests at a dinner-dance.

The bride-elect will have as her maid of honor her only sister, Miss Esta Siegel, and a cousin, Mrs. Mose Levine, of Birmingham, will be the matron of honor. Jack Maziar will act as the bridegroom-elect's best man.

The bridesmaids and groomsmen will be Misses Fannie Taffel, Sunny Mevlin and Anna Glassman, and Joe Seitz, Isadore Golden and Abe Siegel. Little Misses Phyllis Berman and Evelyn Elkon will act as flower girls.

Swimming Season Is Opened At Atlanta Woman's Club Pool

Mrs. A. Q. Smith, chairman of the swimming pool for the Atlanta Woman's Club, announces that the pool will be open Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Tuesday, Thursdays and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. The pool will also be open Sunday afternoons from 3 to 6 o'clock. The swimming ticket books are on sale with the maid at the pool.

Garden division of the club meets Tuesday, May 17, at 10:30 o'clock in the palm room of the clubhouse. Mrs. C. E. Faust will preside as acting chairman until the new chairman is appointed. Mrs. Charles Le Roux, of the Druid Hills Garden Club, will talk on "Roses," and will present illustrations of arrangements of roses for exhibitions. She will also discuss the plans for the Druid Hills rose show which will be held in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's Club Tuesday, May 24.

Mrs. William P. Dunn, recently reinstalled as president of the club, announces that a meeting of the executive board of the new administration will be held as soon as the organization of the board is completed.

Miss Dorothy Orr entertained Saturday at an elaborate luncheon honoring the members of her sorority. The table was placed in the banquet hall of the clubhouse and covers were laid for 40 guests.

The club calendar for the coming week is filled with delightful events, among which will be the morning musical given in the auditorium of the club Wednesday, May 18, by the Atlanta Music Club; the Writers' Club dinner, at which the president, Dr. Anderson Scruggs, will act as host, Thursday evening; the tea which will assemble 75 or more members of the O'Keefe Junior High P.-T. A. Friday, May 20, and the bridge-luncheon at which Miss Lynette Smith will entertain Saturday, May 21.

ceived his education at the Boys' High school, of Atlanta, later graduating from the Georgia School of Technology, where he was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. He is connected in business with the Creomulsion Company, Inc.

Alex Hopkins Jr. Is Christened.

In all the glory of his exquisite christening robe, adorable little Alexander Stephens Hopkins Jr. was baptized by Bishop Warren Candler last Sunday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aleck Hopkins, and of his grandmother, Mrs. Charles Hopkins. This sturdy youngster, who was born Tuesday, January 12, is claiming no little interest from the very younger contingent as well as in the social circles where his parents and his grandmother are such charming additions.

A host of gifts marked his birthday and perchance the most appreciated was the tiny gold ring and whistle which were presented to his father when he was a baby. The ring adorns the chubby finger of Aleck Jr. and the clear blast of the whistle is greeted by a heartfelt gurgle. From his lovely mother, the former Miss Dorothy Dutter, of North Carolina, he inherits a share of his personal charm, although friends declare that he reflects in no small measure his gracious paternal grandmother, Mrs. Hopkins.

Atlantans Visit Dumbarton House.

Washington, D. C., proved a magnet for other Atlantans recently, as Mesdames Joseph R. Lamar, George Winship, Richard W. Johnston, Robert C. Alston and Francis E. Block journeyed there for the purpose of attending the opening of Dumbarton house, national headquarters for the Colonial Dames of America. Regarded by competent authority as one of the finest examples of domestic architecture of the federal period, Dumbarton house was built in 1751, and the mansion houses a rare display of furnishment and equipment of the federal period. But, so carefully are the treasures disposed of, that the atmosphere of a home prevails.

The house is the only one of its type in Washington open to the public, and currently there is an exhibition of early American portraiture, miniature and a fascinating collection of dolls, dishes, portraits, garments and toys pertaining to childhood in revolutionary and federal periods.

The Atlantans attended the garden party given in the reconstructed garden enclosed by a paneled brick and plaster wall, where several hundred Colonial Dames came together for this crowning socia' event. Before them, spread in full-tide glory, were the tulip trees, mountain ash, fringe trees, sweet bay, honeysuckle, laburnium and rose acacia, the planting being rigidly confined to such as fit a garden of the period. Ivy and periwinkle from Mount Vernon, white violets from "Shirley," lilies of the valley from "Tudor Place" beautified the scene upon which stood many memorial gifts of garden furnishment.

Mrs. John Lynch To Attend Congress.

When the French steamer, De Grasse, sails from New York city on June 14, among its voyagers will be Mrs. John J. Lynch, of Atlanta. Her destination will be Dublin, Ireland, where she will attend the thirty-first International Eucharistic Congress, convening there June 22-26, inclusive.

More than 33 countries will be represented in the gathering of pilgrims at this congress—as the faithful will travel there from all over the world. There will be representatives from India, Central and South America, the islands of the South seas, the United States, the continent of Europe and the British dominion.

When the congress is adjourned Mrs. Lynch will visit Our Lady of Lourdes shrine, at Lourdes, France, and will include Paris, Venice and Florence in her itinerary. While in Rome she will be received in audience by Pope Pius XI at the vatican, and after that auspicious ceremony Mrs. Lynch will turn her thoughts towards Atlanta, expecting to reach here around September 1.

MISS SHARP TO BE BRIDE OF MR. KEELING

She received her education at the Girls' High school in this city and Washington Seminary, where she was a favorite with teachers and classmates.

Mr. Keeling is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. George William Keeling, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Atlanta. He is the brother of Mrs. James A. Cassidy, of Washington, who also formerly lived in Atlanta. Mr. Keeling's mother was before her marriage Miss Mary Margaret Kenny, daughter of the late Patrick J. Kenny and the late Mrs. Mary Bloomfield Kenny, the former being a member of a well-known Connecticut family and the latter being a representative of a prominent Atlanta family. The late William Jasper Keeling and the late Mrs. Elizabeth Greene Keeling, members of distinguished Georgia and Alabama families, were the bridegroom-elect's paternal grandparents.

Mr. Keeling is a graduate of Marist College and later completed his education at Spring Hill College in Mobile, Ala.

Following their marriage Mr. Keeling and his bride will make their home in the national capital, where the former is connected with the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company.

Mrs. Alston Tells Of Mrs. Hoover's Tea.

Returning from Washington, D. C., several days ago where she attended the formal dedication of the great choir and sanctuary of the national cathedral rising majestically on Mount St. Albans, Mrs. Robert C. Alston had much to tell regarding the impressive ceremony. More than 1,500 of the laity and clergy assembled in the national capital for this event, the laity garbed in fashionable spring attire, and the clergy donning purple and fine linen. Mrs. Herbert Hoover gave a tea party at the White House after the dedication services in compliment to the members of the national woman's committee of the cathedral, of which she is the national chairman. Mrs. Alston, the regional chairman; Mrs. Richard W. Johnston, chairman for Georgia, and Mrs. Arthur Tufts, Atlanta chairman of the national committee, were among Mrs. Hoover's guests.

Tea was served in the state dining room, where Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of Chief Justice Hughes, poured tea from a massive silver service placed at one end of the gorgeously decorated table. Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. Alston chatted of this and that over the tea cups, discovering during their conversation that they had many mutual friends. The first lady of the land received her 30 distinguished guests in the blue room of the White House as is her custom. She wore a blue chiffon gown, which was vastly becoming to her pink cheeks and silvery hair, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses culled from the White House gardens. She rarely ever leaves the blue room during one of her parties, but as she was entertaining such a limited number of guests, Mrs. Hoover repaired to the state dining room to sip a cup of tea with the intimate gathering of women. Mrs. Dolly Gann lent her charming presence to the White House tea, and Mrs. Alston was quite attracted by her cordial and vivacious manner and her interest in going to North Carolina next month to contact southern women.

Col. and Mrs. Morey Return From Florida.

Among returning vacationists who have been seeking relaxation in sunny southern climes during the winter and early spring months are Colonel Lewis Sidney Morey, U. S. A., and Mrs. Morey, popular members of the army set who have been sojourning at Key West, Fla. Their picturesque cottage, nestled in a grove of waving palms and brilliant hued hibiscus, graced the lawns while a wide expanse of ocean with white waves breaking on the sandy beach afforded a perfect view from the wide porch.

Deep-sea fishing proved a favorite pastime and swimming found earnest advocates in both Colonel Morey and his charming wife. During their stay they made interesting side trips to historic spots and resorts. Congenial members of the military circles occupied adjoining cottages and gay little dinners, luncheons and long mornings on the porch over rubbers of bridge occupied many hours. Delicious sea foods were served daily, prepared by the skillful hands of experts, and each dish offered something different and tempting.

Governors' Dinner Recalls Tradition.

President and Mrs. Hoover's dinner given recently at the White House to the governors of the states and their ladies, at which Governor R. B. Russell Jr. and his sister, Miss Ina Russell, represented Georgia, served to recall that the United States, as young as it is, has a well-established tradition. The governors and their ladies were seated at the table in accordance with their rank, which means the date on which each state gave its allegiance to the federal constitution.

The constitutional convention met at Philadelphia for nearly four months in the summer of 1787, adjourning on September 17 with the agreement that when nine of the states, members of the confederation, had ratified the constitution by popular convention it should become the law of the land. This is the order in which the 13 original states accepted the document: Delaware, December 7, 1787; Pennsylvania, December 12, 1787; New Jersey, December 18, 1787; Georgia, January 2, 1788; Connecticut, January 9, 1788; Massachusetts, February 6, 1788; Maryland, April 28, 1788; South Carolina, May 23, 1788; New Hampshire, June 21, 1788; Virginia, June 26, 1788; New York, July 26, 1788; North Carolina, November 21, 1789; Rhode Island, May 29, 1790.

By the aforementioned dates was determined the social rank of each state, the seats of the governor and his lady at the dinner not being determined by population, size, wealth or some other material factor as is ofttimes imagined. The banquet table was resplendent with butterfly roses, Marguerite daisies, masses of maiden hair fern, huge compotes of luscious fruits, towering, many-branched candelabra carrying white tapers and the White House gold plate, cut lass with incrested coat of arms of the United States, and the famous gold-mirrored centerpiece and epergnes.

A small cream-colored envelope bearing the name of Governor Russell and embossed with the gold crest of the United States, was presented to him and when it was opened revealed the name of his fair partner, Mrs. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania. There, too, was a diagram of the table with the president's place especially indicated, and the seats of his guests were designated by a certain number of X's, meaning that each governor was to occupy a chair so many X's removed from the president's place at the table. After dinner a musical program was rendered by Ernest Schilling, noted pianist and composer, and by the Goedon string quartet. The program repeated the cream-colored tone of the invitation and bore the gold crest of the United States. Names of the musicians and the musical numbers were engraved in a tiny folder, and compositions of Dittersdorf and Chopin, and original compositions by Mr. Schelling were played for the entertainment of the distinguished company.

Mrs. J. E. Hickey To Present Diplomas.

It is exceedingly appropriate that Mrs. James E. Hickey is the trustee sponsor for the graduating class at Tallulah Falls Industrial School and will present 17 diplomas to the high school graduates. Especial interest is attached to the fact that one of the graduates to whom she will hand a diploma, is her scholarship pupil, a girl to whom she has shown constant and affectionate interest and care during the many years.

Mrs. Hickey is the donor of the Ada Reynolds Alexander perpetual scholarship in memory of her mother, the late Mrs. James F. Alexander. The late scholarship is to be known as the William Sanders Hickey perpetual scholarship, in memory of the late Mr. Hickey's son, and by bequest, the late James E. Hickey created the Sallie Sanders Hickey scholarship fund, in memory of his first wife and the mother of his three sons. Another perpetual scholarship closely allied to the aforementioned is the Nannie Reynolds Maddox perpetual scholarship, established by a former Atlantan, Mrs. Henry S. Jackson, now a resident of New York, in memory of her mother, the late Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, because the late Mrs. Maddox and the late Mrs. Alexander were sisters.

Mrs. Robert Purse To Ride 'My Dream.'

Society will mark May 20 and May 21 as red-letter days on the social calendar, as it is upon these dates that the brilliant horse show will be staged in Piedmont park. Particular interest centers in the participation in this equitation event, as Mrs. Robert Purse Jr., of Chattanooga, Tenn., will exhibit her spirited mount, "My Dream."

Ever since the former Miss Mary Allgood Jones was knee-high to a duck, she has known how to ride and show the marvelous gaits of her favorite horse. Her understanding of horse flesh is a matter of inheritance from her mother, the late Mrs. John Ashley Jones, of Atlanta, who was a noted equestrienne and won ever so many trophies in every horse show that she had entries. Mrs. Purse has followed in the footsteps of her mother, as she, too, has blue ribbons and trophies galore, which she has won with her blooded animals.

Atlanta Horse Show Association is arranging the details for the auspicious event, from which the Young Matrons' Circle of Tallulah Falls School will reap a certain percentage to be applied to the education of under-privileged children, who would otherwise be denied this educational advantage.

Mrs. Russell Given Plate by Quota Club.

A rare Martha Washington states plate was presented by the Quota Club to gracious Mrs. Richard B. Russell, mother of Georgia's chief executive, at the recent meeting of the club. The plate was one of the few copies being reproduced by the National Quota Club and repeating in its workmanship the lines and colors of the original which is in the Smithsonian Institution in a loan collection of Mrs. Frances W. Dickins. The original plate belonged to a set which Martha Washington mentions in her will as the "sett of china given to me by Mr. Va Braam" and called by some authorities the Martha Washington states pattern.

In the center of the plate appears the interlaced monogram of Martha Washington on a gold disc representing the rising sun of the republic. It is surrounded by a wreath of olive and laurel leaves symbolizing peace. From the wreath extend rays of gold touching a chain composed of 15 large links with the name of one of the original states inscribed in each link, Vermont and Kentucky having been added to the original 13. A ribbon scroll on the sun's rays has the words, "Decus et tatamen ab illo" inscribed on it which translated means "A glory and defense from that." Around the linked chain formed by the names of the states is a golden serpent with its tail caught in its mouth as the symbol of eternity.

Senator Cohen Finds Former Associate.

The first thing Senator John S. Cohen, of the charming smile and debonnaire manner, did after being sworn in as new senator from Georgia in Washington, D. C., was to walk up to the press gallery to see who was left of the old gang with whom he was associated in 1893. He found only one colleague from those old days, Charles Hamilton, of the Troy, N. Y., Times, who will soon round out a half century in the press gallery. Senator Cohen was a Washington, D. C., correspondent in his early journalistic days on Capitol Hill.

Miss Brooks and Mr. Kellam Weds At Second Baptist Church July 12

Miss Eula Mae Brooks, beautiful young daughter of Arthur Brooks, of Douglas, Ga., whose engagement is announced today to Robert Jenkins Kellam, of Atlanta, the marriage to be an event of July 12. Photograph by Elliott's Peachtree studio.

DOUGLAS, Ga., May 14.—Friends throughout the state are interested in the announcement made by Arthur Brooks of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Eula Mae Brooks, to Robert Jenkins Kellam, of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized Tuesday evening, July 12, at 8:30 o'clock, at the Second Baptist church in Atlanta. Dr. Ryland Knight will perform the ceremony.

Miss Brooks is the youngest daughter of her parents. Her mother was formerly Miss Elizabeth Trout, daughter of the late Elizabeth Appleby and Thomas Washington Trout, of Atlanta. On her paternal side the bride-elect is a descendant of the Brooks and Long families of north Georgia and Virginia. Her sisters are Mrs. J. R. Exum and Miss Annette Brooks, both of Atlanta. Mr. Brooks has been a leader in the civic and political life of Douglas for many years. Since going to Atlanta to reside the bride-elect's brunet beauty and charming personality have made her beloved by a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Kellam is the son of Mrs. John Fleming Kellam Sr. and the late Mr. Kellam, who was one of the oldest residents of Atlanta, and was well-known in business and social circles. His paternal grandparents were the late David Seth Kellam and Mrs. Mary Fleming Kellam, beloved pioneer residents of Atlanta. His mother, before her marriage, was Miss Katherine Charlton Jenkins, daughter of the late David Lawrence Jenkins and Mrs. Anna Talulah Jenkins, formerly of Georgia, now of New York.

Mr. Kellam is a graduate of Tech High school of Atlanta, later attending the Atlanta Law school, where he was a member of the Delta Theta Phi fraternity. He is prominently connected with the Dennison Manufacturing Company.

Following the wedding ceremony, a reception including only the wedding party and the immediate families of the bride-elect and bridegroom-elect will be held at the home of Mrs. John Fleming Kellam Sr., after which Mr. Kellam and his bride will leave for a wedding journey through Virginia and points in the east, returning to make their home in Atlanta.

Mrs. Armine R. Kellam will entertain at her home, 1150 North avenue, N. E., Atlanta, with an announcement tea honoring Miss Brooks and Mr. Kellam this afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

Assisting in entertaining will be Miss Annette Brooks, Mrs. J. F. Kellam, Mrs. E. W. Sartain, Mrs. W. H. Mahone, Mrs. J. F. Kellam Jr., Miss Jane Lewis and Miss Isabell Morrison. One hundred friends of the young couple will call during the afternoon.

Miss Smith To Wed W. H. Perkerson

LAGRANGE, Ga., May 14.—Mr. and Mrs. George W. Smith Sr. announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Isabelle Smith, to W. H. Perkerson, also of LaGrange, formerly of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized in June.

Miss Smith is a charming member of the younger set of LaGrange and has a host of friends here. She graduated from LaGrange High school and LaGrange College, receiving her bachelor of arts degree in 1930. Mrs. Kiser Whatley, George Smith Jr., Miss Anne Smith, Mark Smith and Jack Smith, of LaGrange, and Ernest Smith, of Macon, are her sisters and brothers. For the past year Miss Smith has taught at Center school.

Mr. Perkerson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Perkerson, of Greenville. He came to LaGrange from Atlanta several years ago and is connected in business here. Both Miss Smith and Mr. Perkerson are well known and will be attractive additions to the young married group.

St. Joseph's Nurses' School Holds Graduation Exercises at Church

Graduation exercises of the senior class of the Nurses' Training school at St. Joseph's Infirmary will be held with impressive solemnity Sunday at 11 o'clock in the Church of the Sacred Heart. After the singing of the high mass the commencement address will be delivered by Rev. Father Cotter. The graduates will be awarded their diplomas by Dr. Leo Daley, president of the hospital's medical staff. At St. Joseph's the Sisters of Mercy will give a dinner in their honor, which will feature toasts and farewells to their teachers and companions.

Other festivities in honor of the class of '32 include a dinner at the Brookhaven Country Club, given Wednesday evening by the intermediate class of the school. To this dinner were also invited the training school superintendent, Miss A. B. Mace, the hospital supervisors and several friends and patronesses.

A theater party was given the graduates Friday evening by one of the school's patrons, Albert Boyston, at "The Grand Hotel." Miss Margaret Bartley, an alumna of the school, has invited the class for a picnic Tuesday at the summer home of Mrs. Barnett A. Bell.

This class has completed with unusual brilliancy the three-year course required at St. Joseph's Infirmary. The requirements for admission to this school are strict and the standards maintained are high. The lectures on required subjects are given by prominent members of the hospital medical staff supplemented by professors from the Marist and Emory Colleges.

The following are members of the graduating class of St. Joseph's Training School for Nurses:

Girls' High School Graduates of 1922 Will Hold Reunion on Friday, May 22

The class of 1922 of Girls' High school will hold a 10-year reunion on Friday, May 20, at the school on Rosalia street at 12:30 o'clock. Luncheon will be planned and served by the home economics department, under the leadership and instruction of Miss Clara Lee Cone. Following lunch, letters from out-of-town members of the class unable to attend will be read.

This class is an unusual one, having been the fiftieth graduating class of Girls' High school in the old building which stood on the present site of the city hall. In 1922 there were 129 girls graduated, and out of that number a goodly percentage keeps in touch with each other. Five years ago a similar reunion as the one planned for May 20 was held, and a large number attended. It is expected that an almost equally large attendance will grace this 10-year reunion. Letters are coming in from regretful classmates from out of town, desiring to be present in spirit if not in the flesh.

Mrs. L. M. Shadgett, who will be remembered by her classmates as Miss Olive Hall, president of Mallon Society and winner of the silver cup for the best all-round girl in 1922, heads a committee on plans for the forthcoming reunion. Assisting on the committee are Misses Sarah Slaughter, Julia Patton, Mesdames Willie May Coleman Duncan, Hazel Huff Monaghan and Leonora Anderson Morgan.

Graduates of the class of 1922 failing to receive announcements of the reunion will please communicate at once with Mrs. Olive Hall Shadgett, Hemlock 0683. Many names could not be found in the telephone directory, and therefore some may fail to be informed of the reunion other than through the press. Mrs. Shadgett requests that those intending to be present at the luncheon Friday, May 20, will please put in their reservations, either by phone or mail, at the earliest opportunity. Mrs. Shadgett's address is 1454 Piedmont avenue, N. E.

Perennial Garden Club To Hold Flower Show.

Spring flower show of the Perennial Garden Club will be held at the home of Mrs. William B. Spann, 798 Oakdale road, Friday, May 20, from 3 to 5 o'clock. All friends are invited. Exhibits are to be entered between the hours of 10 and 11:30 o'clock and not to be removed until after 5 o'clock. Each member is required to make at least one entry.

Refreshment committee is to be headed by Mrs. John Brickman, assisted by Mesdames D. F. McClatchey, Arnold Hepp and Sage Harden. Mesdames Walter Lamb, Fritz Jones, Miss May Hudson and Mrs. John D. Evans compose the committee on arrangements. The reception committee is composed of Mesdames W. B. Spann, James A. Bachman, Walter Lamb, Miss May Hudson, Mrs. Fritz Jones and Mrs. J. D. Evans.

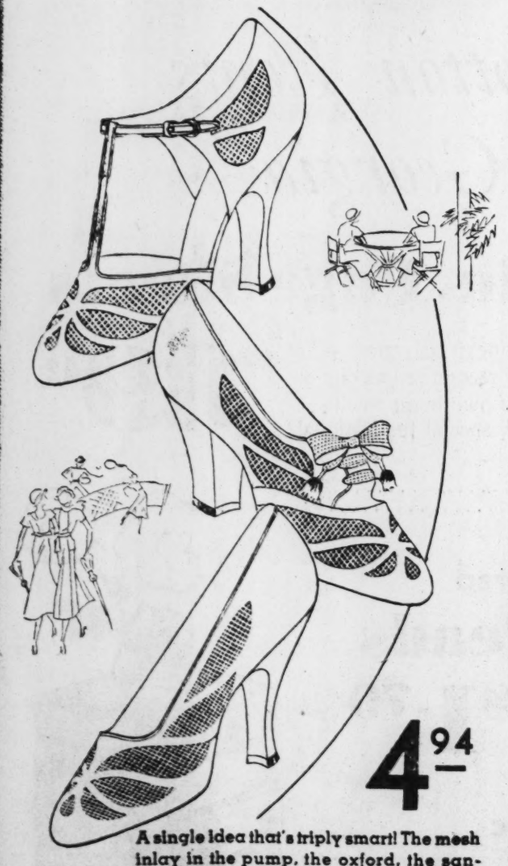

Mrs. William Huck is chairman of tables and Mrs. David D. Long has charge of the publicity. The judges are Mesdames Bruce Hall, Carl Lewis, DeWitt Norton and Mattie Kirkpatrick.

Alumnae Tea.

The Atlanta Normal Training School alumnae will have a tea at the Broad Street Tavern tea room Friday, May 20, at 3:15 o'clock. All members are invited and reservations may be made by calling Elizabeth Ramey Thompson, at RA. 1343, or Dorothy Collier, at RA. 1218, for reservations.

Junior Music Club.

Alice Cox Reins Junior Music Club will present its annual recital of piano and violin selections Tuesday, May 17, at 3:30 o'clock in the Cox College auditorium, College Park. The program is unique this year in that the second half is rendered by a few advanced pupils presented in a wide variety of selections showing the breadth of their musicianship. Another unusual feature is the use of several selections in honor of the George Washington bicentennial celebration being held throughout this year. Besides the solo work there are ensemble selections. The public is invited.

Miss Rice and Mr. Lowry Wed At June Ceremony in Smyrna, Ga.

Charming Miss Judith Rice, daughter of Mrs. Parker Merimoth Rice, of Smyrna, whose engagement is announced today to Albert Brooke Shide Lowry, the marriage to be solemnized Wednesday evening, June 22, in the Smyrna Methodist church. Photo by Thurston Hatcher.

Mrs. Parker Merimoth Rice, of Smyrna, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Judith Lovejoy Rice, to Albert Brooke Shide Lowry, the marriage to take place Wednesday, June 22, at 8:30 o'clock in the Smyrna Methodist church. The lovely bride-elect is the younger daughter of Mrs. Rice and the late Parker M. Rice, her only sister being Mrs. Albert Brawner. Her father was a prominent citizen of Cobb county, having been for a number of years president of the Bank of Smyrna, and her mother was formerly Miss Blanche Ruff. The bride-elect bears the maiden name of her maternal great-grandmother, Judith Lovejoy, who married Martin L. Ruff.

She is the granddaughter of Colonel Z. A. Rice, pioneer citizen of Atlanta, who served with distinction as colonel in General T. R. R. Cobb's legion during the Civil War. Through her paternal lineage she is descended from the Rices of South Carolina, the Bomars of Virginia and the Green and Ely families of Bloomfield, N. J. Miss Rice attended Wesleyan College at Macon, Ga., is a graduate of Atlanta Normal school and Oglethorpe University, and for the past three years she has taught in the public schools of Atlanta.

Mr. Lowry is the son of Mrs. Elmer R. Lowry and the late Elmer R. Lowry. His only brother is Elmer Lowry, of Louisville, Ky. His mother was, before her marriage, Miss Florence Lowry, of Monroe, Ohio. During his early childhood he moved with his parents from Indianapolis, Ind., to Atlanta. His father was prominently identified with the Atlanta Lodge of Elks, of which he was a charter member. He served that organization as exalted ruler.

On his paternal side Mr. Lowry is descended from the Le Sourds, of Maryland, and the Lowrys of Ohio. On his maternal side he is descended from the Shides and Colletts of Ohio and the Franks of Pennsylvania. He received his education at Boys' High school and Georgia School of Technology. For the past six years he has been associated with the Sears-Roebuck Company in Atlanta. For a number of years Mr. Lowry has been active in Boy Scout work in Atlanta.

A number of prenuptial parties are planned for this popular couple, and those entertaining will be Mesdames Albert Brawner, P. M. Rice Jr., C. A. Pope, Lillian Rice, E. R. Lowry, John Higginbothem, Allen Neilson Jr., Wilton Carson and Misses Isabelle Manning, Wilma Martin, Colene Reed and Mary Sue Pollock.

Emory Receives Confederacy Seal.

The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., will present to Emory University a copy of the seal of the Confederacy Friday morning, May 20, at 10 o'clock at the chapel exercises. The presentation will be under the direction of Mrs. Charles Love, chairman of portraits in schools and colleges, and is the gift of the president, Mrs. Warren D. White. Mrs. William J. Poole, chairman of executive board, will give a sketch of the history of the seal.

John R. Wilkinson O. E. S. To Entertain.

John R. Wilkinson chapter, O. E. S., will entertain members of the order at the meeting Monday evening, May 16, at 8 o'clock, in the chapter hall, corner Bankhead avenue and Ashby street. Invitation is extended by Mrs. Alice Gibbs, the worthy matron, and S. C. Gibbs, the worthy patron, to members of the order.

The guests of honor will be Miss Ethel Jackson, of Athens, associate grand matron; Harry Garrett, associate grand patron; Mrs. Donna Lawhorn, grand condustress; Mrs. Estelle Wilson, grand Ruth; Mrs. Bessie Barre, grand Esther; Mrs. Pauline Dillon, grand poet-laureate; Mrs. Anna Davis, Miss Bonnie Roberts, Mrs. Avis Brown, D. G. McMillan, Rev. Edmondson and Paul Hughes, grand instructors for Atlanta and Chattahoochee districts.

Maple Grove No. 86.

Maple Grove No. 86, Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, held a service Thursday in the hall at the Masonic temple, West End. Miss Margaret Carpenter was presented by her father and introduced into the adult department of the circle following her junior graduation. Class initiation of five new members who were given the ritualistic work of the society was held. Mrs. Hale, guardian of Athens grove; Mrs. Viola Hayes, guardian of Progressive grove, and Miss Maggie Lou Hayes were welcomed by the guardian, Mrs. Ruth Bowers.

Mrs. Eleanor Wingate, chairman of the telephone committee, reported as to the splendid progress made with the Red Cross work and requested that every member attend these spend-the-day meetings and help carry on the work which is especially needed at this time; A number of talks were made for the good of the society, and names were drawn for the secret friends for the month. Every member is urged to give special attention to the name drawn. The telephone committees will meet with Mrs. C. W. Scarborough, 807 North Boulevard, next Wednesday. Members are requested to be present.

Skating Party.

La Cachiporra, a social club of West End, met Friday evening and entertained at a skating party. This club was recently organized and includes a number of the younger set of West End.

The members are Jimmy Sanders, Mary Ray, Elizabeth Proctor, Elaine Chapman, Jimmy Busbee, George Kingston, Catherine Littleton, Jack Talbot, Lucile Jones, Dot Adamson, John Fowler, Paul Lucas, Jimmy Ryle, Harry Nickelson, John McFarlane and others.

Jarrett—Cooper.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Opal Jarrett to J. Lamar Cooper, the wedding taking place April 16 at the home of the bridegroom's sister, Miss Vera Cooper, on Grant street, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Lietch.

Miss Ora Cooper, of Mitchell, Ga., sister of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant. Wallace Scott acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper are at home at 818 Grant street, S. E.

Miss Davis Weds Hal Louis Saunders.

MORGAN, Ga., May 14.—Of interest to a wide circle of friends in southwest Georgia is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Evelyn Davis and Hal Louis Saunders, both of Coleman, Ga., the marriage having taken place in Marshallville December 26, 1931.

Mrs. Saunders is the daughter of Mrs. Wistee H. Davis, of Hapeville. She is a graduate of Coleman High school and later attended G. S. T. C. at Athens. For the past two years she has been a member of the Morgan High school faculty. Mrs. Saunders is a young woman of brunet beauty and charming personality.

Mr. Saunders is a prominent young businessman engaged in extensive farming.

Woodberry Hall Commencement Service To Be Held at St. Luke's

Woodberry Hall will hold its commencement service this morning at St. Luke's Episcopal church, of which the Rev. John Moore Walker is rector. The beautiful festal service of Whitsunday marks the day, with a sermon appropriate to the birthday of the church, the feast of Pentecost. Hugh Hodgson, organist and choirmaster, with full choir, will give a reverential and classical program of appropriate music for Whitsunday.

The graduation exercises will take place Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the Peachtree Christian church. A welcome will be extended by the pastor, the Rev. Robert W. Burns. The program will be opened with two chorus numbers, "A Venetian Summer Night" and "By the Waters of Minnetonka," directed by Miss Frances Woodberry, and with Miss Marguerite Strachan at the piano.

The speaker of the evening, W. L. Downs, state high school supervisor, will bring a message from his experience in the educational world, enriched by a broad culture and sympathetic understanding of the life of young people. The Right Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., will address the graduates and deliver the diplomas.

The valedictorian, Miss Barbara Noot, is a brilliant first honor graduate, and the salutatorian, Miss Arva Graham Johnston, is an honor graduate of high literary achievement and writer of many successful articles. The medals and prizes of the patriotic organizations will form a distinctive part of the program, not only for the winners but the distinguished women who will present them with addresses.

Mayflower Club.

Mayflower Garden Club met Friday with Mrs. Jett Henson at her home on Amsterdam avenue, with the president, Mrs. D. K. Johnston, presiding. Mrs. Alexander Dahl made an interesting talk on the "Arrangement of Flowers," showing a number of artistic arrangements.

The club will have its spring flower show at the home of Mrs. W. T. Richardson on Virginia avenue on June 3. Mrs. Johnson presented members with chrysanthemum plants.

H. Hofmayer, of Albany, historian; Miss Katherine Dozier, of Gainesville, parliamentarian.
OFFICERS OF ATLANTA COUNCIL OF PARENTS AND TEACHERS—Mrs. Robert Cheshire, president; Mrs. Byron Matthews, vice president; Mrs. W. L. McCalley, secretary; Mrs. Raymond O'Kelley, treasurer.

Citizenship Drive Progress Reported by State President

BY MRS. R. H. HANKINSON, of McDonough, President of Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers.

In response to the citizenship drive launched last week the Fifth Avenue P.-T. A. in Decatur reports 75 members registered voters as shown by city hall and courthouse records. Telephone messages were sent to members not registered.

The Woodland Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. R. C. Fryer Jr., president, reports 100 per cent registration of membership. Other reports will be followed with interest.

An item challenging the attention of Georgia parents and teachers was the granting to George I. Martin, of Sylvester, Ga., the title of "Master Teacher of the Southern Region," by the supervisors of the southern regional conference, and a tangible evidence of excellence in the shape of the silver loving cup setting forth the record of accomplishments.

The conferring of the title was in recognition of outstanding work as a teacher in the field of vocational agricultural education, and as a leader in the betterment of community life.

Parents and teachers are interested in the advancement of children and in the betterment of educational opportunity for all children. The teacher is a large part of any school, and this evidence of outstanding effort and ability calls forth the admiration of the entire Georgia congress, as well as elicits the interest of the entire southern region covered in the award.

Mrs. J. S. Hawks, state chairman for institutes, will conduct an all-day parent-teacher training class at Helen on May 14. Mrs. Hawks will have as her audience the entire teaching force of the county, and such lay leaders from the several school committees as may be interested in furthering the educational program through Parent-Teacher channels.

Georgia will be represented at the national convention, May 15-20, by Mrs. Charles Trowbridge, Mrs. Charles Center, Mrs. Katherine Weathersbee, College Park, Ga.; Mrs. W. B. Pulliam, Columbus, Ga., and the president.

A national home-making conference under direction of Commissioner of Education William John Cooper will open the convention. The object of the conference is to present a comprehensive view of home economics, and to receive suggestions from the congress as to how the home economics program can be further advanced.

Immediately after the convention new handbooks and literature will be available to units of the Georgia congress.

Spring St. P.-T. A. Awarded Certificate

At the final meeting of Spring Street School P.-T. A., Tuesday, Mrs. S. B. Burroughs, president, closed her year's work with the announcement that the Spring Street Parent-Teacher Association had been awarded a certificate as a superior association at the recent state convention held in Macon. Mrs. John W. Turner succeeds Mrs. Burroughs as president. Serving with Mrs. Turner as officers will be Mrs. L. W. Pierce, recording secretary; Mrs. Hughes Roberts, treasurer, and Mrs. Leonard Roan, corresponding secretary. Outstanding were the reports of the year's grade chairmen, who are Mesdames M. L. Rahner, Leonard Roan, A. J. McIntyre, Logan Bleckley Jr., J. S. Budd Jr., C. H. Strong, I. C. Humphries, B. L. Layton, T. W. Tift, H. C. Malone and H. L. Fincher. Each chairman reported that all requests and requirements of her respective grade had been met.

The keynote of the year's work was the child welfare work accomplished in the 100 per cent health and dental certificates for Spring Street school pupils and in the donation of a case of milk daily to another school; sandwiches, clothing donated and in supplying clothing and expenses to a former Spring Street school pupil in a junior high school. Thursday, under the leadership of Mrs. Paul Ackerley, reading chairman, more than 400 children of the school were given a party by the P.-T. A. for having read five books or more since their first party for reading in February, when 231 pupils had read the required five books or more.

Gifts of appreciation were given to Miss Helen Riley, representative of the Juillard Foundation in Atlanta for her series of six lectures on musical appreciation given to the Spring Street body and others interested. The school principal, Miss Joe Berman, and the teachers received gifts, while the board of directors of the association presented Mrs. Burroughs with a silver bowl for her leadership as president.

As an entertaining feature of the meeting the Spring Street School Choral Club gave several numbers under the direction of Miss Wall, teacher and musician. The talented boys and girls represented the sixth grade of the school.

North Avenue P.-T. A.

Mrs. Charles Nellans was re-elected president of the North Avenue School P.-T. A. at the last meeting. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Miss Thyrza Askew; recording secretary, Mrs. E. S. Papy; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. B. Mitchell, and treasurer, Mrs. Otis Barge.

At this meeting there was a fashion show and exhibit of dresses made in the home economics department under the direction of Mrs. Winfrey Peek. Twenty-five girls modeled their dresses. The Glee Club sang one selection, "The Song of India," which they sang at its recent concert.

John Carey P.-T. A.

John Carey P.-T. A. met last Thursday and plans were made for entertainments to be given weekly for the purpose of raising funds for various needs of school work of pupils. The handsome blue and gold banner donated to the pupils by the association, was displayed for the guests present. The P.-T. A. will also hold meetings during the summer months at homes of members of the association.

Joe Brown Orchestra Entertains P.-T. A.

Selections by the school orchestra opened the Joe E. Brown P.-T. A. meeting held last Monday. Mrs. J. Q. Hooper gave an outline of accomplishments gained by the association-at-large during the year, under the leadership of the executive board. Most outstanding were Mrs. N. W. Jordan, membership chairman, securing 502 paid members; Mrs. G. N. McCann, welfare chairman, whose ceaseless efforts provided aid in many different necessities for more than 200 individuals, and Mrs. E. L. Hutchins, program chairman, who arranged such profitable and encouraging programs. Through the efforts of these and all other members, the association was awarded a certificate for superiority.

Mrs. Raymond O'Kelly, as delegate, gave a report of the high points of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers' convention, the theme being "Safeguarding the Child." The fifth district was awarded the banner for the largest number of pre-school associations.

Mrs. C. M. Neal, faculty representative, discussed the project of summer activities, pleading for co-operation with the children in making the required points for merits awarded in the fall, when an exhibit will be arranged to display all handiwork and records. The principal, Mr. Martin, added that the summer vacation period in regard to children was the most crucial part of the year, that the developing of high ideals and beneficial habits during the rest period was far more important than facts. He also called attention to the newly purchased drapes and shades and the decoration for the auditorium, and the improvements being made on the school grounds, which the faculty generously presented to the school.

Anouncement was made regarding the American Home Economics Association convention to be held in Atlanta, June 20-25. Courtesy cards were filled out for the benefit of the delegates.

The newly elected officers to serve next year are Mrs. J. Q. Hooper, president; Mrs. J. S. Hamilton, Mrs. J. Q. McMullian, Mrs. Garland McCart, Mrs A. Irwin, Mrs. B. O. Light, Mrs. Leona Bryant and Mrs. A. A. Williams, the seven vice presidents; Mrs. C. H. Bowden, recording secretary; Mrs. W. W. Scott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. L. Waterhouse, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas McRae, auditor, and Mrs. C. M. Settle, parliamentarian.

The classes having the highest average were: Ninth grades, Mr. Hankinson and Mr. Griffith; eighth grades, Miss Emerson and Miss Kops; seventh grades, Miss Massenling and Miss Burney.

Pre-Schol Circle.

Pre-School circle of Lakewood met recently in the school auditorium with Mrs. H. A. Lytwich presiding. Mrs. Paul Cannon announced the clinic meeting for Friday and urged that every pre-school child in the community be brought to the clinic. Dr. Stephens Redd has charge of the clinic and is assisted by a capable nurse. The nominating committee report was given by Mrs. Alewin and the following officers were elected: Mrs. H. E. Thompson, president; Mrs. L. G. Smith, vice president; Mrs. Kathleen Hayse, secretary; Mrs. F. L. Adams, treasurer. Mrs. H. A. Lytwich spoke on "Child Problems" and Mrs. H. E. Thompson spoke briefly on her plans for the forthcoming year as the circle president.

William A. Bass P.-T.A. Hears Talk By Dr. W. Young

Dr. W. W. Young, well-known Atlanta psychiatrist, addressed the final meeting of the William A. Bass Junior High School P.-T. A. Wednesday at the school auditorium. Dr. Young stressed the importance of parents knowing themselves before they can successfully train and teach their children, and recommended the following two books as helpful material: "Discovering Ourselves" and "The Human Mind." He also stated the greatest responsibility of a parent is teaching their children independence.

As this was the final meeting of the year, Mrs. A. J. Hollingsworth, president, gave the annual reports for all chairmen. Outstanding work was done by the welfare committee in helping many children with car fare, lunches, clothes and medical aid. Reading chairman reported over 1,100 reading cards issued to Bass students. The report of Mrs. William V. Kingdon, chairman of the "junior high achievement fund," showed $650 now in actual use by worthy boys and girls.

W. J. Scott, principal, told of taking over 50 students to Athens to attend the state meeting of the Henry Grady school of journalism, and the winning of the cup for largest attendance. Also in competition with all other junior high school papers in the state, the Bass paper, Arial, won the highest honor, the "merit distinction certificate" with a total of 88 points.

Miss Carrie Booker, assistant principal, who has been at Bass since its opening year in 1923, reviewed the accomplishments of the P.-T. A., beginning with the necessity of "selling" junior high schools to the people of Atlanta, helping equip the school, starting a library, providing nurse and medical examinations, helping with the beautification of the grounds, and finally, the establishing of a student loan fund for junior high school boys and girls.

The following officers for the forthcoming year were elected and installed: Mrs. George Powell, president; Mrs. Ralph McClelland, first vice president; Mrs. F. B. Davenport, second vice president; Mrs. Arthur Anderson, third vice president; Mrs. U. T. Koch, fourth vice president; Mrs. John Cunningham, fifth vice president; Mrs. I. Aronstam, sixth vice president; Mrs. W. L. Wilson, seventh vice president; Mrs. R. K. Babbington, secretary; Mrs. A. J. Hollingsworth, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Sheldon, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. W. Moody, corresponding secretary.

Tenth Street P.-T. A. To Unveil Tablet in Honor of Mrs. Newport

A handsome bronze tablet, honoring the retired principal, Mrs. E. D. Newport, will be unveiled by the Tenth Street P.-T. A. Friday, May 20, at 12 o'clock noon in the school auditorium. The tablet will be presented by the retiring president of the association, Mrs. John A. Beall, and will be received by Miss Rosa Berman, who began teaching at the Tenth Street school with Mrs. Newport 26 years ago when the school was first opened. The school was organized in September, 1905 in the present Elks home with the school building being ready for occupancy February 6, 1906. The first enrollment of a public school in the eighth ward, the northern boundary being Fourteenth street, was in the Tenth Street school with a faculty consisting of a principal and six teachers. In 12 years the enrollment was more than 1,000 children, housed in the original building with two annexes.

Tenth Street school has numbered in its faculty at different times three outstanding principals of Atlanta schools, including Miss Eva Corrigan, of Highland; Miss Maggie Solomon, of Formwalt, and Mrs. Arthur Pew, of Goldsmith. Thousands of Tenth Street boys and girls are now leading citizens of Atlanta.

Mrs. Ellie D. Newport entered the Atlanta public school system in 1892. She served seven years as elementary teacher in the old Walker Street school, three years in Girls' High as head of science, three years as assistant principal of Ivy Street school and 26 years as principal of Tenth Street school.

Mrs. Newport, a daughter of a Methodist minister, was born in Meriwether county and attended the common schools of Georgia, graduating from Girls' High school in Atlanta. She attended the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, the Peabody Normal College in Nashville, and has taken 12 summers of extension work at the following institutions of learning, becoming one of the best qualified principals in the city of Atlanta: Four summers at the University of Chicago, two summers at Emory College, Oxford, Ga.; one summer at Harvard University, one summer at the University of New York, one summer at Asheville, N. C.; two summers at Peabody College for Teachers, at Nashville; one summer at the University of Georgia.

Ella Smillie P.-T.A. Honors Mrs. Harwell

After seven years of excellent co-operation in the work of the Ella W. Smillie P.-T. A., the retiring president, Mrs. David J. Harwell, bid farewell, and thanked her co-workers for their untiring efforts, and the faculty for their inspiration, and introduced Mrs. Robert Cheshire, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, who installed the following officers for the forthcoming year: Mrs. John Funke, president; Mrs. M. Klausman, vice president; Mrs. S. A. Fraser, treasurer; Mrs. Walter Chapman, recording secretary and Mrs. J. E. Proctor, corresponding secretary.

Being daddies' night, Dr. Samuel S. Daughtry, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, one of the daddies, was the speaker. After winning the attention of the children and grownups alike with introductory remarks, he spoke of the selection of a street on which to live, choosing from the ones called possession, self-expression, knowledge, action, and power, pointing out the harm of too much centering in any one, and suggesting that more attention be paid to living more by the example set for in the Bible.

Yearly reports were given, showing the excellent progress made during the year, and the many projects completed. Reports from the president and Mrs. Ruby G. Wilkerson, delegates to the P.-T. A. convention held recently in Macon, were enjoyed.

Miss Mary Standard, principal, urged that summer roundup work be attended to, eliminating necessity of dental or medical attention during the school term.

Mrs. M. Klausman called attention to the possibility of elimination of R. O. T. C. or military training in the schools and urged that this part of the boys' education be continued.

Dr. T. L. Byrd spoke on the plan for educating the public on the meaning of certified milk, in the near future. The children of the fourth and fifth grades rendered several songs, and little Frances Adams delighted the audience with several solo dances.

The attendance prizes were won by Miss Cockrell, fifth grade, and Miss Dugas, second grade. W. A. Judge was awarded the cake.

Presentation of a beautiful coffee teable was made by Mrs. M. Klausman as a gift to Mrs. Harwell from the members of the executive board.

O'Keefe Honors School Faculty

A tea will be given by the O'Keefe P.-T. A. in honor of the school faculty at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, May 20, at the Atlanta Woman's Club. Special guests of the occasion will be Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Hastings and Dr. and Mrs. Willis A. Sutton. Mrs. Edwin F. Yancey, president of the association, will be assisted in receiving by the following officers: Mesdames Wiley Hancock, Homer Carmichael, Dan MacIntyre Jr., Owen Perry, O. H. Matthews, A. F. Quillian, Poole Maynard and A. W. Crabbe.

Reservations must be made by Wednesday, May 18, and will be received by Mrs. Fred Scanling, Hemlock 4962. All P.-T. A. members are invited to attend.

Lakewood P.-T.A. Hears Speakers

Mrs. H. A. Leftwich and Mrs. Paul Brown were speakers at the Lakewood P.-T. A. meeting held recently. They gave outstanding reports on the recent state convention. Under the leadership of Mrs. G. V. Moore and her staff of officers Lakewood has become one of the 39 superior organizations.

Mrs. Hart read resolutions on the recent death of Miss Annie B. Campbell, principal.

The Harmonica Club, under the direction of Mrs. Davie, gave several selections. Those taking part were Hugh Stephens, Charles White, Grady Moore, Harold Sockwell, Calvin Chitwood, Robert Hopkins and Mrs. Dame.

Miss Caroline Jeter, principal of the school, gave a health report in which she stated that 92 pupils have had perfect attendance during the entire school year. She thanked the mothers for their co-operation in keeping the children in such splendid health and invited the mothers and friends to join the teachers and pupils in a health day celebration at Lakewood park on Friday.

The chorus of singing mothers under the direction of Mrs. A. A. Parks, sang "Georgia Land." Members of the chorus are: Mesdames Paul Cannon, L. B. Nelms, H. A. Leftwich, F. A. Sheils, A. B. Alewine, V. G. Buckner, C. E. Jordan, W. A. Cooper, O. L. Olson.

Representatives sent to the governor's mansion on May Day to present flowers to Mrs. Richard Russell Sr. were: Louise Nunnally, Mary Elizabeth Moore, Joyce Huff and Barbara Thompson.

Mrs. G. V. Moore spoke on the summer reading club and stressed the importance of the club. Mrs. F. A. Sheils gave the report from the nominating committee and the following officers were elected for 1932-1933 school year: Mrs. G. V. Moore, re-elected president; Mrs. L. B. Nelms, vice president; Mrs. V. G. Buckner, secretary; Mrs. Conley Watts, treasurer.

Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Welch won the attendance prize.

Druid Hills P.-T.A. Features Reports

The final meeting of the year of the Druid Hills P.-T. A. was featured by the reports, which showed splendid co-operation, fine spirit and whole-hearted zeal in all phases of the work accomplished during the past year. Mr. Pittman, from Oglethorpe, and a pupil of Hugh Hodgson, gave two piano selections. Miss Hermina Baum, a pupil of Mrs. Lillouise Green, gave two violin selections.

Mrs. Charles Waits, treasurer, reported a total collection of $663.89 for the year; $80.72 was spent by the house committee; $52.72 for athletics; $69.70 for dental supplies for needy children and $150 spent in the library.

Mrs. D. B. Sinclair announced a play to be given May 24 entitled "April Showers." Mrs. J. B. McNally announced May Day festival to be held May 27 at 4 o'clock. Mrs. W. L. Curry announced a kindergarten garden party for May 26. A motion was made to divide P.-T. A. into grammar school division and high school division.

Mrs. R. W. Evans, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following names as recommendation from the nominating committee and they received a unanimous vote: Grammar school: President, Mrs. Blaines Sale; vice president, Mrs. M. R. Woodall; treasurer, Mrs. L. L. Gellerstedt; secretary, Mrs. O. R. Quayle; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. H. Reece. High School: Mrs. J. H. Ramsaur, president; vice president, Mrs. Clarence W. Mills; secretary, Mrs. W. H. Bohannon; treasurer, Miss Aline Mayfield.

Decatur P.-T. A.

Following a brief meeting of the executive board of Decatur Junior High School P.-T. A. held Friday morning at which Mrs. J. B. Richards, first vice president, presided, a call meeting of the P.-T. A. executive boards of both Decatur Junior and Senior High schools was held, with Mrs. Max Flynt acting as chairman, the purpose of which was to formulate plans for the organization of new boys' and girls' high school associations.

A committee was appointed to draw up tentative constitution and by-laws, and following a short meeting of the Junior High School P.-T. A. Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, a joint meeting of the patrons of the high schools will be held, and an effort made to complete new organizations, including the election of officers.

It is important that every patron of these schools attend this meeting and assist in forming adequate organizations.

Adair Board Honored.

O'Keefe Junior High P.-T. A. Holds Final Meeting of the Year

A group of children singing the chorus, "Song of Man," by Richard Kountz, under the direction of Miss Ruby Lankford, music instructor for the O'Keefe Junior High school, opened the final meeting of the O'Keefe P.-T. A. last Wednesday afternoon.

After the reading of annual reports by Mrs. Wiley Hancock, secretary, Mrs. Dan MacIntyre Jr., treasurer and chairmen of active committees, the president, Mrs. Edwin F. Yancey, gave a short talk, expressing her appreciation for help received during the year.

Miss Anne Pridmore, of the Y. W. C. A., spoke to the mothers about plans for Camp Highland this summer.

The principal, S. M. Hastings, reported on the athletic and scholastic activities of the year. He announced that the senior class will present a three-act comedy, "Green Stockings," at 8 o'clock Friday evening, May 20, in the school auditorium. Miss Anne Ray is directing the play, and the following members of her oral English classes will take part: Eugene Adams, Albert Yundt, Walter Debnam, Jack Reynolds, Gilbert Ogg, Jere Atchison, Clyde Sellars, Eleanor Hicks, Opal Maxwell, Josephine Burke, Mary Nell McKoin and Virginia Marshall.

Miss Florence Price, librarian, announced the organization of a reading club, whose members will receive points as in other extra-curricular activities. Miss Price, assisted by members of the club, entertained the P.-T. A. at tea in the library following the meeting. Miss Nance Williams High 7-6 class won the prize.

Peeples St. P.-T. A. Holds Daddies' Night

Peeples Street P.-T. A. held open house at the daddies' night meeting held recently. The schoolrooms were visited, where each daddy found a present in his child's desk. Every room was decorated in flowers and ferns and the children's splendid work was arranged on the tables and blackboards. At 8 o'clock the daddies took charge of the meeting in Hooper hall. R. L. Ramsey presided. The minutes were read by J. M. Griffith and the treasurer's report by W. F. Rutherford. Two vocal selections were rendered by R. S. Lowrance Jr., accompanied by Miss Isabel Lowrance. Dr. Willis A. Sutton spoke on "The Welfare of the Child." Attendance prizes were won by Misses Mary Ramey, Evelyn Grant and Lucille Price. During the social half-hour punch was served by J. O. Hall and W. L. Bailes.

North Fulton High Holds Final Meeting

The final meeting of the North Fulton High P.-T. A. was held Monday at the school. The program presented by the three new organizations of the school, the Girl Reserves, the band and the Hi-Y Club, was interesting and entertaining.

The retiring officers, whose efficient work have left a memorable record, welcomed the following incoming officers: Mrs. Herbert Alden, president; Professor W. F. Dykes, honorary vice president; Mrs. Herbert Ripley, first vice president; Mrs. P. C. McDuffie, second vice president; Mrs. Clarence Bell, recording secretary; Mrs. T. S. Calloway, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Tom Strickland, treasurer.

With deep appreciation for the splendid leadership of the president, Mrs. D. C. Shepherd, the organization presented her with a pastel colored vase.

Mt. Vernon P.-T.A. Closes Years' Work

Mt. Vernon P.-T. A. met Friday in the school auditorium. Mrs. D. A. Creel presided. Each grade chairman gave a splendid report of the year's work. Mrs. D. A. Creel, chairman of the benevolent committee, reported $40 had been donattd for charity during the year.

Mrs. W. L. Millwood was appointed pre-school chairman. Miss Wilder onnounced that a program will be given by the different grades May 17 at 7:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. The first grade received the attendance prize.

English Avenue P.-T.A. Reports Activities.

English Avenue P.-T. A. met in the school auditorium Tuesday. An interesting program was given by the boys of ungraded B on "Mother" and by the children of High 1-1 on community life. The following announcements were made: Open house will be held May 18 from 9 to 11 o'clock. A paper sale will be held on May 23. The Yaarab Chanters will give a performance in the auditorium for the benefit of the school May 28 at 8 o'clock. Admission 10 cents. The public is invited to attend this splendid performance.

Reports on the meeting in Macon were given by Miss O'Steen and our president, Mrs. Bagwell. The following officers were elected for the forthcoming year: President, Mrs. Bagwell; first vice president, Mrs. Pace; second vice president, Mrs. Withers; third vice president, Mrs. Picklesimer; treasurer, Mrs. Miller; recording secretary, Miss Clyde Patman; corresponding secretary, Miss Ethel Hill. Attendance prizes were awarded to Miss McKee in the upper grades, and Mrs. Williamson in the lower grades.

Harmonica Club.

The Harmonica Club of S. M. Inman school, Atlanta, which is composed of 50 children, under the direction of Mrs. W. W. Woolfolk, will be the attraction on the weekly broadcast of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers over WSB next Tuesday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock. This will be the first appearance of this remarkable club over the air, and an invitation to Parent-Teacher Associations throughout the state to listen in is extended by the radio chairman, Mrs. Byron Mathews.

Spring Carnival.

A spring carnival will be held at the Ella W. Smillie school at 3 o'clock Wednesday, May 18. A country store will be held for the mothers to indulge in bargain hunting. The children will find entertainment of varied nature and plenty of goodies will be on sale.

Fulton Council P.-T. A. To Meet.

Mrs. W. M. Schneider announces the meeting of Fulton Council to be held Wednesday, May 18, at 3 o'clock at the courthouse. Dr. Frank Wills, chairman of summer roundup; Professor Jere Wells and Miss Leila Bunce will be the speakers. As this is the last meeting of the year, a large attendance is requested.

Harris P.-T. A. Hears Yearly Report

Joel Chandler Harris P.-T. A. held its final meeting of the year at the school last Tuesday with Mrs. W. L. McCalley Jr., first vice president, presiding. Yearly reports from committees were given. Mrs. W. L. McCalley Jr. gave a report on the meeting of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers held recently in Macon.

The membership chairman, Mrs. L. S. Magbee, anounced a total membership of 1,335 members. Mrs. Thornton, principal, anounced that arrangements had been made to care for the flower and vegetable gardens during the summer months. A candy pulling was anounced for Friday, May 13, and a paper sale for May 27.

A gift expressing love and appreciation was presented to Mrs. Thornton, the principal. Mrs. D. C. Jones, recording secretary, and Mrs. Zach Cowan, third vice president, both of whom are moving from West End, were presented gifts.

Mrs. Robert P. Cheshire, president of the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers, was an honored guest and responded to an invitation to speak to the association.

The attendance prizes were won by Mrs. L. J. Hill's class for the primary grades, and by Miss Christine Woodburn's class for the grammar grades.

Habersham D.A.R. Plans Service Honoring Mrs. Gentry

Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., will hold a memorial service in honor of the late Mrs. J. C. Gentry, who was a beloved past regent of this organization, Wednesday afternoon, May 18, at Habersham Hall, 270 Fifteenth street.

Mrs. W. F. Dykes, first state vice regent and a prominent member of the Joseph Habersham chapter, will pay tribute to the memory of Mrs. Gentry, who was numbered among the first members of this chapter and who was largely responsible for its growth and the broadening of its extensive program.

Mrs. George M. Niles, regent of the chapter, will preside over the service and will also speak on the great loss sustained by the organization as well as the entire city in the death of Mrs. Gentry. Musical selections will be presented by Mrs. E. B. Booth, chairman of music for the chapter.

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Gentry are invited to attend the service, which will be preceded by a short business meeting of the chapter to be held at 3 o'clock.

Banners Displayed At Meeting Of Formwalt P.-T.A.

An inspiring feature of Formwalt P.-T. A. meeting held last Tuesday was the display of championship banners won by Formwalt teams on field day during the past 20 years. Beginning with the baseball pennant for 1911, they continue through 1932 with only two or three omissions for the two decades, many years being represented by two or more banners.

Boys' dodgeball team, High 5, and girls' potato relay team, Low 5, won city championships for 1932. The track teams also made splendid records this year, boys taking second place and girls third, among the elementary schools. The Glee Club sang several chorus numbers. Mrs. Wilhelm, who has done outstanding work with parent education classes, announced the conference of mothers and explained its purpose. A splendid program was arranged for this conference, which was held Friday.

Mrs. Sappington's report was chiefly a message of appreciation to all her co-workers for their loyalty and hearty co-operation. Miss Solomon made a brief report of the Macon convention, stressing the spiritual note and naming the children's charter as the general theme of this year's session. Small tokens of love and appreciation were presented to Mrs. Sappington, Miss Solomon and Mrs. Butler, school secretary.

Miss Nelle Jones' sixth grade mothers and daddies broke all attendance records with an attendance of 123, or 23 per cent more representatives than children in the class. Miss Muldrew's kindergarten was highest among the primary grades. Officers elected for 1932-1933 are: Mrs. H. A. Sappington, president; Mrs. H. O. Mulkey, first vice president; Miss Margaret Solomon, second vice president; Miss Frances Williamson, recording secretary; Miss Lamar Lowe, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. M. Wilhelm, treasurer.

Morgan Falls P.-T. A.

Officers elected in Morgan Falls P.-T. A. for the ensuing year are: Mrs. Henry Wing, president; Mrs. I. H. Mooy, vice president; Miss Lucile Wing, treasurer, and Mrs. J. T. Morgan, secretary. An interesting health program was given by third and fourth grades at the last meeting of the Morgan Falls P.-T. A. A musical program was also given by Mrs. Blanch Lowe, pianist, and little Nan Foster and Francis Wing. Mrs. Wing complimented the retiring officers for the work they had accomplished.

INFRA-RED The Sky Detective

At right: The Yerkes observatory telescope, largest refracting instrument in the world, diagramed to show its operation. It is well adapted for spectroscopic work and observation of binary stars as well as for infra-red photography.

Below: Three views of Venus made by means of ultra violet photography. By this method it is possible to photograph the cloud forms in the atmosphere surrounding the planet. They would not register on an ordinary photographic plate.

At right: Two pictures of Mars, showing how an infra-red photograph (above) compares with an ultra-violet photograph (below).

By Howard Barry

RECENT experiments in infra-red photography have led astronomers to believe that this new art will aid them considerably in their quest for new knowledge of the skies. One of their most serious problems has been to penetrate the dense clouds which cloak many of the celestial bodies so completely that an observer sees not the true surface of the objects, but only the vapors which surround it.

With the development of infra-red photography, however, it is becoming possible to get behind the clouds and discern what really is there.

Light rays of long wave length have greater penetrating power than those of short wave length. That is why the setting sun appears red instead of blue or violet. When it has dropped toward the horizon, the rays must penetrate a much thicker veil of atmosphere before they reach the observer than is the case when the sun is directly overhead. The shorter rays, such as the violet, the blue, and the green, are absorbed and only the long red rays come through.

Now, infra-red rays are even longer than red rays, and consequently have greater penetrating power. Although they are invisible to the eye, it is possible to manufacture a photographic plate which is sensitive to their action just as an ordinary plate is sensitive to visible rays of light.

When an attempt is made to take a picture of a planet by the usual methods, many of the visible rays coming from the celestial body never get past its shroud of atmosphere. Consequently an indistinct photograph results. On the other hand, the infra-red radiations which come from the planet cut right through the clouds and get to the photographic plate. If, therefore, the plate is sensitive to their action, a clear-cut picture may be obtained.

Two pictures of the moon, one made by infra-red photography and the other with ordinary light, are reproduced among the accompanying illustrations. It will be seen that the infra-red photograph brings out the details of the moon's surface much more clearly than does the other.

Similarly, a picture of the cloud-forms which surround a planet may be made by ultra-violet photography. Ultra-violet rays, being short, have less penetrating power than ordinary light rays and much less than infra-red rays. The ultra-violet rays emanating from a celestial body are stopped by dense clouds, but come through where the atmosphere is not so thick. An ultra-violet photograph, therefore, will show dark spots where the object is shrouded by clouds. Under similar circumstances a picture made with ordinary light might show the object as a white disc without bringing out any details of the formation of the atmosphere. The ultra-violet photographs of Venus, reproduced among the accompanying illustrations, show the atmosphere which surrounds the planet.

Infra-red and ultra-violet photography is still in the process of development, but it has been proved to be of practical value. At Yerkes observatory, Williams Bay, Wis., intensive experiments are being conducted in this field. There on the shores of Lake Geneva a group of scientists headed by Edwin B. Frost delves into almost every phase of astronomy.

The Yerkes telescope, which is the largest refracting instrument in the world, is pictured in one of the accompanying illustrations. The camera which is used in photographing the skies is clamped into the position ordinarily occupied by the eyepiece of the telescope. The instrument is then focused upon some star or planet, and a photographic exposure is made.

The Clubwomen Adored Their Bachelor Mayor Until a Blonde Bride—

Claimed the "Home Boy" for Her Own, Then Rival Ladies Slashed His Picture from Its Frame for Revenge

EX-BACHELOR
Chubby, Bespectacled Mayor Eugene Sipocz, of Budapest. His Clandestine Wedding to a Blonde Beauty, NOT a Member of the Women's Christian Camp, Enraged His Large Feminine Following.

By A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

BUDAPEST.

MEMBERS of the Women's Christian Camp of this city have never made any bones about their idol. This fortunate individual is—or was—Dr. Eugene Sipocz, the local Mayor.

Blonde, blue-eyed, almost painfully respectable and of the "home type," Mayor Sipocz has been worshiped frankly by these estimable ladies of the Christian Municipal Party ever since he took office at the City Hall. Their adulation was whole-hearted, completely unmarred by personal jealousies. His position was that of some rare treasure held in the tender hands of a bonding company.

But now—!

The Mayor's standing with the Women's Christian Camp would make a snake's hip look like the Eiffel Tower. What, you are probably wondering, did His Honor do to shatter his popularity with his former adorers? He got married. And the clubwomen couldn't "see" the blonde bride with a giant telescope.

To non-Hungarians their stand may seem incomprehensible. Yet the issue is taken with the utmost gravity here. Perhaps the details should be explained thoroughly at this point. When young Dr. Sipocz, a bachelor, was elected a few years ago, he instantly sprang into great personal popularity. Why? Partly because of the charm of his character. But there were the other factors of his perfect record, and above all, his devotion to his aged mother.

He made his home with her. To her he confided all his problems. Actually he preferred remaining with her during the evenings to enjoying the city's dizzy distractions.

On those rare occasions when he thought it advisable to attent some social function, he invariably bade his hostess good-night promptly at ten. Eugene, the ideal mother's boy, didn't smoke, drink, play cards or flirt. He was courteous to the girls and their mothers, yes; but as for even the mildest of love affairs—perish the thought!

The result of all this was that the Women's Christian Camp took him to their hearts in the chastest and most amiably collective manner. Parties galore were "thrown" for him. There were banquets and bouquets, flattery and universal favoritism. Now and then some more than ordinarily bold young woman would drop a hint that if the Mayor were ever to think of marrying——? But to such a suggestion, Sipocz would respond merely with a charming non-commital smile. He was still Budapest's "home boy."

Precisely how he fell under the spell of Mrs. Alexander Karsay, the former Miss Ilona Szanto, will probably never be known. But when the news spread that he had married her in the nearby city of Szentendre, the astonishment and fury of the Women's Christian Camp was high pitched. It may be thought ungenerous that they should have taken such dislike to the fascinating widow. But the members were not slow to make clear their objections.

In the first place, they pointed out that they were an organization of purely Roman Catholic tendency—and Mrs. Karsay was not only Jewish by birth, but, in the bargain, had become a Protestant. Then again—oh horrors!—Ilona had actually been on the stage. And as a final clincher to their argument, they insisted that the bride had never shown the faintest interest in municipal politics. What kind of a wife was that for a Mayor, their Mayor!

Dr. Sipocz had evidently feared that his marriage might cause some hard feeling among his feminine clientele, for he had kept it strictly clandestine. The Mayor of Szentendre who united his colleague and the fair Ilona had been asked to maintain a discreet silence about the ceremony. After that, bride and groom left for their respective homes.

The honeymoon arrangement was strictly on the quiet, too. Sipocz went to the seaside for a "vacation." Curiously enough, Ilona departed for the same resort, but wisely chose a different hotel. The couple met only in the society of mutual friends; it was just one of those skilfully planned things. But it didn't work.

Four weeks after the wedding, the inevitable news leak occurred. Sipocz was nice and honest about it. Yes, he admitted to the City Hall officials, he was married. He caused an announcement of the glad event to be printed in the newspapers. He even told his mother; though the old lady's remarks on that occasion are not known.

But even the anguish of a bereaved parent could not equal the emotional intensity of the Women's Christian Camp. They felt defrauded, derided, despised, dejected, just as we all do when something precious has been snatched away from under our unsuspecting noses. In fact, some of the Mayor's women admirers resorted to tactics that were not really sporting. A little patient snooping disclosed to them "certain facts" about Ilona. She came, it seemed, of humble stock, but there was plenty of family talent lying around loose in the Szanto parlor. Brother Theodore was a famous composer and pianist. Two other brothers were music publishers. And Ilona had been a chorus girl at the famous Kiraly Theatre. Not for long, however. Alexander Karsay, secretary in the Ministry of Commerce, sitting in the front row, had seen, adored, wooed, walked off with her. That was twenty-five years ago. Karsay had died. And now she had had the incredible nerve to walk off with Mayor Sipocz!

Acting unofficially but with great vigor, certain ladies who had turned from adoring to abhoring began to hit back at him for his defection. One group went in a body to one of the public buildings in Budapest where a portrait of the Mayor had been reverently hung on the wall. Armed with knives and righteousness, they attacked the canvas. It is said that they were just about to slash it from its frame when Sipocz entered and saw what was happening. The ladies beat a hurried retreat, the Mayor blushed—and the episode was at an end.

But unless the former bachelor gives up his blonde, bland bride—and it's really being demanded—it looks like big trouble for the peace of mind of the Women's Christian Camp.

The "Hot" Card Game That Laid a Trail of Tragedies for One Blameless Family

LEO P. BERGIN, former president of a Los Angeles soap company, was fond of hot dice games, and the "smart money" that sometimes rolls in from them appealed to him. Nothing much wrong in that, unless you are a rigid Puritan who regards gambling in all forms as a sin.

But—look at the list of calamities that came to the Bergin family as the result of one little "session" which Bergin sat in on five years ago.

Bergin himself is dead, after a nervous breakdown.

His widow, Mrs. Gladys Balfour Bergin, has been bombarded with letters of extortion.

Her three children, Gloria, 13; John, 17, and Leo, Jr., 19, were marked for kidnaping.

Harry Leslie, investigating the persistent terrorization of the Bergin family, was badly wounded when his own gun was accidentally discharged while he was on the track of the gang.

This trail of tragedy stretches back to 1926. In that year Bergin paid a visit to New York City. There he fell in with a Los Angeles gambler he knew and another "high roller," said to have been an associate of Nick the Greek and other big shots.

The three men went to a hotel, where they and other devotees of chance settled down to a lively evening of indoor sport. The climax came in a high spade poker game. Luck stood firm against Bergin from the start. His losses were between $50,000 and $75,000. He promised to settle up eventually. Incidentally, the clique with which he had been playing is now declared to have been manipulated by the late Arnold Rothstein.

Bergin, on his return home, was unmolested for a year. Then the fireworks began. The soap official had begun to realize that he had been "taken" and he was afraid. He did, however, on his own statement, give up $7,500. This was far from enough for the mobsters, who were merely irritated at the puniness of the sum.

The shakedowns accordingly became periodical. Bergin was threatened on the street and by 'phone call. More than once his motor car was forced to the curb and he was compelled to sign checks "never for less than $1,000," at the point of a gun. Desperate by now, the victim appealed to District Attorney Burton Fitts. But "Don't take action just now," Fitts was implored. "In case anything happens to me, you'll know why," Bergin added.

He then wrote a "farewell letter," destined for the eye of the District Attorney, if "anything happened." What happened was that Bergin's nerve broke. He was sent to a hospital, where he died. It then turned out that instead of a paltry $7,000, Bergin had paid the card crooks the full $75,000! Nevertheless, they continued their merciless persecution of the dead man's family.

The Bergin children were threatened with abduction and torture. Their mother was now definitely alarmed, and appealed for police guard, which was, of course, granted. Still the extortionists persisted. Apparently, Mrs. Bergin was prevailed upon to send the family chauffeur to a designated spot to negotiate. Eight automobiles full of police were dispatched to the rendezvous. Then Leslie's gun was accidentally discharged—

And the public, which had remained ignorant of the New York card game, with its consequent horrors, was at last in on the secret.

IMPERIAL INDIGESTION

King Alexander, Occupying a Wobbly Throne, Is Preoccupied with a Stomach Disorder; and Jugo-Slavia Is Similarly Disturbed, but with Political Gastritis

By W. Kent Jenkins

RESTLESS Jugo-Slavia is racked with indigestion, physical and political. King Alexander's stomach is a problem to medical men and the affairs of his country are of much concern to potentates and financiers throughout Europe.

Reports emanating from Jugo-Slavia picture the king, ever in danger of assassination, pacing the floors of his fortress-palace through the long hours of the night and pausing to ask of an officer of the guard, "Do you think the prime minister will betray me?"

The palace is built to withstand heavy shellfire and is fitted with machine gun emplacements which would enable a handful of loyal retainers to hold a battalion at bay. Around the structure are the royal guards, who are not merely soldiers on parade, but a powerful army within an army—a division with full equipment including artillery and planes.

One may wonder what is the reason for all this apprehension and preparedness. These are no idle imaginations which haunt the ruler. If he were attacked by his numerous enemies it would not be the first time that violence has been used against the reigning family. The previous dynasty, that of the Obrenovitchs, ended with the murder of King Alexander and his queen, Draga. That was nearly thirty years ago, but the knowledge that at any time he is in danger of a similar fate is always in the mind of the present ruler.

Peter, of the family of Karageorgevitch, became king in 1903, a few months after the assassination. He controlled the destiny of his country during the World war, but was forced to flee to Salonika when fortune turned against the Serbs. In 1919 he relinquished the cares of state to his son, Alexander, who became king upon the death of Peter in 1921.

A recent increase in the restlessness of Jugo-Slavia has given rise to rumors that the king is preparing to give up his throne. One London newspaper even circulated a report that Prince Arthur of Connaught, a cousin of King George, was to be offered the crown. This report, however, was denied in official circles.

Shortly after taking the throne, Alexander married Princess Marie of Roumania. They have three children.

Since early in his reign, Alexander has had a stormy career. His elder brother, Prince George, renounced his right to the throne of Serbia in 1909 following an altercation with King Peter, but when Jugo-Slavia was formed out of Serbia, Croatia, and Slovenia, he contended that he had not relinquished his claim to the crown of the new kingdom but simply to that of Serbia. In 1925 he came out actively against Alexander and started negotiating with the republicans. The king became alarmed at his brother's movements, and for the last few years George has not been much in evidence. He is said to be detained in a sanitarium where he is virtually a prisoner.

Another gesture against the rule of Alexander was the threat of a taxicab driver to seize the throne. This man was Prince Alexander Dabischa-Kotromanich, who claimed to be a descendant of the Kotromanich family which reigned in what is now Jugo-Slavia between the years 1163 and 1443.

Until two weeks before the prince announced his intentions, he was earning a livelihood by driving a taxi in Berlin. His wife, Princess Ariadne, of the prominent Roumanian family of Cantacuzene, shared the meager living. At first his effort was said to have the backing of powerful financial interests, but eventually it came to nothing.

The Kotromanich dynasty is much older than either the Karageorgevitch or Obrenovitch dynasties, which have been alternating upon the throne of Serbia in more recent times. When the Turks overran Jugo-Slavia, the Kotromanichs left and settled first in Austria and then in Russia.

A circumstance which at the same time gives weakness and strength to Alexander's regime is the fact that he is attempting to weld eight different branches of the Slavic race into one nation. It is a weakness because these factions are unwilling to forget their numerous antagonisms and get together. It is a source of strength because they will not unite against the king. Thus the monarch is able to pit one against the other to his own advantage.

The interminable quibblings of the various factions is said to be a source of sincere distress to the king, however, and in a moment of dejection he has lamented that he is the only Jugo-Slav in the entire country, all the rest considering themselves Serbs, or Croats, or Slovenes.

Alexander never has been a puppet monarch. From the very beginning of his reign he made it clear that he, and not his ministers, was boss. When the country became extremely turbulent he established himself as dictator in January, 1929, but he said that this was only a tempopary measure and that in due time he would give the people another constitution. Accordingly he came out last September with an entirely new constitution, which established a bicameral parliament and professed to put a great deal of power into the hands of the people.

Members of the opposition, however, maintain that the constitution is intended merely to throw dust in the eyes of the world, and that as a matter of fact Alexander is just as much of a dictator as ever.

The king is said to have lost much of his popularity since the promulgation of the new constitution. There have been student demonstrations led by Serbs, Montenegrins and Bosnians, who formerly were among the king's most loyal subjects.

Some of the people were angered by the message with which Alexander opened the new parliament. It omitted any mention to a return to free speech and free press, summing up the dictatorship with the remark that the king was sure everybody had been happy under his regime during the preceding three years.

Some Serbians describe the new state of affairs as a "constitutional dictatorship." The government is said to be attempting to stifle all independent expression among the heterogeneous racial groups.

Some observers say that in giving up the personal dictatorship which he had exercised for three years, Alexander was making a bid for favor in America in preparation for asking a large loan. It is said that he was working on the theory that Americans are unwilling to invest money in dictatorships.

It is believed that international financiers exerted their influence to bring about the abolition of the dictatorship. Shortly before the new constitution was drafted, Foreign Minister Marinkovitch received from the world bank assurance that Jugo-Slavia would be granted a loan of $16,000,000. Between the lines of the new constitution many observers read in invisible ink the story of a duel for power between King Alexander and his prime minister, Gen. Peter Zhivkovitch, who is said to cherish dictatorial ambitions himself.

Highlights of Broadway

From the Circle to the Square

by JACK LAIT

Reception!

FLOYD GIBBONS—a reportorial running-mate of my youth—the recent day he landed back in New York—from Shanghai and the rest of the Far-Eastern front—at lunch he told a hot-cha anecdote with a bang finish and a Broadway start:

Floyd, the lucky lad who thrives on the smell of ink and gunpowder and always manages to be up to his neck in both when and where they mix, tossed up a lot of money, a picture contract, a radio bankroll, to scram to Manchuria as soon as word romped in of the shindy over there. He had finished two two-reel films which had not yet been sent to the Orient for release. A. P. Waxman, RKO press-ace, saw him off, and as they parted, said:

"I am shipping these two cans of your talkies to our man, Mark Hanna, in Shanghai. On your way back from Manchuria you will have to pass through there. I'm asking him to hold them until you get there —then the big ballyhoo, personal appearance, the Mayor and motor-cycle cops and the rest of the Broadway-Hollywood premiere stuff—or whatever variation of it the time and place require.

"So be sure to send advance notice to Mark Hanna, RKO, Shanghai, as far as possible ahead of your entrance. Leave the rest to him."

Floyd cleaned up the Manchurian mix-up rather quickly, and was kind o' miffed because there wasn't more action. The main office cabled him to go to India and write a series on Gandhi and the general Hindu situation. Floyd took off. Then he remembered Waxman and Hanna, and cabled Mark that he would arrive on such-and-such a ship on Jan. 29.

Four days at sea in a boat out of touch with outside, he knew nothing of the fact that he was sailing into the overnight hotbed of the world, Shanghai! As they drew into the river, the whole outfit was electrified to see and hear war-planes overhead, bursting bombs, shrieking shells; thousands of refugees were evacuating, sirens of ambulances were ripping the air, long-range artillery was reverberating against the dome of the Eastern sky—

And as the ship neared the dock, Floyd, at the rail, made out Mark Hanna, on the pier. Hanna cupped his hands and shouted to him through the din:

"You gave me short notice, so this was the best I could do for you!"

* * *

And Gibbons stepped right into all there was left of the war! And the personal appearance and the hoorah were a bit handicapped by the fact that his film was to have opened in five theatres, and three of them were blown up and the other two were burned down!

I Hear Me!

Great "kicks" come and go in a life that rubs up against the great public at large.

Seeing one's name in print—it was wonderful at first!

Hearing laughter and applause at one's lines and situations in plays, films, acts—the laughs are still thrills; laughs can't be faked!

Seeing one's name in electric lights, on big posters, in headlines, on book-jackets, in dramatic reviews and book reviews, in ads, on ashcan "snipes," in other columnists' copy; hearing it mentioned through the air as news or comment; hearing it announced into a microphone as one stands by to talk to many thousands—all wonderful but waning heart-hurriers.

But—one was still left:

Unknown to me, the Silvertone Recording Studios "picked up" one of my broadcasts—out of the ether—and put it on both sides of a metal disc—not a disc for radio reproduction ("electrical transcription") which is made deliberately, but one coming in spontaneously through thin ozone.

And when I heard myself it gave me creeps up and down my spine. Here was I, talking to Me.

I had never really heard my voice before—heard it as others hear it! It was something like the emotion so many travelers have told of, where an abysmal savage for the first time looks into a mirror and sees himself! It amazed me—it awed me. . . . And now I can realize what I have heard before, that screen actors, seeing and hearing themselves, are profoundly moved, far more so than when the moving pictures were silent. They have often seen themselves, but they have only lately been enabled to hear themselves. There is no comparison between the two.

Crawford and Broderick—one of my favorite low-comedy vaudeville turns a dozen years ago. Then Crawford passed from the picture and Helen Broderick clicked as a principal comedienne in big shows from Willie Collier's short-lived revue to "Band Wagon." Like most "mixed teams" in the varieties, Crawford and Broderick were married. Trouping is hardly an ideal method of life for child-bearing and child-raising—

Beri, Beri Nice

More inside stuff from Floyd Gibbons, brought across under his hat and back of that white patch over his left eye, as a gift to this column:

The wife of the aforementioned Mark Hanna is the former Beth Beri, of "Rose Marie," "Kid Boots" and the "Follies," a glorified American beaut. She married Mark, an ex-office-boy on New York newspapers, later a minor picture-exploiter on the Hardened Artery, in Calcutta. Beth had been starring in vaude here under management of Cou Conrad, former husband of Francine Larrimore, who was wild about her and thought he was engaged to her. He flew her in planes from town to town on her "jumps." But Beth jumped out and left Con with his plane and his torch, sailed to Paris, and thence went to India to play. She met Mark, whom she had known casually in New York, there. That was in 1929.

Today, in Shanghai, Beth is the best-known and best-loved woman—and the most active. The mongol polo ponies are known as the hardest-mouthed beasts on the globe. When they begin to get fat, Beth rides 'em—I mean she rides nine and ten of 'em, one after another, three and four miles each, around the race-track which is in the heart of Shanghai—or over ditches, hills and trackless flats.

She runs a children's dancing class. She is in on every charitable, social and sporting stunt in the region. She is the champion bowler of Shanghai—has medals. And when the great grief was on, she worked day and night nursing and tending the wounded and the refugees—Chinese.

Is all that glorified?

She sent me and the Highlights a friendly kiss (just a Shanghai gesture) by Floyd. I hereby pass it along to you all. Share it among you!

We Point with Pride—

Both National Conventions this Summer in my old home, Chicago.

What wars are to Gibbons, National Conventions are to me—haven't missed one since, as a boy on the knee of my uncle, a Tammany alternate, in the Chicago Coliseum, I heard Bryan make history with his "cross of gold" peroration.

Denver, San Francisco, Baltimore, New York, Cleveland, Boston, St. Louis, Kansas City—and a lot of other cities—Republicans, Democrats, Bull Moosers, Prohibitionists, even once the Socialists, when Debs was nominated—as a war correspondent to these conclaves which are as nothing else on earth.

The Repub party will open June 14 and will probably run four days—peace, harmony, love-birds of stout girth and bald tops—cheers for Herbert Hoover of California. The Demos will open their show on June 27 in the same shooting gallery on the West Side, where I used to play one-old-cat. And that will be a dogfight! It may last four days—or forty. You never know what may happen under the tattered banner of Thomas Jefferson.

Remember when Bryan called Roger Sullivan a "horse-thief?" Remember when Roger Sullivan forced Bryan's nomination for President? Remember when Franklin D. Roosevelt nominated Al Smith? Remember when the Cook County Democracy, Tammany Hall and the gang from around McGilligan's coal-yards in Indianapolis choked down Woodrow Wilson?

Past Performances

Broadwayite whose fortunes have fluctuated about like things have gone with most of us in the last year or two, found that his wife's love couldn't take it. Oh, yes, she had enough on him to get a legal split any time, but as long as he prospered it was okay world; when he had to liquidate she had to evaporate. So she sued. And she got a judgment and decree. And the amount of alimony set was exactly what he had been giving her for years as an allowance. He was telling me:

"That's tough dough to pay out. I check back each month on my checks and there are those four—those familiar four—so much to so-and-so—as I wrote 'em for years. But they used to be so easy to write and now they're so hard.

"They look just the same as they always did. The bank doesn't discriminate between allowance with great good will and alimony with acrimony. I used to want to add 'x-x-x' to those checks.

"She used to say the three most wonderful words in the English language were 'I love you.' Now she says they are 'Enclosed please find.' I used to fly into a jealous fury if another man looked at her. Now—how I wish some other goof would MARRY her. . . . And it isn't that I'm a hard loser. But I've found out that it costs as much to lose a wife as to keep her—and that burns me up—not to mention how it curdles my new wife!"

"Mr. President—I—"

So she was a shining mark when the efficiency crew got on the job to level off the peaks and get down to an "operating" instead of "producing" system. She got the razor blade and a kindly note assuring her she would get "special consideration" with the "return of normalcy," and a check in lieu of two-weeks' notice—for $79.20. . . . When she asked why the 80-cent cut, the auditor answered:

"Deduction of 1 per cent . . . for the unemployed!"

Cash-register End of Coffee Dan's Story-book Romance With the Wheel-Chair Beauty

They Fell in Love Across the Footlights; Got Married, Squabbled, Were Divorced—Now He Offers the Ex-Missus A Job

STILL SHE SMILES

Vivacious Ruby Adams in the Wheel-Chair to Which a Stage Accident Consigned Her—Perhaps for Life. She Married "Coffee Dan," Divorced Him, and Now He's Offered Her a Job.

MIDNIGHT MALLET

HE WAS San Francisco's most picturesque restaurateur; she, a dancing beauty condemned to spend her life in a wheel-chair.

John J. ("Coffee Dan") Davis and Ruby Adams met, fell in love, were married. Then, out of an apparently clear sky, came the astonishing news that Ruby was suing "Coffee Dan" for separate maintenance. Was this to prove the end of their story-book romance, friends wondered?

The "cash register" climax to the woes and disputes of the Davises was even more startling. For just as weeping Ruby had decided to switch her plea to the court to one of absolute divorce, "Coffee Dan" began retaliatory proceedings. He bitterly opposed her suit; asked that their marriage be annulled because she had been his "wife in name only" and "her kisses didn't seem to mean very much," and violently objected to her $400-a-month alimony demand.

Yet, so unpredictable are the motives of the human heart, when Ruby's divorce was granted, "Coffee Dan" proved that he was still fond of her by offering her a position as cashier in his world-famous night-life cafe!

The hectic tale of Dan's and Ruby's heartbeats and "heart trouble" began in the early part of the present decade. Ruby, one of the niftiest of the California steppers, had won fame and vogue in a revue staged by Will King at the Market Street Theatre, San Francisco, and of all the hundreds of patrons who pounded their palms together in approbation of her dancing, no spectator was more enthusiastic than "Coffee Dan."

He had always had a fondness for show people, and his night club, located at Powell and O'Farrell Streets, was much patronized by stage performers. The restaurant's history is interesting. Dan's father, whose name really was Daniel, had given the younger man the inspiration for the midnight supper room.

Old Dan earlier had opened a basement eating place, where, in the early part of the century, hack drivers, sailors and street sweepers used to munch his luscious doughnuts, tuck away large portions of his ham and eggs, and revel in the savory flavor of his coffee.

The eating place was located in that part of the California metropolis known locally as "South of the Slot," a rough-and-tumble quarter where, by a singular coincidence, both young Dan and Ruby were born.

Old Dan made quite a go of his "hash house," patronage mounting steadily. But when the great fire of 1906 occurred, it was the death blow to the resort. However, the lesson of how to conduct a successful cafe had not been lost on his son. In 1908, the latter opened his own place, modeled largely after his father's, but making a bid for a classier clientele.

It was a hit from the start. Of course, the name, "Coffee Dan's," was partly instrumental in putting it on the night-life map. But it had other, solider merits. The food was exceptionally delicious; the coffee rich and potent, and young Dan's winning personality did its bit toward drawing customers.

He also instituted a few cute little innovations, such as the small wooden mallets with which the patrons could express their approval of the cabaret proceedings and welcome their friends with a terrific din.

TEMPORARY "BRACELETS"

John J. ("Coffee Dan") Davis, Noted California Cafe Owner, Handcuffed to Ruby at the Time of Their Wedding, as a Joke. But the Shackles Didn't Stay.

Dan, a chronic playgoer, had been greatly intrigued by Ruby Adams's dancing. He sought her acquaintance, pressed her to wed him. But she demurred. Ruby liked him, she admitted. But then there was her career, that and a dozen other reasons.

One night the theatre was packed. For reasons unknown to the restive audience, the curtain was held for an unconscionable period of time. When it finally rose, Dan was at first puzzled, then alarmed, to find that there was no Ruby on the stage.

He hurried backstage, to find that frightful tragedy had struck down the girl he worshiped. She had been standing in the wings ready to go on when a 300-pound sandbag had fallen from the flyloft, descending with fatal accuracy upon Amy's delicate figure and injuring her.

Two vertebrae were shattered and the spinal cord was crushed. Surgical specialists shook their heads dubiously and held out little hope for her recovery. But Ruby had enormous physical resistance. She swore she'd recover—and she did. "Coffee Dan's" grief and concern over her plight were infinitely touching.

When Ruby was strong enough to travel, Dan, accompanied by a group of doctors and nurses, took her to Southern California, where recuperation would come more quickly. As an excuse to stay near his sweetheart he even opened a branch of his San Francisco restaurant in a nearby town.

As she laboriously started to regain her strength, Ruby became convinced that the only way she could repay her benefactor for his celestial kindness was to marry him. So the next time he pressed her to become his wife, she nodded her head in assent. The rapture of "Coffee Dan" knew no bounds. So Ruby Adams, the wheel-chair heroine, became Mrs. John J. Davis.

Just when the matrimonial rift first developed, is not known. The wedding had taken place at Ensenada, a Mexican resort on the California borderline in October, 1928. To make the ceremony all the more binding, they were remarried at the fashionable St. Francis Hotel, in San Francisco, later. And so far as anyone could guess, their married life was supremely happy—until March, 1931, when Ruby threw the bombshell of her suit into the courts.

In refuting his wife's charges that he was niggardly with her, often absented himself from home, and ran around with other women, Dan countered by accusing her of nagging, domineering and manifesting scant affection for him.

There was a popular stampede to hear the legal proceedings, which were terminated by the granting of Ruby's divorce and her acceptance of $200 a month as alimony. Then came the surprising about-face of chivalrous "Coffee Dan," with the announcement that, as soon as she was feeling stronger, Ruby might take her place behind his cash register at a regular salary.

Impassioned affection may have vanished from the Davises' lives. But "when love has turned to kindliness," there's apt to linger on a glow around the heart.

How Johnny Walked the Dog — in Reverse

IN LONDON, it appears, they don't take you for a ride. Instead they take you for a runaround.

John Curtis has found that out to his grief; also his amusement. Johnny is probably the world's most microscopic page boy. Fourteen years old, he is only three feet, ten inches.

In spite of his youth and meagre stature, John's a hard working man, and known to the management of the fashionable Trocadero Restaurant as one of its most efficient pages.

Recently a patron of the cafe asked Johnny to take her big Irish wolfhound for a promenade. "Certainly, Madame," replied the courteous midget. So Johnny started off with Aengus in tow.

But Aengus scented a cat, and the first thing Johnny knew he was acting as steering gear for the excited canine. Finally Aengus got winded and halted. "No more wolfhounds for me," gasped Johnny. He now confines his walks to cats belonging to the Trocadero's guests.

LAFAYETTE'S FAREWELL

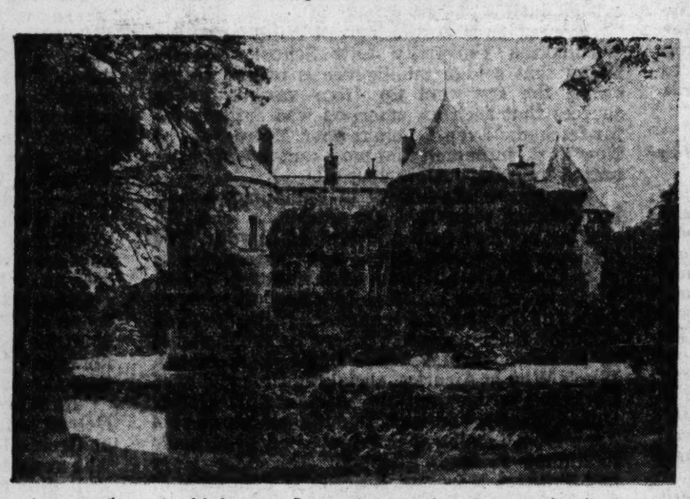

Lafayette as he appeared in 1792. This is a reproduction of the painting by Court now in Musee de Versailles. The marquis at that time was 35 years old, and still wore clothing which had been the vogue in France before the revolution.

By John A. Menaugh

THE approaching anniversary of the death of the Marquis de Lafayette brings again to the minds of the American people, who this year are celebrating the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, the important part the titled young Frenchman played in establishing this country as a free and independent nation.

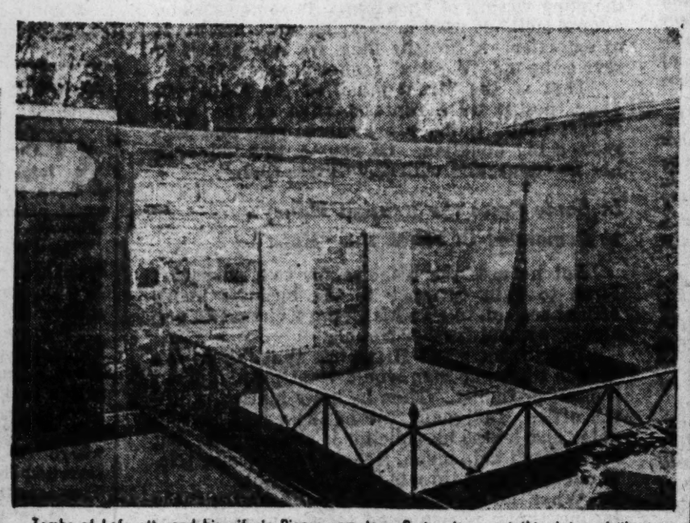

Lafayette died ninety-eight years ago next Friday, May 20. Something like ten years before he closed his eyes in eternal sleep the hero of Brandywine, Barren Hill, Monmouth, and Yorktown visited America for the fourth and last time. And what a triumphant visit that was! From the moment he landed from the merchantman Cadmus in New York City until the frigate Brandywine bore him away down the broad estuary of the lower Potomac his visit was a magnificent triumph. Throughout the whole land bands played and militia marched. The country reverberated with the thunder of cannon in salute; great "Welcome Lafayette" arches bridged streets in every city; school children marched and sang; receptions, balls, levees, and theater parties robbed the suave Frenchman of his needed sleep, and men in public life squabbled for the honor of playing host.

Lafayette landed at New York Aug. 15, 1824, and sailed for France Sept. 7 of the following year. He visited every one of the 24 states, traveling by coach and steamboat. He visited Boston, Hartford, Albany, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, S. C., Savannah, New Orleans, Natchez, St. Louis, Kaskaskia, Ill., Cincinnati, Wheeling, Washington, and hundreds of other cities and towns. He was the guest of President Monroe and later of President John Quincy Adams. He was entertained by Jefferson, old John Adams, Madison, Andrew Jackson; Joseph Bonaparte, Napoleon's brother (who was living at Bordentown, N. J., at that time); Henry Clay, and Daniel Webster. He was in a steamboat wreck on the Ohio river, and he laid the cornerstone for the monument at the tomb of Baron de Kalb, another revolutionary hero.

At the battlefield of Yorktown Lafayette was established in the house used by Lord Cornwallis, and received war veterans in Washington's campaign tent, which had been brought to the scene for that purpose. A reception to the great Frenchman was lighted by candles left by Cornwallis 43 years before. At Philadelphia Lafayette rode in a barouche drawn by six cream white horses. At Mount Vernon he knelt beside the casket of Washington. The whole country was in a delirium of rejoicing, and everywhere the noted visitor was received he was compelled to gaze at lighted transparencies which depicted one or another of the scenes of his life.

The sword which Lafayette carried throughout the American revolution, when as a youthful major general he played a conspicuous part in defeating the British.

Lafayette at the age of seven years. Six years after this he was left an immense fortune. He married at the age of sixteen.

With Lafayette on that historic visit were his son, George Washington Lafayette; his secretary, Auguste Levasseur, and a servant. Even the servant came in for a share of the glory of his famous master.

Though Lafayette refused the offer of a United States war vessel to bring him to America, he consented to return to France on a new frigate named for the first battle in the Revolutionary war in which he took part.

On his return to France from his triumphs in America Lafayette still had an important role in public affairs before death claimed him. In the interests of peace, and ignoring his own preferences, he established Louis Philippe on the throne when Charles X. was deposed. For the second time he assumed the position of commander-in-chief of the national guard. He died in Paris, the acknowledged chief of the constitutional party on the continent of Europe.

Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier, Marquis de Lafayette, was born in Cavanac, Auvergne, France, Sept. 6, 1757. At the age of sixteen he married the daughter of the duc d'Ayen. At nineteen he fitted out the ship Victoire at his own expense and sailed to help the Americans in their war with England. Within a few months he was a major general. During the French revolution he fled from the fierce Jacobins and was imprisoned in Austria, where he spent five years in a dungeon. He was liberated through the action of Napoleon, but he ever afterward refused to accept honors at the hands of the Corsican. As a member of the chamber of deputies Lafayette always was ready to lift his voice in the cause of liberty.

By James R. McCarthy

TWO remarkable reports, reviewing crime conditions in America's two leading cities, were issued almost simultaneously the other day by the authorities. Although they were blazoned on the front pages of the country's newspapers, there is an unfortunate likelihood that the public overlooked or forgot their sinister significance.

These reports did not directly concern kidnaping. But in their recital of a society infested with lawlessness, there was a chain of events unquestionably linked with the abduction of the Lindbergh baby and other "snatching" cases of past years.

One report was embodied in testimony given by George E. Q. Johnson, United States District Attorney at Chicago, before a Senate judiciary subcommittee. It told of the four years' war waged by Federal authorities on Chicago gangs, culminating in the conviction of Al Capone.

It is not my purpose to go into that report here. The reader who professes to be aroused by the recent transgressions of the underworld already has read it or will not hesitate to study it for himself. In many respects it is quite terrifying.

The district attorney told of wholesale gang murders, the intimidation of witnesses called before grand juries, and pictured the rise of Al Capone to the overlordship of Chicago's underworld. He told how organized crime became a big business and how the leading gangsters were so arrogant that they even had the temerity to attend public banquets in company with men of public affairs.

The crimes committed by these gangsters were not confined to intra-underworld wars. They reached out toward the public, chiefly in the form of the kidnaping racket. When they found that the public, and even the local officials, were more or less indifferent—certainly helpless—they spread the racket to other large cities.

The Federal government then stepped in to smash the underworld of Chicago—or at least its most powerful elements. A campaign of numerous arrests, prosecutions and gun battles was started solely to get at Al Capone.

In the end the Federal government was victorious. But let us keep this in mind—society was not. A great community, with every modern law-enforcing facility at its command, had let gangland spring up in its midst while it stood helplessly and supinely by. Murders and robberies and extortion increased but nothing was done about it. Then the Federal government came along and had to swing the fantastic income tax law weapon.

Let us turn now to the other report. Issued by Police Commissioner Mulrooney of New York, it reviewed the number and nature of crimes committed in the American metropolis. The statistics are unimportant here. What is important is this paragraph:

"In past years, the criminal at the 'line-up' was middle-aged, intemperate, experienced in crime and limited in his activities to a special type of offense. Today the opposite. The 'line-up' presents a parade of youths ranging in age from seventeen to twenty-one, versatile in crime, who cold-bloodedly and calmly recite voluntarily in the presence of spectators and press, the most intimate details of the planning and execution of ruthless crime."

If this is not an obvious indication that our social system has been severely battered nothing is. But what explanation do the authorities give for this condition? The obvious, convenient one, of course: that youth today lacks responsibility, morality and respect for law and justice.

All that may be true. But what the elderly authorities say nothing about is the spectacle of "law and justice" thrust daily before our young men and women. They do not speak of the seeming impotency of the law machinery, of the mockery of corruption and graft in high places, of the profusion of rackets that go on unchecked because of alliances between the underworld and the upperworld.

Youth is NOT to blame for that. The blame belongs to an older generation, a generation that countenanced the menace of gangland when our youth of today were small children or babes in arms. If our elderly authorities want to know what intelligent youth thinks of things let them read a recent issue of "The Yale News," published by the undergraduate body of Yale University.

This publication speaks of the college man's disgust with the present flaunting of the law, of his disgust with government as he observes its impotency. It says that politics is no longer a decent profession and that "the increasing abhorrence of educated young men for it is the most serious of all menaces to American principles."

Our elderly authorities, quick to blame youth for their own indifferent methods of safeguarding society, might study that with profit. They will understand then why youth has only the choice of cynicism when it reads of the failure of our elderly lawmakers and administrators to stop the wave of kidnaping, murders and robberies rampant.

And for further enlightenment they might read Mr. O'Malley's series of articles. They will find not youth, but a highly organized underworld system to blame for the situation in Chicago and every other community afflicted with kidnaping.

MODERN American society, aided by the average criminologist, has spoofed at the idea that the intellectual criminal existed outside of fiction.

Even when Professor Tyrrell Williams, of the Washington University Law School, recently stated that a high intelligence is behind recent crime, the cry went up from various police sources that such an assertion was entirely too far-fetched. Even Commissioner Mulrooney, of New York, intimated that most crimes were committed by irresponsible youths.

But the recent history of kidnaping reveals how highly organized the racket is and the striking proof of craft and brains behind it. The kidnaper-for-ransom is not only unscrupulous; he is also fearless, suave and calculating.

Once he was satisfied to extort huge sums from the bootlegger, gambler, racketeer and even the labor leader. But now he picks names of intended victims from Dun's, Bradstreet's, Who's Who in America, social registers and even Burke's Peerage and the Almanac de Gotha. Only recently, for instance, the cables carried news from London that threats had been made to kidnap Princess Elizabeth Alexander Mary and Princess Margaret Rose, little daughters of the Duke and Duchess of York—and granddaughters of the King and Queen of England!

The American kidnaper has many systems of mulcting victims of huge sums. In some cases he adopts methods used in carrying out other kinds of extortion. A favorite idea, for instance, is to revive the old "We-Boy" racket in a new form.

That is, the "front man" of the kidnaping gang, posing as a representative of the local "Press Club," calls on a business man and suggests a big donation. Of course, this kidnaper has no connection with any "Press Club."

In Some Cases the Ransom Money Is Demanded BEFORE the "Hoist"

But he uses the disguise for two purposes: First, to gain entrance to the business man's office; second, to give his victim a chance to pay money without further trouble.

The "front man" first hints that "there are certain things no man would want printed about himself or family." Then he bows himself out of the office. Indignant, the business man investigates and learns his solicitor is an impostor. But that doesn't help much. He begins to receive telephone calls and threats day and night.

When he refuses to give a "donation," the business man is requested to telephone another business man and "find out what happened to him." When he does so, he learns that this other victim, having refused to make a donation, was abducted and forced to pay heavily.

The threat of exposure, in itself, often frightens some business men It is based on the fact that when "snatching" was first started, it marked as victims only individuals engaged in illegitimate businesses. These were mainly gamblers, bookmakers and bootleggers, who would have to stand silently for the "shake" without daring to appeal to authorities because of their reputations. The kidnaper applies this to the business man, because of his psychological assumption that every individual has some secret in his life he would not care to have made public.

That it worked well in the case of gamblers and bookmakers is substantiated by the reports of millions of dollars extracted from them by the hoisters. William T. Doyle, when Inspector of Police at Detroit, once announced that in a single kidnaping "campaign" of a few months more than $500,000 had been thus collected. The kidnapers' success, in fact, was so great, that they turned to men in legitimate business.

In March, 1928, James E. Hall, wealthy Detroit hotel owner, was hoisted from his home at Grosse Point, just outside of Detroit, by men who represented themselves as deputy sheriffs. Hall didn't see why sheriffs should want him, but, curious, he agreed to accompany them. He never arrived in the sheriff's office, however—but in a kidnap castle.

Shortly after, Mrs. Hall received two ransom letters demanding $10,000. Not long after, Hall

How the Mother of One Famous Baby Outwitted Kidnapers

AT the time the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped it had been left alone, unguarded, in its crib. In contrast to this were the great precautions taken years ago to guard another famous baby, John Nicholas Brown.

In 1900 John was only a 9-weeks-old, red-faced baby when his father, John Nicholas Brown, New England capitalist, died. He left his son ten million dollars and a front-page heritage.

Naturally, he became the target for many a kidnaping plot. At the age of six, attempts were made to get him. Threatening letters were received by his mother.

As a result of these threats extreme measures were taken. The Brown estate at Newport, where the child lived with his mother, was screened from intrusion by a barbed wire fence. Two armed detectives guarded the grounds.

As he grew older the boy protested against this imprisonment because of his wealth. But he was forced, nevertheless, to spend his boyhood play days in a barbed wire corral. As he entered manhood he became known as America's "hot-house bachelor." Today the handsome, tall, young man is able to take care of himself.

returned home. He denied that the kidnapers had been paid any money. He said that when the money was not forthcoming from his wife, the kidnapers had threatened to kill him. Then they drove him to his bank, but when he found Mrs. Hall already had withdrawn the money, thus outwitting the hoisters, they let him go.

About the same time, it became known that Harvey E. Watson, Detroit labor leader, was "hoisted" and held for $25,000 ransom. James L. Shumway, another hotel proprietor, was "taken," but whether he paid a sum of money in return for his release was never definitely learned.

The case of Mert Wertheimer, a brother of Al Wertheimer, also said to have been "hoisted," was explained to me by Inspector Doyle.

"The way I got it," he said, "Wertheimer and one of his companions were kidnaped and driven from Detroit to an apartment building in Chicago. The companion was ordered to return to Detroit, to register under an assumed name at a certain hotel and raise money for Wertheimer's release. He did so, and got the money to Chicago and Wertheimer was freed.

"The kidnapers treated Wertheimer well during his captivity and even played cards with him. The story (whether true or not, it is amusing) goes that Wertheimer won $60 in one game and said he would win enough to pay his ransom if they let him play long enough. One of the gunmen is said to have replied, 'Never mind, Mert, we'll get it all back, no matter how much you win.'"

Joseph B. Drell, owner of a chain of handbooks along West Madison St., Chicago, was kidnaped one day when he had driven his two children, Madeline and Leonard, to the John Marshall High School. The abduction took place while several school children and other witnesses looked on. It was said that he paid $25,000 for his release—but all such statements cannot be accepted as accurate since the victim seldom talks. That was the police estimate of the ransom, however.

Another strange case was that of Philip Blumenthal, wealthy retired sacramental wine dealer of Chicago. After kidnaping him, the gangsters forced him to pay $10,000. Then they released him—but only with the threat that he would be hoisted again if he did not dig up $15,000 more. Detectives laid a trap for the kidnapers, but in a skirmish Detective Ray Martin was shot and killed.

The following day the police learned that Blumenthal had been held in a garage in the rear of a house. As a result, several men were arrested, but in subsequent trials all of them were found not guilty. The law had run up against a stone wall of mystery and the identity of the actual kidnapers was never established. One of the men suspected, Dave Miller, was shot and killed during a card game in Louisville, Ky.

Meanwhile, other kidnaping cases caused a reign of fear among Chicago business men. Walter Kelly, insurance man, was hoisted and later released without paying ransom money. Then Milton Held, publisher and cafe owner, and Abe Goldman, handbook owner, were kidnaped. Goldman was released two days later after paying, police said, $20,000. Held, on the third day of his captivity, was released after paying $10,000.

Besides other important cases in the Chicago territory, mentioned in previous chapters, William Urban, Peoria baseball operator, was held for several days until his friends were reported to have paid $100,000. Harold Gusack, beer-runner, who served time for a mail robbery, was held three days until his brother paid abductors $10,000, the Chicago police learned.

Two wealthy brewers, Frank Richey, of Evanston, Ill., and Fred J. Blumer, of Monroe, Wis., were taken in April, 1931, by the same band of kidnapers. Blumer was threatened with death unless he paid $150,000. Then one day, during a machine-gun battle between Chicago police and two carloads of gangsters in the streets of Wenona, Ill., Blumer was tossed into the street from a car. The information was that he had paid $50,000.

In most of these cases, police learned, there was litle violence inflicted by kidnapers against victims. The kidnapers were content to make vague threats of one kind or another. An exception was a case I referred to last week, in which an old gambler and his pretty young ward were kidnaped and held for a huge ransom—which eventually was paid.

During their imprisonment, the kidnapers, determined to frighten the girl into carrying out part of their well-prepared plans, gave her a hint of the severest form of the "water-cure." They took her to a lake, near the kidnap castle, and placed her in a regulation diver's suit, with helmet and everything attached. Then they lowered her into the water, pumping oxygen into the helmet. The frantic girl waited on the bottom of the lake, wondering what would happen next.

Nothing serious happened, however. They brought her back to the surface. Then one of the kidnapers said:

"How would you like to go down this time without the air—and stay down?" The girl, realizing the horror of such a fate, agreed to do their bidding, and thus became an unwilling instrument in their successful ransom plot.

But Chicago was not the only mid-west community afflicted with the kidnaping disease. St. Louis, since the latter part of 1929, has been a hotbed of "hoisting" and hoisting racketeers. The first known victims were "Mulepole" Fritz and Harry King, handbook operators, who paid $63,000 for their release in December of that year.

This was followed by many other kidnaping cases. In two of them ransoms totaling $68,000 were paid.

On Feb. 21, 1930, Jacob Hoffman, bookmaker, of St. Louis County, was hoisted by five masked men and taken to a dance hall and notorious resort, where he was held. The kidnapers first robbed him of $114 and then demanded a ransom of $25,000 through his backer, a circus owner. Before the ransom was paid, however, detectives and police raided the resort and freed Hoffman.

For a Time, St. Louis Was the Locale For Many Successful Kidnapings

John T. Soy, 65-year-old gambler, of East St. Louis, was later kidnaped and held for a week. Several members of the so-called "Shelton Gang" were arrested when police intercepted three $20,000 checks signed by Soy. In July, 1930, Sam Scorfina, St. Louis gr r, was kidnaped and robbed by five men of $400. Then they demanded a ransom of $10,000. Sam was beaten severely, but he made a spectacular escape.

There were fourteen other big kidnaping cases, several of which have been described in previous chapters, within a period of twenty-three months in the St. Louis area. More than $1,000,000 was collected by the hoisters as ransom money. The entire community became so aroused that a St. Louis newspaper finally let out this indignant blast:

"We are in a grip of terror, and we will continue to be preyed upon by the criminal world until the community is purged of gangs... The skill with which the kidnapers operate and carry out their plans, while officers of the law play at blind man's buff, illustrates the point made by Professor Tyrrell Williams, of Washington University Law School, when he said that modern society has to contend with the intellectual criminal...

"The community can only ask: 'What next?' Neither life nor property is secure. The enemies of society have become a force to be reckoned with—a dangerous, efficient and merciless force. The time has come for law-abiding people to stand together, to organize for good government, to scrutinize the acts of every public official, and to see that only the friends of society are on guard. It is the price of safety."

"A QUITTER NEVER WINS—

—A WINNER NEVER QUITS"

IT WAS on Tuesday that we received a visit from the Pelham boys who lived across the river. Briggen, the leader of the Pelhams, insisted upon seeing me alone. So as soon as the meeting was over, I went back with him into my writing room and told him to tell his story quickly.

"It's about the Questa gang," he said, "you know the fellow I told you about—he's riding again—every night we see their ponies galloping over the Pelham hills—"

"Wait a minute," I said; "Briggen, ever since you told me about this Questa—"

"You mean you have not seen him?"

"Oh, yes, I have seen Questa," I answered, "but not once have I seen his gang. Is he really leading a gang, or is it just an imaginary thing that you have built up—"

"Imaginary my eye!" exclaimed Briggen. "I tell you I saw a herd of riderless ponies dashing up from the hollow between our hills and Burney's Field. Looked like wild horses—but later they came back, and this time they had riders on 'em. And what's more, they were led by Questa, who rides a white horse—"

"You mean a white pony, don't you?"

"I mean what I said, a white horse. Yes, sir, the white horse leads the ponies. That gang doesn't like us and they ride down everything we have over there on the Pelham shore. Our camp is a wreck when they have passed."

"What do you want me to do?" I asked, softly.

"Hah! you got a pony, ain't ya?"

"Yes; what about it?"

"As I told you before when you wouldn't believe me—a guy on your pony comes along not long after the Questa gang rides by. And say, Hawkins, if you'd see how fast he rides that beautiful little nag of yours, you wouldn't be asking me question here—"

"That'll do!" I snapped. "He's ridden my pony for the last time. Go back to your side of the river, Briggen, you and your pals. Tomorrow I may have something to tell you."

* * * *

I called in Shadow Loomis.

"Shadow," I said, "have you got anything to do tonight?"

"Why, no, Seck!" he said. "Anything exciting on your mind?"

"Yes. You know the mystery Sadler's daddy gave us to solve?"

The mystery of how his horses seem to have been out all night, coming back in the morning all covered with white flecks of perspiration?"

"Yes! It must be those smaller horses he had in his stables, because the Pelham boys said they were ponies. Now, then, you go up to the barn and saddle your pony and mine, and bring them here at once. Better telephone your mother you may not be home for supper. We might have to stay late."

In a little while Shadow returned riding his own beautiful sorrel, Fair Play, and leading my bald-faced bay, whom I called Winner.

"Where do we go?" asked Shadow, as I swung into the saddle.

"To Dixiana Farm," I said, "where we shall attempt to solve a mystery for Mr. Sadler and win a reward."

"That's great! Come on, Fair Play, old boy! Show this Hawkins boy how good you are!"

We saw Questa grab for the saddle as the white horse passed him!

"Oh, yeah!" I exclaimed, as I touched Winner lightly with my heels. "But you can't beat a winner, my dear Shadow. Ha! what did I tell you! Well, so long—I'll wait for you at Dixiana!"

* * * *

Dixiana stables were always interesting. Sadler and his daddy loved the horses and ponies that were raised there. It was no surprise to find the boy, known to everyone down on our old river bank as Sadler of the Seventeen, because his gang consisted of sixteen others boys, all of whom rode ponies on their trips through the surrounding woods, with his father in the open courtyard that lay in the midst of those wonderfully built stables of brick in which the finest horseflesh in the country was quartered. They supplied not only the farmers with heavy duty horses, but also the city folks who loved to ride on bridle paths. Just lately Mr. Sadler has begun to send his fatest horses to race tracks all over the country, and now there had come to him men from far away to buy the colts that some day would win derby races or some such event to bring fame and fortune to their owners.

"It's about time you showed up," said Mr. Sadler to me, as we alighted. "I had begun to think that your affairs in the little clubhouse down on the old river bank were of more importance than the mystery I asked you to solve here."

"No, don't think so," I told him. "But we have been having hard times, too. We took in two new members. Antonio, an Italian boy with a pet monkey, and Bert Hammerford—"

"Ah, yes, I know his father!" broke in Mr. Sadler. "I don't know what good the Italian boy might do your club, but I'm sure Bert Hammerford will be a credit to you. I should like to congratulate you upon securing him as a member of your club—"

"Well, you can save your breath," I interrupted, "for we no longer have either one. Antonio has disappeared, with his father under suspicious circumstances. If we could find him back, we might be able to help him—and ourselves. But the only one who know where he is happens to be the other new member, Bert Hammerford. And last night he resigned from the club because we asked him to tell where Antonio was."

"Ah, what a pity!" exclaimed Mr. Sadler. "Do you think he likes the Italian boy—"

"Naw, he desn't!" broke in Shadow Loomis. "But Antonio has a sister—Rosa is her name—she is pretty—Bert Hammerford likes her—he even took her to our clubhouse last night to show her where it was—so she could bring back Antonio's pet monkey—which had returned to our clubhouse. And, mind you, that monkey was the only means of us finding Antonio again—we knew for sure he would come for the monkey—and then we could follow him to his secret home—but he sent his sister, and Bert helped her find the clubhouse—now what do you think of that?"

"Well," said Mr. Sadler, with a little laugh, "it's just like Bert! He would do such a thing—you see, I know his father—every inch a gentleman, and his son is the same, I can believe. But what has all that to do with the work I gave you?"

"Not a thing," I spoke up, waving aside all other matters, "and I'm here to do what I can for you, Mr. Sadler. Now, then, you said that certain of your smaller horses appeared to have been taken from your stables at night, because you found them in a sweat the next morning."

"Exactly, Hawkins," said Mr. Sadler, and a mischievous smile played about the corners of his mouth. "Just as though they might have been bewitched, to leave at the hour of midnight, to travel a good distance and back in a hurry, and we find them each morning covered with foam—"

"But surely you kept a watch on your stables at night, after you found that out?"

"Of course! And we might have found the answer to our riddle, had we wished. But, Hawkins, the whole thing seemed so fantastic, a sort of thing in which I was sure you would be interested, that I told Oscar, my colored stable boy, to let things run until you came. I sat up a few nights with Oscar and watched. It was fascinating. I want you to see how it was done. Have you anything on tonight, or can you stay and keep your eyes open for the show?"

"We shall stay," I answered, "until the end of the show!"

* * * *

Throughout the early watches of the night we sat huddled in a secluded alcove of the inner courtyard and watched.

"Well," I said in a low whisper to Shadow, "at least we have Winner and Fair Play with us—there's no chance of anybody riding our ponies tonight. I wonder who it could have been, and why he always picked out Winner to ride?"

"Don't wonder," said Shadow, shortly. "Let's watch. Look there's the moon."

From behind the hills of Pelham hills the late moon began to poke its yellow rim.

It was not long thereafter until we heard a slight noise. It was from the dwelling house behind us, as though a key turned softly in a lock. We turned our heads, to see the side door of Mr. Sadler's mansion open slowly. A dark figure with a lantern banging at his knees came out and closed the door. It was James, the colored man who acted as butler in Dixiana Manor. Slowly he closed the door behind him and set the lantern on the stoop. Then he came softly down the bricked courtyard.

Almost immediately there came a clatter of hoof-beats. James hurried to the door of the courtyard and admitted—a rider on a white horse! The colored man turned swiftly and ran back to the stable where the smaller horses were quartered, and opened the door. The rider on the white horse dismounted and allowed the white horse to go where he willed. The rider seemed familiar in the pale light of the rising moon—by Jinks! I knew him! It was Questa! I saw him approach the colored man, James, at the same time drawing something like a dollar bill from his pocket and handing it to the servant. They whispered something to each other—but I did not care to listen—I had turned my eyes toward the white horse—the white horse was loping into the stable door—disappeared within the dark stable—

"Good boy, James!" came the muffled sound of Questa's voice! "You are a lifesaver, James—"

"Ah cain't never fergit ye, Massa Louis," came the darkey's low answer. "I tol' yer pappy I'd stan' by yo' all lahk I stood by him when turrible times came—Ah aims to live up to mah word, Massa Louis."

"Here they come, James—stand aside, I've got to grab that white Napoleon when he passes or he'll forget he's civilized—ah, there, Napoleon!"

He had turned suddenly as he began speaking, toward the door of the stables, from which now issued the white horse, leading behind him the herd of smaller horses—and they ran like mad! A circus, I thought! These horses had been in a circus! The white horse had been their leader in the circus ring! They were only following again the leader, as they had in the days before they had become the property of the baddy of Sadler's Seventeen.

We saw Questa grab for the saddle as the white horse passed him! Like an old cavalryman, he had swung into the saddle and was off, the thundering sound of the many hoof-beats ringing behind him. The colored servant stood like a black statue in the moonlight watching the steeds flash past him. Then he turned, and slowly walked over to the courtyard gate, and closed it without a sound.

The moon threw its mellow light across the top of the courtyard wall. We saw the old darkey walk slowly back to the stoop, where he picked up his lantern and disappeared through the door into the mansion.

"Well, Hawkins," said Mr. Sadler, as we all rose from our hidden positions, "there you have seen the whole show, just as we have seen it many nights. Quite a drama, isn't it?"

"You do not take it seriously?" I asked.

"Why should I?" asked Mr. Sadler. "James is a good servant. He is probably bound around with a woolen string of loyalty to some earlier employer, before he came into my service. But until he does something which seems to me more serious than this, I should not like to part with him. Just as you have seen him loyal tonight to the rider of the white horse, so his loyalty has been to the house of Dixiana. But I thought you, as a boy detective, would find something of unusual interest, if not of value, in observing such a scene as you have witnessed tonight. The horses will return before daybreak. And even if they shouldn't, they are not of sufficient value to cause me worry."

"My dear Mr. Sadler," I said, quietly, "if you will allow me I should like to suggest that this scene that I have witnessed tonight means more than you might imagine. I do not profess to be a boy detective. My adventures with Jeckerson, the great detective of Watertown, who is now in China, were lessons to me. He taught me to reason things out as I do—and I don't want to alarm you, but I believe that a great mystery lies underneath this business which we have seen tonight. Will you allow me to take charge of it, and promise me that you will not stop anything that is going on around here until you hear from me again? It may mean much money—riches, perhaps—and it may even mean the saving of a life, Mr. Sadler—"

"My dear boy!" exclaimed Sadler's daddy hurriedly, "I assure you that I shall co-operate with you to the fullest. Trust me not to interfere with any mysterious goings on around Dixiana Farm. And I shall leave into your hands, and the hands of your club members, the final solution of this peculiar affair. I am sure you will unravel the mystery."

Which we did.

HAVE YOU HEARD SECKATARY HAWKINS ON THE AIR?

Each Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, eastern standard time, Saturday Seckatary Hawkins and his pals give their half-hour playlet of the latest adventure happening on the old river bank near their clubhouse.

These sketches come from station WLW, Cincinnati.

It's just as good as a show, too. You hear Seck talking and all the other characters who take part in that week's story, and the action is full of thrilling, exciting moments.

Tune in next Saturday and hear it. Curtain rises promptly at 3:30, when you hear the steamboat whistle blow—and you're down on the old river bank with Seck and his pals.

A SUMMERTIME PASSWORD.

"Mother's Day" was the solution of last week's password. And I gave you the biggest hint when I said "What day is this?"

Well, summertime is coming again, and there will be a couple of places in the outdoors that will be a second home to most boys. There are some places that a fellow likes better than any in the summertime, and one I have in mind—it's where I happened to pass the other day, and I heard some boys talking happily a little distance from me, and one said: "Glim this new home! Oh, boy, here's where you'll find me most of the time this summer."

The voice came from a place behind a beautiful setting of green growing things, so high and so thick that I couldn't see where the boys were, but I knew, anyway. Yes, the boy's first four words told me:

GLIM THIS NEW HOME

That's the password, you see. Change these letters around until they are in their right places, and they will spell three words that tell you where the boys were, and you'll understand it perfectly.

WHAT THE SECKATARY HAWKINS BOYS AND GIRLS ARE DOING

Dear Pen Pals:

Along about this time of the year we boys begin to figure on where we are going to make our summer camp, where we are going to dig our bait, and how many fish we are going to catch. There is a cozy little nook down on the river bank where the willows make a graceful canopy over your head, and you can throw your line in most any time and get a good bite right off the reel. Good times, fishing and swimming, rowing or canoeing, and a good game of baseball . . . and oh, boy! no school all summer.

June is just about two weeks off—the happy month for every boy and girl, for it brings with it good old summer time and a long vacation. I think most of our pen pals will be writing about summer time this week. And what a nice subject! Some of our pen pals get discouraged easily, and if the first two or three attempts at letter writing don't win a book, they give up. But they are not the ones who hold the motto that a "Quitter Never Wins." It's the fellow who can smile when he fails, and then starts right up and tries again—yes, sir! he's the one who is sure to be a success some day.

Boys and girls all over are interested in what other boys and girls are doing, and it is interesting to receive postcards from members in faraway places. Some of our members write me that they have a collection of cards and letters from members in 30 to 40 different states, as well as from Canada and foreign countries. This pastime has grown to be one of our favorites, and is almost as interesting if not more so than stamp collecting.

We now present communications from members in different states, and those members whose letters are formally presented with a few lines of introduction will receive a book of our club's earlier adventures down on the old river bank. We are glad to present as the first one today a pen pal who lives in Kentucky:

Dear Seck:

This is my fourth letter I am writing. I received your pin and I wear it always, but I did not win one of your books. I am trying so hard to win one, so please send me one. I sure am glad that spring is here.

You knew, Seck, I am not going to give up yet. I will always remember that a winner never quits and a quitter never wins. So I remain,

Yours, fair and square,
MARGARET SMITH,
830 Bakewell St., Covington, Ky.

And here is a new member of our club, a little Buckeye pen pal, who writes a very nice letter:

Dear Seck:

I am sending the membership card with this letter. This is the first time I have written. But I am trying to win a book. Gee! I get a lot of enjoyment out of your club. You may be sure I will never quit until I have won all of these books. I will never forget that good motto, "A quitter never wins and a winner never quits." Well, I hope I win a book.

Yours, fair and square,
BETTY TILLETT, 9.
909 Fraid St., Akron, Ohio.

One of our pen pals from West Virginia wins a book after writing several times, which just proves that perseverance wins:

Dear Seck:

Although I have written to you several times, I have never won one of your books, but I never think of getting discouraged. If at first I don't succeed, I try, try, try again, and I'm always "Fair and Square." I am in my first year of high school, and I certainly do get along well in school. I make excellent grades, and I am going to do my best to pass my first year. I certainly do like your stories, and hoping this letter doesn't land in the waste-basket, I remain, a true club member.

Always fair and square,
ALZENE WARD,
Nolan, W. Va.

This pen pal from the Hoosier state writes to us in verse, and we might add that it was very neatly written:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:
If a fairy waved her hand
To grant me wishes two,
One wish would be to join your band
Of merry friends so true.
The other wish of mine would be
To win a book so fine;
Your club's adventures I would see
Live again in every line.
So, Seck, please send to me a badge
Or a book will do;
I'll promise to obey your pledge,
If you grant these wishes two.
And now I've done the best I could
To convey this thought in mind;
And if you say I may, I would
Be fair and square and kind.

Yours sincerely,
BETTY LE MAY,
911 South Shipley, Muncie, Ind.

The meeting will now adjourn till next week, when we meet again on this page. Don't put off writing your letter—send it in as early as you can. And perhaps it will be read in one of our meetings soon.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

Write on one side of paper only. Make your letter interesting to other pen pals who may see it in print, as well as Seckatary Hawkins. Limit it to not more than two hundred words. Try for good penmanship and correct punctuation. Your age must be given, as well as your full address. Above all, write plainly. Address all letters to Seckatary Hawkins, in care of The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

PRIZE WILL BE SECKATARY HAWKINS BOOK

Dear Seck and Everyone:

Speaking of circus—As I guess most everybody is at the present—usually is thought of as merely speaking of sights and fun. Some people really don't get anything out of the circus but excitement and "goodies" with oodles of fun. They are to be pitied for these people are not wise enough to combine knowledge with fun. A dull imagination even can really be benefited by the wondrous circus. I don't think anything affords better food for the imagination than the outrageously curious animals.

When you are in the science class, does it ever dawn on you that the strange animals you study about are interesting?

When you go to the circus and see them in real flesh and blood do you compare them to what you learned in science or geography—their characters, home, etc.?

The next visit we make to the circus lets all—while eating peanuts and candy and laughing at the clowns' jokes—look at the animals in a new light and compare them to our text book statements.

The elephant, for instance. Look at the flesh and blood elephant and picture him uprooting great trees in the jungles of India. How could nature possibly be so liberal with strength when she came to Mr. Elephant?

The circus is full of fun, excitement and amazement and also of curious existence. So lets all let the curiosity inside us work hard and really give serious thought to the reality in the funny circus.

A fair and square circus lover,
VIRGINIA McCURRY,
55 Doyle St., Atlanta, Ga.

Hello Seck:

I sure am glad to be a member of such a wonderful fair and square club as yours, I like your motto very much, too.

I am 5 feet 3½ inches tall, weigh 112½ pounds. I have light hair, light complexion and blue eyes. I was 14 years old May 1. Have I a twin? I go to Stilson High school and I am in the seventh grade.

My favorite sports are baseball and basketball. My hobbies are raising motherless pets and reading. I've raised many pets, including a baby squirrel, that was so young that I gave it milk with a medicine dropper until it was large enough to eat other things. I also raised a baby lamb, two goats and one pig on a bottle.

Tell the other pen pals to write to me and I will answer their letters immediately.

A fair and square pal,
EFFIE W. CONE,
Ivanhoe, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I should like to have pen pals from other states, foreign countries, too.

I have already one pen pal from Richland, Georgia.

Listen to this poetry:

I am a little girl,
Who has not a curl,
But my hair is straight—
As a goat's big bleat,
But I am fat,
Like a ball bat!

MARGARET RAY,
Route 3, Cedartown, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have pneumonia, but am better now. I don't think I will get to go back to school any more this term.

I am going to tell you about one time I went to the circus. When we went in a wild man grabbed at my aunt's foot. We went in a tent and saw the elephants and women came in standing up on horses and pigeons were flying and lighting on their shoulders. We saw all the wild animals and saw the women doing tricks. I sure did have a good time. Everything was fair and square.

Yours, fair and square,
ELIZABETH MARCHMAN, 13,
Veazey, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Today my mother and father and I, with Judy, my puppy, took some pictures. We went to a bluff, where one could look over the marsh, and I got some very pretty scenes.

I have never joined a club like this before, so of course, it is all new to me. I doubt if I have a twin, because my name is sure unusual, but I wish someone would write to me. I read the letters of the other pen pals every week and I'm going to chose one of them, (after I am a member), and write.

I will be in high school next year. I am very busy with my studies now, because I have to take monthly state and final exams all in five weeks.

My hobby is writing, that is writing stories, poems, etc.

Horseback riding, golf and swimming are my favorite sports, though I'm not so good at either one.

Yours, fair and square,
MARGERY PLOEGER, 12,
Box C, Darien, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Please don't get scared and I will describe myself. I am 12 years old, have brown hair, brown eyes, light complexion, 4 feet 10 inches tall and weigh 90 pounds.

I think your motto is wonderful. I also like your colors, blue and white.

Come on pen pals, write me and I will answer every one received.

Always yours, fair and square,
ETHEL WRIGHT,
Bremen, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am very anxious to get one of your books and read of your adventures. I have been a member of your club for a long time, but have never as yet won a book.

I am 12 years old and am in high school.

I have a rabbit and dog for pets, but have never decided which I like best.

I like your club so well I am going to get my friends to join so they can share my pleasure.

I hope my pen pals will write and I wish to say that I will gladly answer any letters from them.

Yours, fair and square,
MIGNONNE MYERS,
Sewanee, Tenn.

Dear Seck:

I am a little girl 11 years old. I go to school. I am in the fifth grade. I live in the country, about seven miles from town. My favorite study is history. The flowers I love best are roses. I am four feet seven inches tall, have brown hair and brown eyes. I weigh 74 pounds. My birthday is April 3. My brother's birthday is the fourth of April. He is nine years older than I.

My favorite sports are swimming and fishing. One day my brother and I went fishing. We saw a snake lying in the water watching the fish swim around it, but they never would get close to it and I said to my brother. "That must be a snake." So he took his hook and touched it and it moved. Then we tried to kill it, but it got away. We went back and told the whole story to mother and father. They said it was a wonder we hadn't run.

Yours, fair and square,
GEORGIE CORN,
Route 1, Box 32, Blairsville, Ga.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

Three years ago I sent a story to your page and won a book. I liked it, of course. My favorite hobby is reading and, besides, no one could keep from liking your books. Although, I've waited three years, I haven't forgotten that a quitter never wins and a winner never quits, and I've been planning to write again.

I'm 15 years old and in the ninth grade at school. The girls of our class at school have a baseball team. I have a good time, even though I do strike out every time at bat.

I have a twin brother. He reads your page all the time, and is a member of your club. He's also a Boy Scout.

I hope that I will soon be the proud possessor of another Seckatary Hawkins book.

Yours, fair and square,
ALLENE McLEOD,
Morrow, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am writing you to tell you how much I appreciate your piece in both the daily and Sunday Constitution.

I always look forward each day to the paper, for I know it brings your piece.

Yours, fair and square,
TALMADOE WHILTOW, 13,
R. F. D. 3, Canon, Ga.

Today's Prize

Hello Seck:

Well, vacation is here with me. Our school was out on April 22. Seck I am sending a short poem about May. I hope it is printed. Here it goes:

MAY.

M is for May,
Who is now here;
Yes, she is with us,
Bringing 31 days of cheer.

A is for apples,
That are so green when they come out;
Every little living plant
Is now beginning to sprout.

Y is the last letter,
It stands for year,
With its snow, rain and sunshine
And other things so dear.

I would like to receive some new pen pals, so let the letters fly my way.

Yours, fair and square,
LORENE RAKESTRAW,
Route 4, Marietta, Ga.

Hints For Flower and Vegetable Gardeners

BY W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

DURING the very early spring the roses in almost every garden bloomed most magnificently. This was true in the case of almost very variety planted, but only those hat have continued to have the proper are, the proper fertilization and the roper pruning, are still blooming. Some ery interesting results are appearing rom the large number of newer varieties f roses that were planted last winter. Ther are some of these that have been utstanding successes in almost every arden in which they were planted.

The most outstanding one variety that as given remarkable results in almost very instance is Talisman. Everyone hat has attended any flower show remembers the very beautiful Talisman oses that were displayed, and because f those presentations of this variety, was almost generally planted. There ere remarkably few cases of winter kill eported, and in almost every instance lower lovers have been more than satisied with this new variety. Talisman in ur garden has given a beautiful blend f yellow, pink and old rosé that has rightened and become more distinct as he blossoms come into full bloom.

Talisman rose is a hybrid tea and at he present time is still blooming, although it blooms only occasionally during the month of June. Talisman is a very double rose, usually having from 23 to 28 petals. It is interesting to know that Talisman, our new favorite, is a seedling of two old favorites, Ophelia and Claudius Pernet, and it seems that it has retained the good qualities of each one of these old varieties without keeping any of the objectionable features.

Another new variety that is quite a sensation this year is Etoile de Holland and its companion, Irish Sweetness. These two roses are fine. Etoile de Holland is recognized as the very best dark, brilliant red rose of the newer varieties. The color holds remarkably well, and although the buds are small, they open into very large flowers that hold a most pleasing fragrance. Another quality that is of unusual importance in most gardens is the fact that it will grow well in partial shade. Irish Sweetness is rivaling Etoile de Holland as the best red rose. Its color is crimson scarlet, it is very fragrant, and the two shades of red make a pleasing combination.

Our new friend of two or three years standing, Golden Dawn, is becoming more and more popular. The buds are beautiful, the stems are long, and the plant is a very branching, shapely one. Golden Dawn does best in a cool season and for that reason has done usually well this year. However, with the proper mulching and summer care it will hold well in the hot weather.

Rev. F. Page Roberts, another hybrid tea that is making friends this year, is usually classified as a yellow. The buds are copper red of great length, and open into golden yellow blossoms of great fragrance. When Rev. F. Page Roberts is in full bloom the backs of the petals are stained with red, while the flowers are a clear golden yellow. Rev. F. Page Roberts' greatest claim for distinction lies in the fact that it will bloom freely through the autumn, the time of the year when very few roses except the Radiances and old-fashioned Cochets are doing well.

Roses are very heavy feeders. Because of this, and because of the fact that they are very unselfish, in the case of a great many roses, it seems that easiest blooms are obtained from heavy fertilization. This prolificacy of blooms means to us that enjoy it, that the rose is feeding heavily, and our part in this beauty is to supply this food for the roses.

For constant use and continuous feeding, use a mixture of sheep manure and bone meal. These two should be mixed in equal parts and a double handful of this mixture placed around each plant about once every three or four weeks, for the plant food to become readily available. After scattering the fertilizer around the plant, work it in slightly with a small hoe and soak the ground thoroughly.

Bone meal is probably the safest of all fertilizers. This is true because it works very slowly. Bone meal contains both nitrogen and phosphorous, and may be applied in such quantities that the ground becomes white without danger of burning plants. Plant food generally becomes available one month after it is applied, and the plant will continue to feed on this application from three to four months. However, to insure a continuous supply of food, it is best that monthly applications be made.

In the early spring and during those parts of the summer that the flowers are appearing in greatest numbers, it will be to the plants' advantage to fertilize with some high-grade complete fertilizer. Those having an analysis of from 10-6-4 to 12-4-4, are generally considered best. Apply these fertilizers in small quantities. The fertilizer should be worked into the soil thoroughly, and it is of great importance that the soil be soaked thoroughly.

Summer Care of Roses

White Running Rose.

INSECTS AND DISEASES.

With a bit of preventative treatment the care of roses, in so far as insects and diseases are concerned, should give us very little, if any, trouble. The insects that attack roses are two sorts: the little sucking aphis or flies, and the rose beetles, or curculio, which eat the plants. The aphis or flies and other sucking insects may be easily killed by a thorough application of any of the pyrethrum sprays or by a thorough application of nicotine sulphate. Either one of these two sprays will be effective against the little pests. The curculio and rose beetles are best controlled by the use of an arsenical poison which is calcium arsenate, arsenate of lead or magnesium arsenate. Probably the best one of these arsenical poisons is arsenate of lead.

The one disease that attacks roses is black spot. This is a fungous disease, and an explanation of the American Rose Society states that a thorough dusting with a mixture of sulphur and arsenate of lead is the most effective remedy. They suggest for this dust that you use nine parts of dusting sulphur and one part of arsenate of lead. These two should be mixed thoroughly and applied during the early morning while the dew is still on the plants. The reason for dusting in the morning while the dew is on is so that the dust will stick to the plant.

This same dust, which is commonly known as Massey dust is equally effective for mildew of all kinds, and at the same time this remedy will cure surface diseases. The dust will likewise cure rose beetles, curculio and any other insects that might happen to be on the plants.

There is one warning about spraying. Rose spraying, to be most effective, should be used as a preventative rather than a cure. In other words, an occasional dusting of sulphur and arsenate of lead will keep black spot off the roses much easier than it might be cured after it has once become established.

PRUNING.

The pruning of roses during mid-summer is very important for it is at this time that the climbing rose should be tied to supports, the dead wood cut out and the other necessary pruning be done. We mean by the necessary pruning in the case of running roses, that it is most important to keep the climbers in the shape desired.

The most practical, the easiest and the most beneficial pruning of any sort of roses, from the bush roses through the teas, hybrid teas, perpetual, pillar and climbing roses, is that of generous cutting of blossoms. We mean by generous cutting of blossoms, that the blooms be cut as fast as they appear, that the roses never be allowed to shed on the bush, and that they be cut with as long stems as possible. In cutting roses, it is best to cut stems back to point which will leave only two leaf buds to open.

Usually, people want to cut the flowers for indoor decoration or to give away. For this purpose, choose half-open buds. Cut them with long stems, leaving two leaves on the original branch, and place them in the dark for an hour before exposing them to warm rooms or strong light. Late afternoon and early morning are the best times to cut roses.

Other folks prefer to have a continuous display of roses in the garden. For this purpose it is better not to cut withered flowers with long stems, but merely to pinch off the seedpods.

There is only one thing that should be kept in mind when cutting roses. Use a knife that is razor-sharp or, better still, use a pair of scissors or pruning shears. Cut the roses with real long stems as this helps to give the plant the proper pruning that should be its due all through the summer. After a bit of experience at this pleasant task of cutting roses, the latest amateur will fast learn to shape the paint as this pruning is carried on.

Knowing Your Stars

BY EVANGELINE ADAMS
The World's Most Famous Astrologer.

WAS VENUS IN SCORPIO WHEN YOU WERE BORN?

ONE of my newspaper readers has written to me wanting to know whether her husband, who left her several years ago, is now married and what his present address is. She adds: "If it is in your power to tell me, then I'll believe that you are the world's most famous astrologer."

Well, my friend, I'd be something more than an astrologer if I could answer those questions. I'd be nothing short of a wizard.

I mention this particular letter, because it serves as an excellent example of the general misunderstanding which seems to exist regarding the problems which can, and the problems which cannot, be solved by astrology. I should like to make this statement very clear:

I am an astrologer, not a fortune-teller.

Astrology is based upon planetary vibrations and seeks to translate the practical effect of these vibrations upon the people and things on earth. Every child is stamped at birth with certain characteristics and tendencies, according to the play of vibrations in force at that time. The highly complicated and sensitive structure that encompasses body, soul and mind, is constantly subjected to an ever-changing, ever-shifting combination of planetary vibrations, some constructive and some destructive, some powerful and some weak. When a particularly powerful and destructive vibration is in force, the person receiving it is said to be "under unfavorable conditions."

Now obviously, all people are not the same, nor are they affected by the same combination of planetary vibrations in the same way. A particular vibration that may be powerfully good for one person, may be equally powerful, but wholly unfavorable, for another. It all depends upon the type of individual which is, in turn, dependent upon the vibrations that were in force at the time of birth.

Let me illustrate: To the person gifted with an extremely sensitive ear and a love of very fine music, the ordinary jazz band is something merely to be endured, and certainly not enjoyed. To another person, the reverse may be true. And so it is with planetary vibrations.

The astrologer can tell when powerful vibrations will occur and whether they will be of the constructive or destructive type. Furthermore, the astrologer can tell in what department of life the effects are likely to be felt—whether physical, mental, financial, marital, etc.

All this, the astrologer can tell. There is nothing whatever of the occult or mystic about it, any more than there is about the transmission of sound vibrations by radio waves.

I cannot however, tell you the address of missing persons, nor that on such-and-such a night a blond will come into your life, and beware of a tall man with a black beard. I'll leave that to the fortune-tellers and crystal-gazers.

As I said before, every child at birth is stamped with certain characteristics and tendencies according to the relative position of the planets at the time of birth. The position of Venus has much to do with the quality of our emotions, sentiments, loves and "feelings" and in these articles I have been describing the influence of Venus in the various signs.

Today, we'll study the effects of Venus in the powerful sign Scorpio. By referring to the accompanying table, you can ascertain whether or not Venus was in this sign at the time you or your friends were born.

If you have Venus in Scorpio you are endowed with an emotional nature that is very tense and powerful. You naturally give all your affection to some one person, at a particular time, and are likely to be cold and indifferent to those who do not touch closely your personal nature. Your ardor is likely to cool soon, unless it is adequately reciprocated.

Because of the intensity of your feelings, your jealousy is easily aroused, and often without justification. You have strong physical emotions, and are not especially interested in things of a purely esthetic nature. There is a tendency for you to be fascinated by those below your own station in life and they may interest you even more than people of your own social circle.

Unless you are extremely discreet in your attitude toward the opposite sex, you may find yourself in most difficult situations, particularly with those who may be your social inferior. You may have to guard against unconsciously selecting loud colors and conspicuous wearing apparel, or having a desire to do so.

Scorpio is ruled by Mars, consequently there will be much of the fiery qualities in your emotional nature. You are endowed with a tremendous magnetism and you should do your utmost to make constructive use of it. Try to develop your tact, and your magnetism will carry you far and make many friends for you. Guard against the tendency to be cynical when you are disappointed, and don't go to extremes. You should try to remember always that moderation is your proper keynote, moderation in all things.

WHEN VENUS WAS IN SCORPIO.

The following table will tell you whether or not Venus was in the sign Scorpio at the time of your birth. Run your eye down the left-hand column until you come to the year of your birth. On the same line with the year, will be found the dates covering the period during that particular year when Venus was in Scorpio. If the date of your birth is not included in the periods covered in this table, then Venus was not in Scorpio, but was in one of the other of the 12 signs.

Over the Garden Wall

BY LADYE GAYE

DIARY OF A DIRT DIGGER:

MONDAY NIGHT:

THIS morning plants came for the porch boxes. It goes without saying that the day was a gala one, with the acquisition of so many new "children" in their bright summer colors, to decorate the front terrace.

A porch or window box now-a-days is a thing of beauty and a joy as long as Jack Frost is kind. It is really a miniature garden carefully designed with both color and foliage harmony receiving due consideration.

Flower boxes, whether of wood, concrete or what not, have the same physical requirements. They should not be less than six inches deep inside, though eight is better, and they should be 8 to 12 inches wide. The length, of course, depends entirely upon the use to which the box is to be put. Drainage, as usual, is essential, and to take care of this three or four small holes per linear foot should be provided. Cover the bottom of the box with a half-inch layer of large pebbles to prevent the soil from souring and caking.

Since many hundreds of tiny rootlets will be constantly seeking nourishment in the soil you provide for your porch box, and also for the reason that one always expects quick results from such a planting—it is absolutely necessary to use the very best soil obtainable. A mixture of about 1-3 leafmold, 1-3 rich garden loam, and 1-3 sand, is usually quite satisfactory. The reason leafmold is suggested is because it renders the soil spongy and increases its capacity for retaining moisture. And that is quite an advantage, for soil in boxes tends to dry out very rapidly. When preparing the compost for planting it is well to sift or thoroughly mix the sand, loam and leafmold.

Now a little about the selection of plants. This will be governed by two factors—the color scheme of house and garden, and the available sunlight. For the flower box on the north side of the house, or any shady location, one must rely upon foliage plants—periwinkle (vinca), foliage geraniums, English ivy, ferns and coleus. However, coleus is grateful for a little sunshine. Foliage plants for boxes on the sunny side of the house might be German ivy, wandering Jew, dusty miller, coleus, asparagus sprengeri, and acalypha. Two excellent plants to be used as accents are aspidistra and dracaena.

TUESDAY.

Company came in last night, so the rest of the notes about planting porch boxes had to go over until today.

Almost all flowering plants suitable for porch or window boxes require sunshine. However, there are a few exceptions which will do well in either sun or shade. Of this group the Swan river daisy is a good example. This lovely little blue flower of the daisy type, with its small, closely set green leaves and bushy habit of growth, is well liked for box planting. Also the sultans and tuberous begonias will flower in shade.

For sunny boxes geraniums are still most popular, with the begonias running them a close second. These begonias may be had in varieties that range in color from white to deep red, and are most satisfactory in every way.

For flowers in the blue-lavender shades there are plumbage, lobelia and heliotrope. Annuals, such as nasturtium, petunia and sweet alyssum are also usable, but demand sunshine.

A very simple and quite inexpensive box for a sunny situation might be arranged like this:

A very attractive and rich-appearing porch box might contain the following sun-loving plants: Dracaena, fuchsia, pink lantana, nasturtium, vinca, coleus brilliancy, blue lobelia and lavender ageratum. For a small urn a good combination planting would be dracaena, fuchsia and Rosy Morn petunias.

Of course, all tall-growing plants should be planted at the back of the box and toward the center. Plants with dark foliage or flowers are best placed toward the center, and those with light-colored foliage or flowers should be in front and toward the ends. The dark-foliage vines should be in the center and the lighter foliage at the ends.

Culbertson on Contract

LESSON NO. 23.

BY ELY CULBERTSON
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

This is the twenty-third of a series of articles in response to requests from numerous readers, designed to explain the elementary principles of contract bridge. One of these will appear each week. In them Mr. Culbertson will write especially for the benefit of those who have never played contract and who may even be unfamiliar with the methods of playing it. The articles will cover the game from its basic elements to the higher phases of contract bridge. The series in its entirety will comprise a complete course in "How to Play Contract."

THE following deal illustrates some happy finessing possibilities:
South—Dealer:

The bidding goes as follows:

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	1NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

South, using the approach principle, starts low with his biddable suit. North, having 1 1-2 honor-tricks, only a four-card biddable suit, which it is dangerous to show at the range of two, and lacking adequate trump support, makes the negative response of one no-trump, which is nevertheless a sound bid. South, with 4 1-2 honor-tricks in three suits and taking a chance that North has some of his 1 1-2 honor-tricks in clubs, raises once for each honor-trick he has over the 2 1-2 shown by his opening bid and jumps to game.

When the dummy goes down, North sees that he can probably make his contract, for he has 1 spade trick, 2 heart tricks, 2 diamond tricks and 2 club tricks, with a probability of a long-suit-trick in clubs and at least one successful finesse.

The play proceeds, trick by trick, as follows (the name printed in bold face indicates the winner of the trick):

Trick 1—East spade 8, dummy spade 3, West spade 10, North spade 2. Declarer permits the first trick to be won by the opponents, in order to keep control of the spade suit. With only 1 spade trick, the declarer must lose 2 tricks in the suit, and thinks it safer to lose these at once so that, if a finesse fails later and the opponents get the lead, there will be less chance that established spades will be run against him.

Trick 2—West spade J, North spade 6, East spade K, dummy spade 4.

Trick 3—East spade Q, dummy spade A, West spade 5, North spade 7.

Trick 4.—Dummy club 2, West club 5, North club J, East club 7. Declarer takes his first finesse. The god of distribution is smiling.

Trick 5—North heart 9, East heart 10, dummy heart J, West heart 3. Another finesse succeeds.

Trick 6—Dummy club 4, West club 3, North club Q, East club 10. Declarer knows pretty well where the club king is and makes the most of it.

Trick 7—North heart 8, East heart 2, dummy heart Q, West heart 5. Again declarer is pretty sure he knows the whereabouts of the king.

Declarer may well pause to cogitate at this point. He knows that two rounds of hearts have been played, accounting for eight cards; he sees three remaining in his own hand and in dummy. If the remaining two, one of which is the king, are divided, he can drop the king with the ace, and the fourth heart in his own hand will be established. He therefore cashes the heart ace from the dummy.

Trick 8—Dummy heart A, West discards diamond 5, North heart 7, East heart 4. It's no go—but nothing has been lost.

Trick 9—Dummy club 6, West club 8, North club 9, East discards diamond 3. Remembering the clubs that have been played, declarer successfully finesses the nine! If West had played the king, North would have won with the ace and led the established nine.

Trick 10—North club A, East discards diamond 7, diamond discards diamond 4, West club K.

Trick 11—North diamond 2, East diamond 10, dummy diamond A, West diamond 6.

Trick 12—Dummy diamond K, West diamond J, North diamond 8, East discards spade 9.

Trick 13.—Dummy diamond 9, West diamond Q, North discards heart 6, East discards heart K.

Result—North and South, 10 tricks; game at no-trump, 105 points in the trick-score, and 50 points in the honor-score for 1 extra trick.

The importance of remembering the cards played is clearly demonstrated by the declarer's progressive reasoning in the play of this interesting hand. The student may argue that the extra tricks won by the declarer are due to luck. Certainly they are. The original holding of high cards was due to luck also, for the fall of the cards at every deal is a matter of pure chance. Tricks are favors bestowed by the great god of card distribution to whom all contract players make frequent obeisance, and on whom all contract players cast imprecations at ever-recurring intervals. The god may frown as often as he smiles.

But the imaginative contract player will plan to take every advantage of the favors of the god of distribution when he does smile, while, at the same time, he will be careful not to jeopardize his contract by risking the dire consequences of a severe frown.

TODAY'S POINTER.

A finesse at bridge is an effort to take advantage of the position of outstanding cards in order to gain a trick. As applied to contract, it has a direct analogy to the encircling movement in warfare.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Two-bids to the Score and Jump Overcalls.

Question 1: When there is a part-score, and an initial two-bid is made, is it a forcing bid?

Answer: An opening two-bid is a forcing bid only when below a game contract. A bid higher than the game contract or a two no-trump can be used for slam invitation in lieu of the regulation two-bid.

Question 2: If a following bidder makes an unnecessary two-bid, for example two hearts over one club, is that a forcing bid?

Answer: A jump overcall after the bidding has been opened by an opponent is not a forcing bid. To force partner to bid, in this situation, either a takeout double or an overcall in the bid suit of the opponent can be used. However, a jump overcall is a strength-showing bid and requests (not demands) partner to keep the bidding open with anything but a blank.

All Raises in One Breath.

Question: If I start with an opening one-bid and my partner takes out with another suit for which I hold support, do I give all my raises immediately, just as the supporting hand responds to an opening bid?

Answer: Yes, in all situations, full value of raises are given in one bid.

He Did Double Somersault Over Eighteen Elephants! Most Daring Circus Feat on Record and Never Duplicated

The Leapers, Those Acrobats Who Fling Their Whirling Bodies Through Breath-Taking Spaces, Are Coming Into Popularity and Many a Big Tent Backyard Is Bustling With Ambitious Youngsters Trying "Triple Turn"

BY GEORGE B. BEAL.

THE leapers are coming back. What is probably the greatest, most dangerous and most thrilling act ever seen inside a circus tent has been restored to its former place of prominence in the programme.

And once more the band will blare and the trim, gayly dressed line of acrobats, the pick of the acrobatic world, will march out into the arena near the close of the big show. The announcer will take his place and the age-old introduction of the leapers used since the first far-distant days of the circus will sound again under the tented dome.

Elephants will be lined up side by side in the arena, gay with brilliant trappings of the orient, first three or four. Down the narrow runway will come the brilliantly garbed acrobats, the leapers from the springboard their slender bodies will go flying through the air, turning and twisting like birds in some mad, fantastic flight of ecstasy.

High over the backs of elephants, they will soar, turning somersaults, twisters, brandies and gainers. Then more elephants will be added to the line. Then horses, as gayly caparisoned as the mighty pachyderms who share the honors of the leaping line with them. More elephants and more horses, then perhaps a camel or two, some ponies, some of the curious lead stock from the menagerie, a sacred buffalo, zebras.

Challenging Fate.

Faster and faster come the leapers, light as fairy creatures. Single and double somersaults follow in an endless sequence of madly whirling forms. The drums roll and the trumpets blare. Defying gravity, challenging fate, each leaper takes off, knowing that the arresting hand of death is forever before him, reaching out to claim him in that small space between the last obstacle and huge tick upon which he is supposed to land.

The kinkers, circus title of acrobats and performers in general, had been hard at it warming up in various winter quarters. At least one show, personally conducted by Nellie Jordan Dutton, of circus fame, will place the leapers as the featured act on the bill. Unquestionably others will follow.

With this great revival of what was for years the biggest of circus thrills, will come a renewed interest in the possibility of doing a triple-somersault, the greatest ambition of every leaper in the business.

Why It Is Dangerous.

An ambition the usual reward for the satisfaction of which has been death. For nothing in the entire list of acts possible to an acrobat is more heavily laden with possibilities of disaster than the triple somersault. Former leapers and old circus people in general still while away many an hour in the circus backyard between shows in endless and frequently heated discussions as to whether or not the triple somersault was ever actually performed in a public performance in the whole history of leaping. The majority opinion holds that it never was. Some go so far as to claim that no man ever made a triple somersault from his feet to his feet and lived to tell the tale. Others offer evidence to prove that the feat has been accomplished.

The evidence, for the most part, is against them. For even a double somersault was considered a mighty feat when leaping first entered the circus routine. Triple somersaults are a terrific strain no matter how they are performed. Alfredo Codona, probably the greatest living aerialist, husband of the late Lillian Leitzel, last of the circus queens, who died from a fall in New York two years ago, does one twice daily. He does his form a trapeze into the outstretched hands of his brother, hanging head downward from another trapeze.

The great risk involved in attempting a triple somersault is, as acrobats who have attempted it agree, that after the second turn is accomplished and the third turn is attempted, the performer "loses his catch," or, translated from show language, loses control of his body and is governed in his descent by gravity. His head, being heavier than his feet, he is most likely to land on his head and break his neck.

The latest victim of the triple somersault on record is Charles Seigrint, himself a former famous leaper who crashed to the floor of the Madison Square Garden a year ago. Seigrint, a trapeze performer, always ended his performance with a triple somersault into the net.

He finished on the night in question, posed for his final great feat, the triple. The drums of Merle Evans' famous band rolled into a crescendo . . . something went wrong. His heel struck his trapeze a glancing blow. He struck the net head first. He bounced off onto the floor, making a gallant effort to stand up and give the famous Roman salute of the circus, to show that he was unhurt. He crumpled to the floor. His backbone was broken. He will never be able to perform again.

But, back to the problem of the leapers. Leaping is the most spectacular act ever attempted in a circus. Nothing that equals it for beauty, or for genuine thrills, has ever taken its place. Which perhaps, accounts for its return to popular favor. A word about how it is done may not be amiss, for, unless you were going to circuses and eating peanuts and popcorn and drinking pink lemonade 20 years ago, it will be a mystery to you.

How It Is Done.

I will here introduce to your kind attention Nellie Dutton, who will give you a clear but accurately technical description of the paraphernalia of leaping. Quoting Mrs. Dutton:

"Leaping is done with the aid of a long, narrow running board elevated at one end to about 10 feet and at the other to about four feet. Then at a distance varying with the ability or habits of the leapers (usually eight feet to the centre) is placed the spring or leaping board. This is made of the best seasoned hickory and is formed by attaching hickory about the width and thickness of flooring with cleats, making a board about 24x40 inches. This board is placed with one end attached to a beam of the dimensions of an old-fashioned wagon tongue (hickory) which in turn is supported at each end by 'jacks' such as are used to support seats. This beam or pole is about five feet from the ground. With one end of the board on this, the other end, sloping toward the end of the long run, is supported by merely resting unattached to some lower object, usually an elephant tub.

"Thus resting on the smooth surface of an elephant tub (the large drum-shaped affairs on which elephants are taught to stand and perform various feats in the circus) the leaping board is free to move backward and forward as the weight of a man strikes it and causes it to move.

"The last and perhaps most important feature of the leaping paraphernalia is the landing pad or 'tick.' This is made by filling a huge canvas bag 8x10 feet with clean straw. The tick is then placed ahead of the leaping board on the opposite side of the object or objects over which the leaps are made."

And there you have it, in the lady's own words. And she knows what she is talking about.

Probably one of the most famous of the leapers was Frank G. Gardner. He became a circus performer in 1869 as a pad rider. In 1870, he graduated to bareback riding. He was the second man ever to attempt a double somersault over 13 square horses. That was in 1872, with the old Dan Rice circus.

Just precisely what a "square" horse is, I do not profess to know, but both "square" horses and "square" elephants are terms used in describing the feats performed by the old leapers. The language is from no less an authentic source than the route book of P. T. Barnum and The Great London circuses. Possibly it means that the animals in question were squared around, side by each. That is only one man's guess and not guaranteed to mean anything more than that. Possibly some old-time showman can help me out, if this is a bad guess.

At Gilmore's Garden, in New York, this same Gardner did a double and a single somersault over five elephants, one camel and three horses, the center elephant elevated on a high pedestal. This was in 1878. Later on, apparently feeling the stir of ambition urging him to even greater feats, he increased his leap to nine elephants, with three on tubs. In Brooklyn, in 1881, he put some more elephants to work for him, clearing 10 in all, five of them on tubs. And in later years he did a double somersault over the backs of 12 elephants, seven on tubs, the center tub being five feet high. In St. Louis he did a double over 18 elephants. There the record stops. Probably, as one wise wag once remarked, anent Mr. Gardner's penchant for increasing his daily dose of elephants, he ran out of elephants.

Victor Lee, feels a distinct stirring of doubt about that 18 elephant leap. In 1879, confides Mr. Lee, Sells Brothers had the most elephants of any show and the number was eight. The year of the great leap, 1881, or thereabouts, the elephant existing elephant supply, assorted by shows, was as follows: Barnum & Bailey, 4; Forepaugh Brothers, 5; W. C. Coup, 3; Robinson, 2; W. W. Cole, 2; Burr Robbins, 1, and the Sells show, the same eight. Not until 1896, according to Mr. Lee, did anybody start out to corner the elephant market. That season Forepaugh collected nine from another show, bringing his own total up to 19, but he had no leapers on the show that year, which leaves the question of long leaps about where it was in the beginning, a matter of circus legend.

Incidentally, mathematics enters into this question of such a long leap as that over 18 elephants would have to be. An elephant measures in girth from 16 to 20 feet. In diameter it is, not to be too accurate as to details, six to eight feet. This would make an elephant line 18 bulls long cover a distance of in the vicinity of 150 feet. It would take a remarkable performer to make that leap, even with the help of a springboard.

Gardner is credited among old-time circus fans as being the greatest of the leaping line. William H. Bachelor was another great leaper, having on record a double somersault over nine elephants. And there were many others, among them names widely known among circus fans of their day.

Double somersaults were first considered the most remarkable performance possible from the leaping board. John J. Jennings, a veteran writer on circus topics, tells of seeing, in the '50's, an English clown named Tomkinson do the first double he ever saw performed.

An Impossible Feat.

It took place in Edinburgh, Scotland, at a benefit performance for Tomkinson. Jennings describes it as follows:

"When the ring-master had made the preliminary speech, and Tomkinson retired up the steep incline which terminated in the springboard, every heart stood still. A quick, impetuous rush down the board, a bound high in the air, a slow revolution, and the gymnast descended nearly to the ground. It seemed impossible to do it, but in the last six feet the curled-up body turned once more, and Tomkinson alighted on the big, soft mattress on his feet, but staggering. He was prevented from falling by the ring-master."

An acrobat by the name of Costello probably was the one to introduce the feat into this country. He added difficulties by placing several horses, side by side, between the springboard and the landing tick. This obstacle leaping became at once the popular method of staging the act. Elephants were used, as were horses, and sometimes both elephants and horses and some other inmates of the led stock of the menagerie by way of novelty.

Double somersaults became the ordinary thing among the really great leapers, and no circus was so poor as to not afford half a dozen double somersaulting leapers in the years that followed.

As to the question of a triple somersault, that is something different. Nellie Dutton believes that it has been done. So do various other authorities on circus history. Proof, however, is lacking to any great extent. In an editorial of somewhat recent date, The Billboard, famous publication of the outdoor show world, told of the performance of a noted leaper, John E. Rixford, whose act, it said, consisted of doing a triple somersault over the backs of five elephants. The editorial brought down a storm of letters. No acrobat worthy of the name but who has cherished some time the ambition to do a triple somersault from his feet to his feet.

Almost to a man, they challenged the possibility of the Rixford feat. And old circus fans bore them out in their protest. For the history of attempted triples is deeply fringed with black. About the surest way to remove your name from the list of the living is, according to all existing reports, to attempt this hazardous feat. Like the much-quoted paths of glory, triple-somersaulting leads but to the grave.

From old "Pop" Billy Dutton, one of the greatest fancy leapers on the list, came many stories of noted leaping achievements. "Pop" lacked the necessary weight to ever become a really great distance leaper, but he made up for it in fancy work in the air. He was famous for his full twisting single somersaults, "brandies," a side somersault, and "gainers," a back somersault while moving in a forward direction. He also executed doubles over elephants elevated on four-foot elephant tubs, a height of about 12 to 14 feet above the ground.

Dutton is one of the few men who ever attempted the triple somersault and lived to tell of it, according to circus legend. It took place in Elkhorn, Ill., while he was a member of the Lake circus in 1860. It was done at a rehearsal, and John Lawton, a famous clown, for many years with the John Robinson circus, was an eyewitness to it. He made the leap from a high springboard and landed perfectly on his feet. He was followed by another performer, who missed and broke his neck.

Dutton claimed that his own landing was a pure accident, as he had no control whatever over his body after the second time. He refused to ever make a second attempt.

In making a double somersault off a springboard, about a 30-degree angle is necessary in order to gain the proper ballast or impetus to make the two turns. Leaping upward, the leaper hasn't enough leverage to make the turn. For a triple, he has to go at least a third higher into the air.

An American acrobat by the name of Turner is reported to have succeeded in making a triple once in this country and once in England. A third attempt resulted in a broken neck.

The first recorded attempt at a triple in this country was made by a performer in Van Amberg's circus at Mobile, Ala., in 1842. He broke his neck. William J. Hobbs tried it in London in 1846. The proposed feat was announced in advance, and the house was packed. Hobbs took off beautifully, lost his sense of direction after the second turn, and went into a nose dive, as the fliers of today have it, and broke his neck.

John Amor, a famous performer with the great Dan Rice show, was the next victim. He made his attempt while traveling with an English circus, at the Isle of Wight. He landed on his forehead and broke his neck.

Frank Starks, of Cincinnati, attempted a triple at the fair grounds in Indianapolis in 1870 for a wager of $100. He turned three times, but landed in a sitting position. Everyone was satisfied with the result, and awarded the money to him. Starks, however, proudly refused it, made a second attempt, struck his head and broke his neck.

Bob Stickney, when only 14 years old, it is claimed, did a triple somersault while practising in a gymnasium in New York. Once satisfied him. He said that he believed that he could do it again, but wouldn't try it for less than $10,000, as he was fully convinced that the chance of his final exit from the arena would be excellent. His performance was not, strictly speaking, a triple from feet to feet, as he landed in a blanket held by other circus men. And this, by the way, is believed to be the only reasonably safe way of attempting a triple.

Lucky Leaps.

At least two remarkable leaps were the result of accidents. One, according to Doc J. Maxwell Reynolds, of Washington, Penn., was done by a leaper named Sherman. He was supposed to turn a double somersault over three elephants standing two high; that is, according to the good doctor, one standing on two, and over a double line of horses, landing on the tick. He leaped high in the air, but instead of clearing the elephants, he snapped his tuck; that is, turned short and sharp, and landed on the head of the upstairs elephant. There he stayed. Needless to say, the trick was never repeated.

Another lucky leap was that done in the J. H. LaPearl show in 1898, according to Harry Worthington, writing in The Billboard. The leaper was Abe Johnson. Johnson took off as usual for what was supposed to be a double somersault. He overthrew his second turn and seeing that he was in for a bad spill, he held his tuck, and added a third turn. He never tried it again.

Fame and fortune awaits the man who can successfully do a triple somersault through the air from his feet to his feet and, with the return of the leapers to the sawdust arena, someone is sure to try it. If he survives he will, overnight, become the greatest living circus star. If not, his name will be added to the already long list of ambitious men who tried and failed with the simple annotation in the record book of "He broke his neck."

In St. Louis Frank G. Gardner did a double somersault over 18 elephants. There the record stops. Probably, as a wise wag remarked, he ran out of elephants.

When Justice Triumphed

How An Inheritance Brought Murder in Its Wake and Weird Ride With the Victim's Body

BY PETER LEVINS.

THIS is the story of what happened to a man after he got his hands on $28,000.

Bill Frazer felt, when he inherited the money, that life's problems and burdens would now be nicely attended to. Most of us would feel the same way under the same circumstances. The sum of $28,000 can go a long way toward easing up life's little worries. When Frazer got the money, he said, as any of us might, "Now, I'm going to live!"

But it didn't quite work out that way in this instance. Frazer's good fortune produced as grisly a drama as one could imagine, and ended—for him—in the most horrible death it is possible to die.

Before the money arrived, this young man was an assistant manager in a restaurant in New York. He was 29, and he lived in Rahway, N. J., with his wife, Hilda, and his two daughters, Evelyn, 11, and Irene, 8. Just an average middle-class family with the usual struggles and worries of modern life.

Then—the inheritance.

It came to Frazer from the estate of his father, and it went directly to his head. He bought a pretty home with $8,000 of it, but the rest—

For one thing, he quit his job. For another, he took frequent hunting and fishing trips. And finally, he became inordinately interested in women other than his wife.

This phase of his pleasure-seeking developed, indeed, into an obsession. He gloried in his amours. When he had a woman in his car he would deliberately drive past groups of men friends, so that they could see what a devil of a fellow he had become.

One day he called on his mother, Mrs. Edna Frazer, who had recently moved to a two-story house on Cherry street, in order to be nearer the railroad station. He found his mother out in the yard hanging up some clothes. There was an attractive, black-haired, brown-eyed woman there with Mrs. Frazer. The mother introduced them.

And so Bill Frazer met Mrs. Phoebe Stader, wife of Philip Stader, a welder, who lived in the other half of that dwelling.

The affair with Mrs. Stader, who was a hairdresser and several years older than Frazer, became notorious in Rahway. Hilda Frazer learned about it and so did Philip Stader. Mrs. Frazer protested, but nothing she said could stop Bill Frazer from "living his life" and spending his bank roll. The money went very fast, but probably no faster than Bill Frazer's reason.

About the middle of February, 1931, the Staders, two of Mrs. Stader's sisters, and a brother were evicted for non-payment of rent. Stader, out of work for months and unable to support his wife, moved to a boarding house, while Phoebe decided to visit her sister in Walden, New York.

AND SO THEY VISITED SEVERAL ROADHOUSES.

Mrs. Stader and a sister, June Quick, journeyed to Walden with Frazer in the latter's car on Monday, February 18. According to his own story, he took Phoebe out Monday night to a couple of roadhouses, where he drank quite a lot and she not so much. He stayed in a hotel in Walden that night.

The next day, Tuesday, he met the woman at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and they went to Newburgh to a Chinese restaurant for lunch.

Mrs. Phoebe Stader, whose slaying by Frazer was followed by the strangest ride in history when Frazer drove his car, with the dead woman in it, from Rahway, N. J., to Bowling Green, Va.

Frazer had a quart of liquor. Then they went to a movie and after the movie they went back to the chop suey place and had dinner together. Then another movie and—

"We made up our minds to go to Florida."

(We would like to go into more detail here, would like to relate their conversation, to show just how his mind was working, and how her mind was working. It is to be questioned whether they did decide to go to Florida, for Frazer was practically broke, and it is possible that Mrs. Stader may have made up her mind to remain at her sister's and eventually return to her husband.)

The next scene in this drama—that is, the next scene about which anything can be written accurately—took place at the home of Frazer's 20-years-old cousin, Ira Jensen, in Rahway. Jensen got up out of bed early Wednesday morning to find Frazer at the door. Frazer had a frantic look.

"I've killed Phoebe!" he gasped hysterically. "She's out in the car!"

THERE WAS THE BODY IN CAR'S FRONT SEAT.

Jensen couldn't believe it. He got some clothes on and went out to the car.

It was true. The body of Phoebe Stader was in the front seat. Blood was flowing out of a hole in her head.

"What am I going to do?" Frazer whispered.

Well, the obvious suggestion was that he give himself up to the police. But Frazer didn't want to do that.

He decided to go to his wife. Jensen went with him, sitting in the rear seat behind that huddled form. Frazer woke up his wife and told her the horrible news. He wanted to know what he should do—what in God's name he should do in this ghastly predicament?

Mrs. Frazer said the only thing to do was give himself up. (As it turned out, this was excellent advice.)

"No, I will kill myself!" he cried. "I can't face this! I will blow my brains out!"

Then he went out to the car, taking Jensen with him. They drove to a golf course near Iselin, N. J.

"Go away for a few minutes," Frazer told his cousin. "Come back when you hear a shot."

This placed Jensen in quite a predicament himself. Finally, he went away, and waited in the darkness for the shot that would mean that Bill had taken the "only way out." It seemed an eternity, and then Jensen heard—not a shot but the horn of Frazer's car. Jensen went back to the car.

"I can't do it!" cried the distracted Frazer. He held out the .22 caliber rifle to Jensen. "Ira, you shoot me!"

But at this Jensen rebelled.

Then Frazer asked his cousin to help him move the body to the rear seat. Ira wouldn't do that either, so Frazer shifted the corpse himself.

They returned to Rahway, arriving about 6 a. m. They drove to Mrs. Edna Frazer's home. Frazer covered the body with a blanket, locked the doors of the car, and then went into the house. The body remained there for the next nine hours while Frazer slept and ate and packed his things for a trip.

He pulled away at 3 p. m., leaving a note for Ira Jensen, in which he stated he was going south and asked his cousin to get some money and take it to a Raleigh, N. C., hotel.

Thus began the grewsome "ghost ride" through four states—Frazer and the corpse.

He drove to Philadelphia, stopped for something to eat, and also wrote a letter to Mrs. Fred McLaughlin, Phoebe's sister, in Walden. He stated that he and Phoebe had decided to go to Florida. He stopped again in Chester, Pa., to buy some gas, and then continued on south through Baltimore to Washington, where he caught some sleep in the car.

The next morning, Thursday, he drove on into Virginia, still with the corpse.

Meanwhile, Ira Jensen had gone to Bill's mother and borrowed $230 to take to Raleigh. Jensen was worried by the secret he possessed, but, as both he and Hilda Frazer said later, Frazer had cautioned them to keep their mouths shut or they would be liable to ten years' imprisonment as accessories after the fact. Jensen, therefore, set out for Raleigh, N. C., to deliver the money to his cousin.

Frazer, using the name Devlin, had taken a room in a boarding house on Halifax street in Raleigh. He passed much of his time in the sun parlor reading cheap magazines. After he got the money from Ira at the hotel, Frazer told his fellow lodgers that he planned to go farther south and open a restaurant. He seemed like a refined, pleasant sort of man, though somewhat reticent.

When he had read all the magazines he obtained a note to the public library in Raleigh and borrowed "The Embezzlers," by Valentine Katev. He also joined in a bridge game at the boarding house.

Incredible as it may seem, the man apparently thought he was quite safe. He wrote Jensen, suggesting that Ira join him, as the chances of getting work seemed pretty good and he added in this letter:

"Remind Hilda all she knows is that I left her and she thinks I am with some woman. Keep your ears open and get the news."

Let us return to the developments in the north.

Both Ira and Mrs. Frazer had, in the meanwhile, related to other members of the family what had happened. After a family conference the facts were given to Chief of Police George McIntyre, of Rahway, and the authorities, headed by Prosecutor Abe J. David, of Union county, went into action. Ira Jensen was held as a material witness. He first denied knowing anything but when McIntyre related what he knew about the case the youth confessed everything.

So the word flashed to Raleigh to watch for William Frazer, alias H. G. Devlin.

But what of the body?

On the Sunday after the tragedy, William Twiggs, a colored man, living near Bowling Green, Va., left his home to look for a dog he had lost. While he was searching, he noticed buzzards circling over some scrub oak on a private road some distance off the main highway. He decided he had found out what had happened to his dog. He pushed his way through the underbrush.

There lay the nude body of Phoebe Stader.

In this connection, another resident, Charles Collinson, who lived about a mile from where the body was found, reported an incident that had aroused his curiosity the previous Thursday morning. He had been attending his mother, who was ill, when he saw, at about 3:30 a. m., a car stop on the road and watched a man get out and examine a small bridge or culvert. The man was there for a minute or so—and then he climbed back into the machine and drove off.

Frazer was taken into custody on the morning of February 25 as he called at the postoffice in Raleigh. He would say nothing incriminating at first but the next day he made a confession to Prosecutor David, in which he insisted that the death of Mrs. Stader had been an accident.

We quote from his statement made in Raleigh:

"We made up our minds to go to Florida. We started, but somewhere near Ramsey—just south of Ramsey, I think it was—I got nervous or something. I had a gun under neath the back seat of the car. I stopped the car and went in the back to get the gun. When I was getting the gun it went off accidentally.

"I did not know what to do. I thought I would go to Rahway. I went there and stopped and told my cousin, and went over and told my wife. She asked me what I was going to do. I said, 'I do not know.' There were only two things to do—to tell the police, and the other was to commit suicide. Then I went out to the country to commit suicide but I did not have the nerve to do it."

Regarding the disposition of the body, he said:

"I don't know how far I drove—it was on this road I took out the body. I have no idea of the time. I stopped on the main road. I could not carry her around forever, so I stopped to remove the body. I dragged the body about a block. It was a field. I then removed the clothing. I used scissors. I suppose (all this in answer to question) they were the scissors found in the car. I did not cut the label off the clothing. I took the clothing off because it could be easier traced with them on."

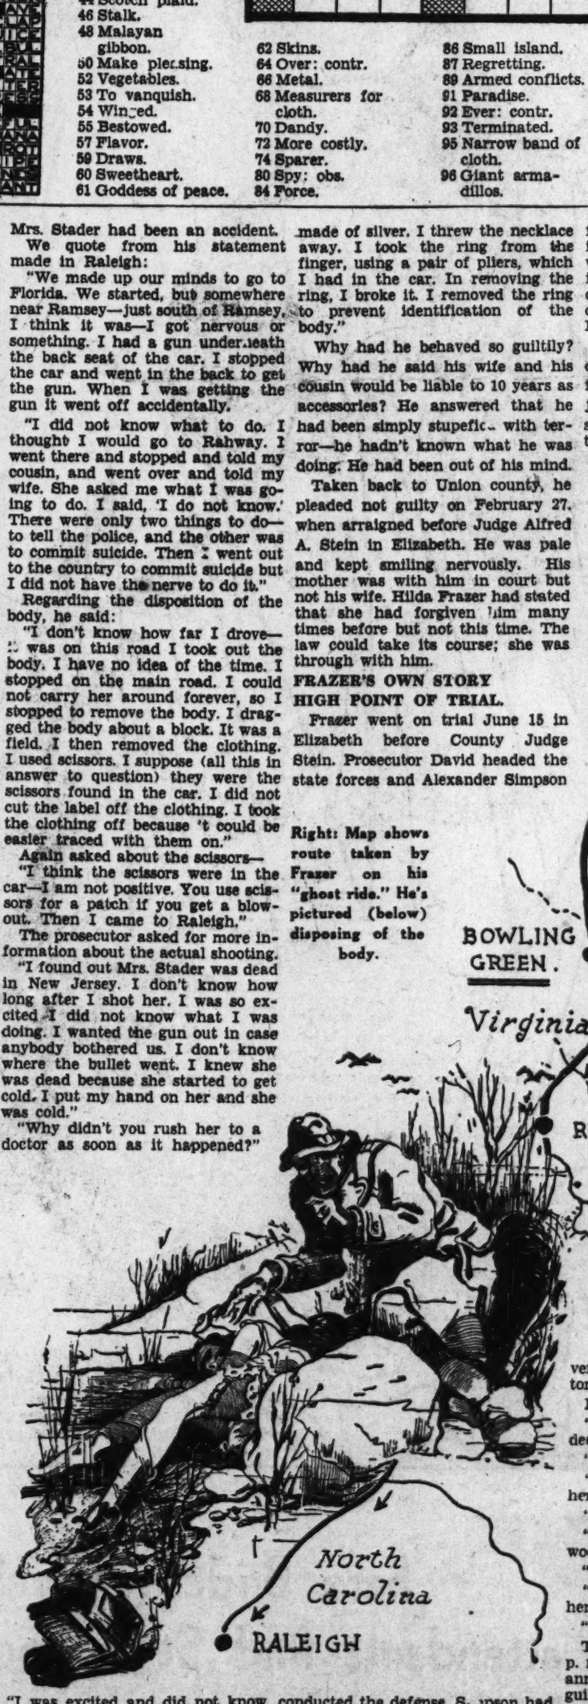

Again asked about the scissors—

"I think the scissors were in the car—I am not positive. You use scissors for a patch if you get a blowout. Then I came to Raleigh."

The prosecutor asked for more information about the actual shooting.

"I found out Mrs. Stader was dead in New Jersey. I don't know how long after I shot her. I was so excited I did not know what I was doing. I wanted the gun out in case anybody bothered us. I don't know where the bullet went. I knew she was dead because she started to get cold. I put my hand on her and she was cold."

"Why didn't you rush her to a doctor as soon as it happened?"

"I was excited and did not know what to do. It never occurred to me to take her to a doctor."

He was asked about the clothes.

"I threw the clothes on the road some miles from where I placed the body. Mrs. Stader was wearing an aquamarine ring and a necklace made of silver. I threw the necklace away. I took the ring from the finger, using a pair of pliers, which I had in the car. In removing the ring, I broke it. I removed the ring to prevent identification of the body."

Why had he behaved so guiltily? Why had he said his wife and his cousin would be liable to 10 years as accessories? He answered that he had been simply stupefied with terror—he hadn't known what he was doing. He had been out of his mind.

Taken back to Union county, he pleaded not guilty on February 27, when arraigned before Judge Alfred A. Stein in Elizabeth. He was pale and kept smiling nervously. His mother was with him in court but not his wife. Hilda Frazer had stated that she had forgiven him many times before but not this time. The law could take its course; she was through with him.

FRAZER'S OWN STORY HIGH POINT OF TRIAL.

Frazer went on trial June 15 in Elizabeth before County Judge Stein. Prosecutor David headed the state forces and Alexander Simpson conducted the defense. Simpson had been hired by fraternal organizations to which the accused man belonged.

The high point of the trial came when Frazer told his own story on the witness stand. It was much the same as we have already related it: That Mrs. Stader was sitting in the front seat; that he got out and went into the rear to get the rifle, which was in the corner between the cushion of the rear seat and the side of the car, and that the rifle went off as he was opening the rear door. He said:

"Maybe I tripped. Anyhow, the door got half open, and when I was falling out the rifle went off. She just said 'Oh!' I spoke to her, but she didn't answer me. Then I drove to Rahway."

"You say you loved this woman very much?" inquired the prosecutor in cross-examination.

Frazer nodded.

"Then why didn't you give her a decent burial?"

"What opportunity did I have?"

"Why did you cut the clothing off her body?"

"To help myself."

"Why did you drag her into the woods and leave her there?"

"To assist myself."

"Why did you take the ring off her finger?"

"So she couldn't be identified."

The case went to the jury at 2:53 p. m., June 16, and at 8:45 the jury announced that William Frazer was guilty of murder in the first degree.

He died in the electric chair at Trenton on April 1, 1932—April Fool's Day.

One wonders, in considering this case in retrospect, whether this man would have died in the chair if he had taken his wife's advice and gone to the police immediately after the tragedy. What wrecked his chances, apparently, was his behavior after the crime.

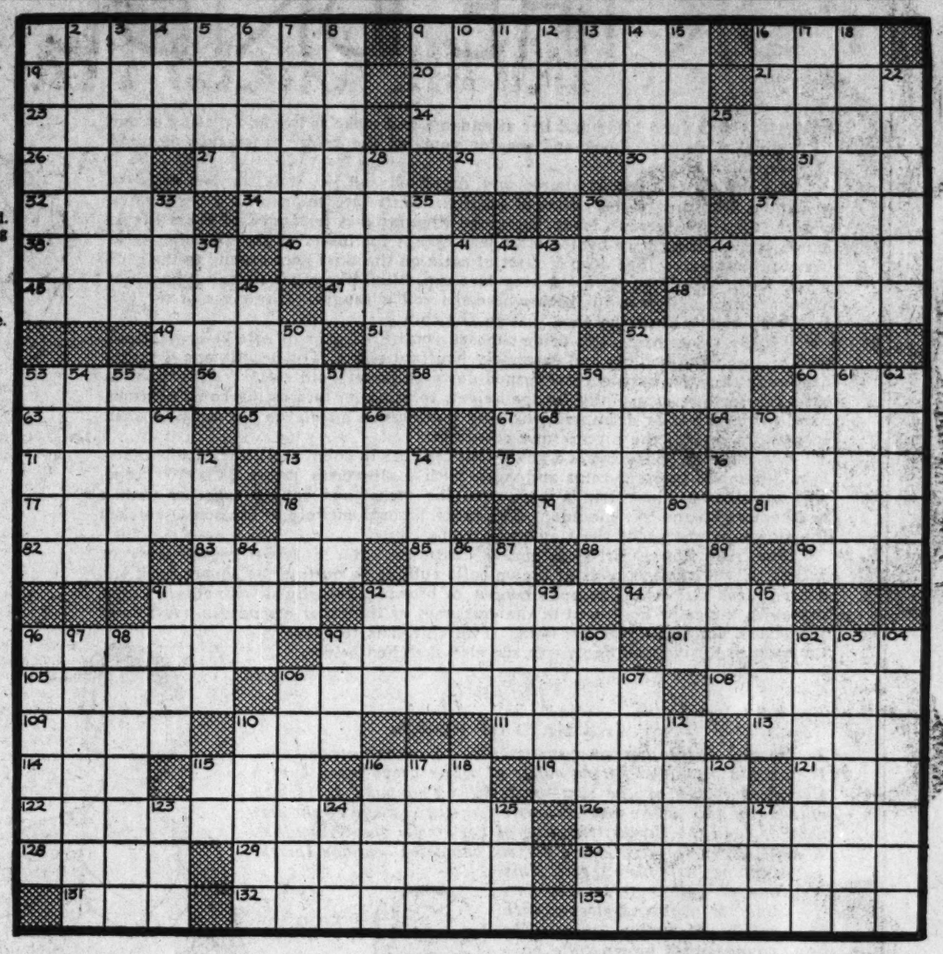

In this respect, the case reminds one of the case of Dr. James Snook, the Ohio veterinary professor, who killed his paramour, Theora Hix, and then tried to cover up his tracks. It is to be questioned whether Dr. Snook would have paid the extreme penalty if he had hastened to the police at once.

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

"ME AN' PA had to go to the county seat last Thursday an' spent the night at a hotel. We had a room with a bath, but we didn't take none. Pa said we ought to, just to get our money's worth, because we had to pay for it anyway; but I wasn't goin' to be a hypocrite about it, tired as I was, just to make them city folks think we was used to Thursday night baths, an' Pa finally compromised by wipin' his hands on the big towels.

"Folks do a lot o' fakin' about this daily bath buisness. Ever'body says it's necessary an' sanitary an' hygienic, but they do more talkin' than washin'.

"Of course, I believe in bein' clean. Cousin John was in China once an' he said water was so scarce in the big cities that poor folks had to use it second hand. A rich man got a bath in fresh water an' then it was sold to a poor man an' he sold it to somebody else, an' the water wasn't never a total loss till it jelled.

That's goin' too far, but it's just as sensible as this idea that lack o' washin' is fatal.

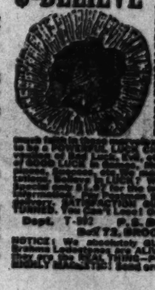

"Saturday night used to be bath night for ever'body, an' folks was hardier then than they are now. They was cleaner, too, take 'em as a whole. They done more sweatin' an' one good sweat is like a gulley-washin' rain. It moves more trash than 40 gentle little showers."

LACE AND SATIN FOR THE BRIDE

The bride's costume is simple and dignified and yet it is the last word in smartness, according to the edicts of fashion. Since lace and satin are the favored materials for this season's bride, the gown illustrated is fashioned of these luxurious fabrics. The entire bodice is of lace except for insets of the gleaming satin over the shoulders. The deep V-inset of satin on the skirt goes around to the back where it forms a huge train. A tiny lace cap, tilted like a hat, reveals a bunch of orange blossoms high in the back where the veil is caught. One piece of the veil falls flatteringly over the face just to the chin.

For her bridesmaids, this bride chooses youthful frocks of soft yellow taffeta, with tight-fitting bodices and extremely bouffant skirts. The decolletage is rather deep and accented by a narrow turned-down collar of gold cloth. And the cunning capelets are of a pinky orange velvet, forming an interesting color contrast. Muffs of brown tulle, decorated with tiny gold leaves, match the bridesmaids' small hats and complete the picturesque costumes.

The maid of honor wears a gown that matches in color, the bridesmaids' capes. It is developed in crepe roma and worn with a sleeveless jacket of white crepe. The one-sided bertha collar is worn over the jacket and caught together with a boutonniere on the left shoulder. The muff, formed entirely of blossoms, matches the flower trimming of the tiny crepe roma cap.

The little flower girl's costume is charming. Her Kate Greenaway frock of yellow taffeta employs rows of brown tulle ruffling to outline the square neck and short puffed sleeves. The poke bonnet of brown tulle is lined with orange crepe, repeating the color note used in the costumes of the other attendants. A bow of the same color ties under her chin. Two chic hats to grace the most exclusive wedding party are also sketched below.

THE MAID OF HONOR

Looks stunning in her very smart frock of orange crepe roma. It boasts a one-sided bertha collar of white crepe worn over a sleeveless jacket of the same material. The muff is formed entirely of tiny white flowers, matching the corsage at the left shoulder and the flower trimming of her small crepe roma hat. A Kate Greenaway frock is a perfect choice of costume for the cunning little flower girl. This one of yellow taffeta is outlined at neck and sleeves with ruffles of brown tulle. The young lady's brown tulle poke bonnet is lined with orange crepe and ties in a bow of ribbon under her chin.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

Resplendent in a gown of lace and satin. The bodice is cut simply with a V-decolletage and gleaming satin insets over the shoulders. The satin is used again in a V-inset on the skirt that goes right around to the back where it forms a stately train. Something new is introduced in the tiny lace cap tilted in the manner of a small hat and decorated in the back with a bunch of orange blossoms, at which point the veil is caught. Note that the veil falls softly over the face to the chin.

THE BRIDESMAIDS

Their bouffant frocks are fashioned of yellow taffeta with very snug bodices belted at the natural waistline with a narrow sash that finishes in a large bow at the back. The deep decolletage is accented by a turned-down collar of gold cloth. Tiny capes of orange velvet add a feminine touch. The caps and muffs are of brown tulle effectively set off with gold leaves.

TWO CHARMING HATS

June Bride

June, the month of roses and romance, will soon be with us. And we present this section as tribute to those who will march to the altar in step with those familiar strains of Lohengrin and Mendelssohn.

• Atlanta stores whose advertisements appear in this edition of The Constitution's Pictorial Gravure section are especially prepared for the bridal month of June and are offering an unusually wide and diversified assortment of gifts, needs, apparel and accessories for the many nuptials which will head the social calendar for this coming month.

Herein are presented many suggestions to add joy and gladness to the gala occasions. Read each advertisement and take advantage of the offerings.

AND the trousseau from J. P. Allen's!

Atlanta brides, for the past twenty odd years, have bought their trousseau from Allen's . . . until now it is a tradition as strong, as well known as the old rhyme which all brides solemnly observe.

Bridal veil, white, filmy, and made to order; wedding hats; going-away hat, (Millinery, Third Floor) . . . long white gloves; sheer, fine hose, going-away handbag and accessories, (Street Floor) . . . shoes, white for the wedding, any style and color for going-away costume, (Street Floor) . . . white sets; gowns, teddies, brassieres; white satin scanties; exquisite negligees (Third Floor) . . . the bridal dress, bridesmaids' dresses and the going-away costume, be it suit, ensemble, or dress, (Second Floor).

TRADITION SAYS SHE WILL BE FIRST BRIDE.—Miss Elizabeth Kaiser (left), president of the senior class at Wellesley College, presents a bridal bouquet to Miss Mildred Marcy, of Newton, Mass., winner of the annual hoop race. The winner of this race, according to tradition, will be the first of the senior girls to become a bride.

"ALUMNI DAY" AT THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA was celebrated Saturady by presentation of four portraits to the university by the Permanent Committee on Memorials. Three of the portraits are of early executives of the institution, while the fourth is of Dr. Crawford W. Long, first physician to put ether to practical anaesthetic use. Upper left is the portrait of Abraham Baldwin, founder of the university, painted by Charles Frederick Naegle, and given the university by Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun, Atlanta, chairman of the permanent memorial committee. Upper right is a picture of the portrait of Josiah Meigs, first president of the university. It was painted by Lewis Gregg, Atlanta, and donated by Harold Hirsch. Lower right is photo of Dr. Henry Holcombe Tucker portrait, painted by the French artist, L. M. D. Guillaume, and given by Dr. Tucker's daughter, Mrs. Hunter P. Cooper, of Atlanta. Dr. Tucker was chancellor of Georgia following the Civil War. Lower left is the portrait of Dr. Crawford W. Long, painted by Lewis Gregg, of Atlanta, and given to the university by Dr. Frank K. Boland, of Atlanta. Yesterday's presentation of the Long portrait was "officially" presented Saturday, having already been hung at the university on the occasion of "Ether Day."

The Bride and Her Budget

The happiest moments of the June bride's first year are those spent in planning her household duties. . . . The easiest way to a man's heart is through his appetite . . . the wise bride will remember this fact . . .

The bride's part of the progress is in being a helpmate . . . In making dollars do their full share . . . arranging her budget so that she knows she is doing her level best . . .

The bride of 1932 will find, as her mother has, that she can "budget best" where food is freshest, prices are lowest and where "Satisfaction Is a Certainty." . . .

THE LINCOLN

THE LINCOLN V-12 . . . LE BARON CONVERTIBLE ROADSTER . . . $4600 AT DETROIT

Those who truly value the fine things of life find the Lincoln as gratifying in its service as in the beauty of its appearance. Long sweeping lines indicate the smoothness of its motion. Precision construction promises miles virtually without number of luxurious motoring comfort. So hushed is the flow of power, so gliding-like its fleet performance, that one senses immediately the extreme care with which this highly refined mechanism has been built. Every Lincoln is constructed to the highest principles of manufacture, with advanced engineering, of the finest materials, and to precision limits exact to minute fractions of a hair's breadth. This is the background of the Lincoln V-12, a motor car designed to supplement any scheme of gracious living.

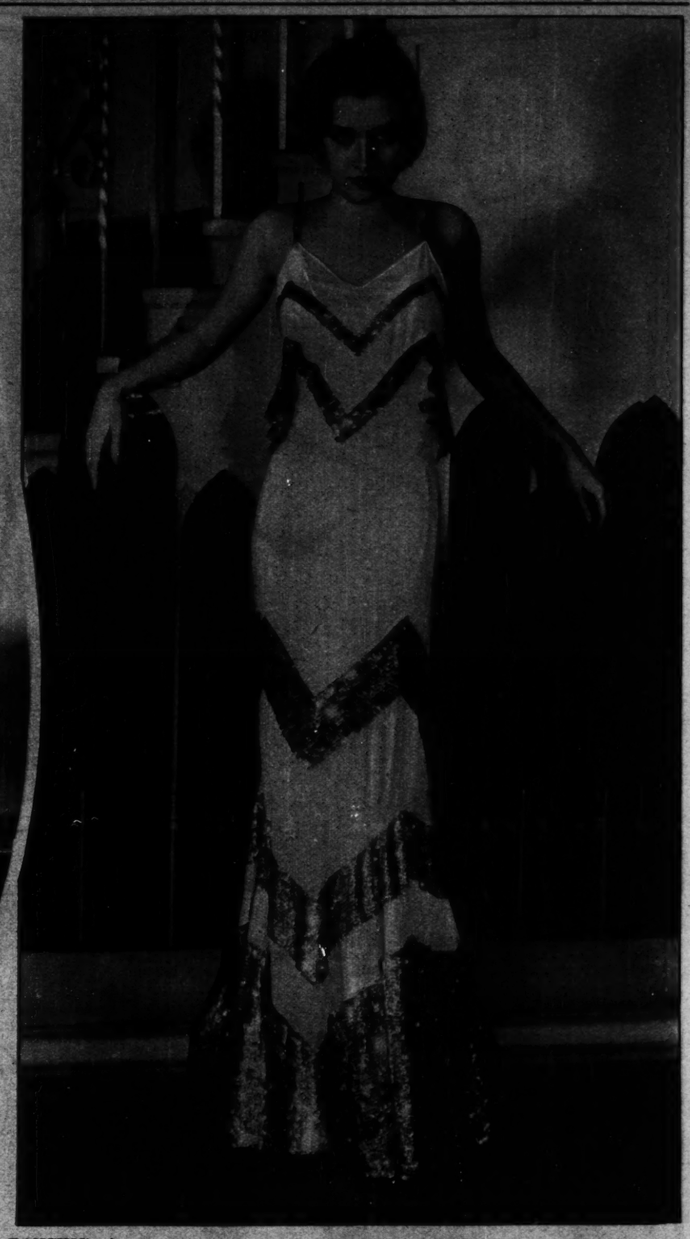

PRICES OF THE LINCOLN V-12, FULLY EQUIPPED, RANGE FROM $4300 AT DETROIT

THE VERY ESSENCE OF SUMMER seems to have been caught and presented in this minutely durene embroidered, sheer cotton organdy frock for summer evenings. It is dead white against a scarlet embroidered and cut-out background. The pointed capelet sleeves, smooth hipline, and flaring lower skirt are all fashion points worthy of note.

Of Interest To JUNE BRIDES

TROUSERS FOR DANCING—As feminine and dainty as the evening frocks, they disguise their trousers of the style revealed by Ruth Selwyn, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player. The dancing pajamas are of white chiffon showing satin insets on hip yoke, with the trousers hidden by knife pleatings of the chiffon.

SCINTILLATING EVALYN KNAPP, the screen star, selected this stunning evening gown of white crepe georgette and silver sequins for her summer wardrobe.

The 1932 June Bride's First Choice is Rubin's

A haven of lovely frocks and accessories for the bride—things she will need to complete her wardrobe—all of them exquisitely dainty. The quality, style and economy also bear the usual Rubin guarantee of satisfaction.

WITH ALL THAT MEDICINE MY COLD IS NO BETTER- HOUSE CLEANING AND I'M STILL UNDER THE WEATHER-

SIDNEY SMITH

WELL- HERE'S ONE MEMBER OF THE FAMILY THAT'S ALWAYS FIT- I WAS UNDER THE WEATHER ONCE BUT I'M OVER IT NOW-

DO I FEEL GOOD- CALL ME DARLING- CALL ME SWEETHEART- CALL ME DEAR-

HOW DO YOU LIKE MY VOICE? DID YOU HEAR ME SINGING? I WAS JUST TESTING IT- IT MIGHT COME IN HANDY IF WE EVER GO BROKE-

YOUR VOICE MIGHT COME IN HANDY IN CASE OF A SHIPWRECK- OR IF WE HAD A FIRE IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD-

DO YOU KNOW, MIN- WHAT I HAVE A GOOD NOTION TO DO? BUY A NEW AUTOMOBILE-

YOU BETTER SAVE YOUR MONEY FOR A RAINY DAY-

AS FAR AS I'M CONCERNED- IT'S RAINING NOW- EVERY DAY IS A RAINY DAY WITH ME- THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTY FIVE DAYS IN THE YEAR- RAIN - RAIN - RAIN-

WELL- THERE'S AN OLD SAYING- THAT MONEY TALKS- WELL- IF IT EVER DOES, I MUST BE JUST OUT OF HEARING DISTANCE-

AND MAYBE I'M DEAF- BUT ANY MONEY THAT PASSES THROUGH MY HANDS NEVER GETS A CHANCE TO SIT DOWN AND DISCUSS POLITICS- IT CAN'T TALK- IT GOES SO FAST— IT'S OUT OF BREATH-

MIN- I WONDER WHY OLD OPPORTUNITY NEVER KNOCKS AT OUR DOOR- I GUESS THE ONLY WAY TO GET AN OPPORTUNITY IS TO SET A TRAP FOR IT- WISHING FOR IT DOESN'T DO ANY GOOD-

THE TROUBLE WITH YOU IS- YOU'RE ASLEEP WHEN IT POUNDS ON THE DOOR-

I THINK I'LL PAINT A BIG SIGN ON THE MAT OUTSIDE OUR FRONT DOOR- "WELCOME OPPORTUNITY"- MAYBE THAT WILL BRING IT- AND IF IT DOES COME AROUND- THAT WILL BE MY OPPORTUNITY- WATCH ME GRAB IT- BUT I DON'T THINK IT KNOCKS ANY MORE-

WELL IT STILL KNOCKS- IF THAT WILL RELIEVE YOUR MIND-

WHAT DO YOU EXPECT IT TO DO- SIT OUTSIDE IN A CAR AND HONK?

OLD DOC YAK

AND SO IT GOES- IT'S THE WAY OF THE WORLD- IT'S THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST- THE STRONG LIVE OFF OF THE WEAK- THE BIG FISH EAT UP THE LITTLE FISH-

DO THE BIG FISH EAT THE LITTLE ONES?

CERTAINLY- THAT'S HOW THEY LIVE-

DO THEY EAT THE LITTLE SARDINES?

SURE- THEY SWALLOW THEM RIGHT DOWN- TAIL AND ALL-

WELL- WHERE DO THEY GET THE CAN OPENER TO OPEN THE CANS?

Little Orphan Annie

GEE, I WISH "DADDY" COULD HAVE COME TOO-

BUT TRIXIE DOESN'T LIKE THE BIG NEW COUNTRY PLACE "DADDY" BOUGHT- SHE WOULDN'T COME OUT, SO "DADDY" FELT HE OUGHT TO STAY IN TOWN, TOO- BUT HE TOLD ME TO GO AHEAD OUT AND HAVE A GOOD TIME- WELL SURE DO THAT- EH SANDY? ARF!

WELCOME, MISS ANNIE- HELLO, EVERYBODY- HOW ARE YOU ALL? WELCOME, MISS ANNIE- HIT'S THE LITTLE MISTRESS-

THERE FIFTY PEOPLE OUT HERE, JUST TAKING CARE OF THIS BIG PLACE- IT'S A SHAME TO LET A LAYOUT LIKE THIS GO TO WASTE- THE SERVANTS SEEMED GLAD TO SEE US- I'LL BET IT'S LONESOME AROUND HERE WITH NO-BODY FOR 'EM TO WAIT ON-

C'MON, SANDY- LET'S HUSTLE DOWN TO THE STABLES AND PICK OUT A HORSE TO RIDE- THERE ARE MILES AND MILES OF BRIDLE PATHS ON THIS PLACE-

YOU'RE SURE YOU'RE NOT AFRAID, MISS ANNIE? SHUCKS- I CAN STICK ON, ALL RIGHT- I LEARNED TO RIDE WHEN I WAS AT THE SILO FARM-

CAN YOU MAGINE ANYBODY NOT LIKIN' THE COUNTRY IN THE SPRING? ESPECIALLY WHEN YOU'RE NOT A FARMER AND YOU HAVE NOTHING TO DO, BUT ENJOY YOURSELF- EVERYTHING IS FRESH AND GREEN- FLOWERS ARE OUT- BIRDS ARE SINGING-

LOOKIE, SANDY- RABBITS- JUST AS TAME- THEY SEEM TO KNOW WE'RE THEIR FRIENDS AND THEY AREN'T SCARED A BIT-

NOW FOR A LITTLE PLUNGE BEFORE DINNER- WHAT A POOL! BELIEVE ME, THIS PLACE HAS EVERYTHING- YOU'D THINK TRIXIE WOULD BE CRAZY ABOUT IT-

I GUESS THERE'S NO FIGURING SOME PEOPLE- HERE "DADDY" WENT AND GOT THIS SWELL PLACE, JUST TO PLEASE HER, AND ALL SHE DID WAS PAN IT- SHE HAS TO HAVE NOISE AND LIGHTS AND CROWDS O' PEOPLE TO BE HAPPY- I FEEL SORRY FOR "DADDY"- WELL, I'LL HAVE TO BE GETTIN' DRESSED FOR DINNER-

SAY, CHARLEY- THIS IS ABOUT AS GOOD A DINNER AS I EVER ATE- I'D GO ON EATIN' FOR EVER, BUT I CAN ONLY HOLD SO MUCH- A FEW MORE OF THE MUSHROOMS, MISS ANNIE?

WELL, HERE I AM, LIKE A QUEEN IN THIS BIG PLACE- EVERY LUXURY I CAN THINK OF- PRETTY SOFT FOR AN ORPHAN KID- BUT I GUESS IT'S 'CAUSE I HAVEN'T HAD IT SO EASY ALL MY LIFE THAT I 'PRECIATE IT ALL SO MUCH- IF "DADDY" COULD ONLY BE OUT HERE TOO, IT'D BE PERFECT-

Private Life of a Sunbeam

MY PRIVATE LIFE? WHY, MY LIFE IS ANYTHING BUT PRIVATE- I AM THE POINTING FINGER WHICH SEARCHES OUT THE DARK, HIDDEN RECESSES OF THE CITY-

I SLIP SUDDENLY THROUGH THE MASSED, GREEN-CLAD TROOPS OF THE FOREST TO BRING LIFE AND STRENGTH TO THE FLOWERS WHICH, BUT FOR MY AID, MUST PERISH IN THE DARK- TO THEM I AM A DASHING RESCUER-

I DISCOVER THE NARROW WINDOWS IN THE THICK WALLS OF THE PRISON- BARS ARE POWERLESS TO KEEP ME OUT- FOR A LITTLE TIME I BRING CHEER TO HOPELESS SOULS- I STIR THEIR MEMORIES OF LOST DAYS OF FREEDOM- I WARM THEIR CHILL CELLS A LITTLE-

THEN ALONG THE RIVER- WHAT'S THIS? "BARE-FOOT BOY, WITH CHEEK OF TAN"- HE CAN THANK ME FOR THAT TAN, AND FOR A FEW FRECKLES, TOO-

OLD AGE, DREAMING IN THE SUN- ON HIS WHITE HEAD I POUR THE BENEDICTION OF MY WARMTH- I BRING HIM DROWSINESS AND PLEASANT MEMORIES OF BY-GONE, BRIGHTER DAYS-

AH- AND HERE WE FIND THE NEW-BORN BABE IN HIS CRIB- HEALTH AND STRENGTH AND GRACE ARE IN MY KISS- I CARESS HIM AND PASS ON-

SO GOES MY LIFE- BUT WHY SINGLE ME OUT? I AM BUT ONE AMONG MILLIONS, ALL OF US JUST ALIKE- HERE COMES A CLOUD AND I'LL BE LEAVING- BUT I'LL SEE YOU AGAIN SOON- SO LONG-

REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN ANNIE WAS IN THE HOME AND MISS ASTHMA WAS THE SUPERINTENDENT?

AVERY, I DIDN'T SHOW YOU THE DRESSED FLEAS I PICKED UP WHEN I WAS DOWN IN MEXICO DID I?

DRESSED FLEAS? I PICKED UP SOME UNDRESSED ONES ONCE.

ALL RIGHT I'LL BITE. WHAT ARE DRESSED FLEAS?

THIS IS ON THE SQUARE, AVERY. SOME OF THE MEXICANS ARE VERY CLEVER AT MAKING TINY COSTUME FIGURES AND MOUNTING THEM IN A BOX NO BIGGER THAN THE END OF A LEAD PENCIL. I'LL SHOW THEM TO YOU.

GOLLY. THEY ARE NO BIGGER THAN MICROBES ARE THEY! HOW DID YOU BRING THEM BACK?

I PUT THE TINY WHITE BOX INTO THIS ASPIRIN BOX SO IT WOULDN'T GET LOST.

I WOULDN'T SWEAR THEY ARE DRESSED FLEAS BUT THEY ARE JUST THAT SIZE.

YOU'LL LOSE THEM AS SURE AS I LET YOU TAKE THEM, SKEEZIX.

NO, UNCLE WALT, I JUST WANT TO SHOW THEM TO THE KIDS.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

COPYRIGHT, 1932,

THE LIONS OF FRANCE

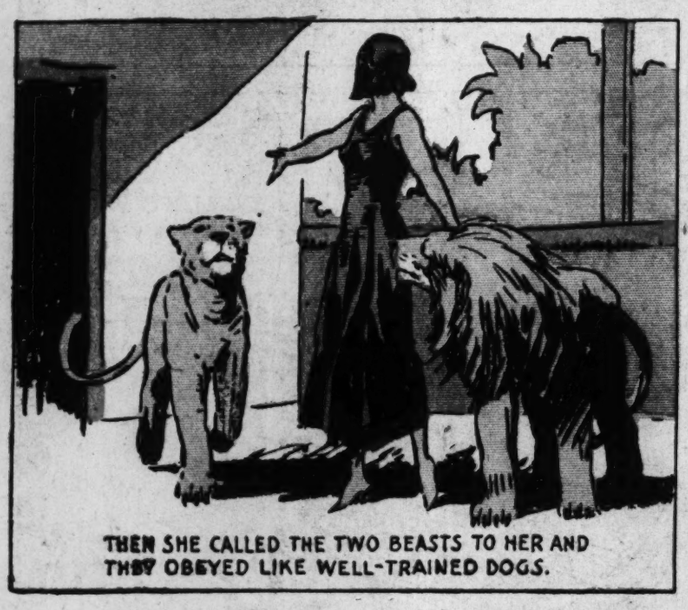

SWIFTLY DID TARZAN STRIKE.

THEN HE HURLED THE BLACK WARRIOR TO HIS COMRADES IN THE CANOE BELOW.

THE AL-ALBA TRIBESMEN FLED IN TERROR OF THE APE-MAN AND OF THE FEROCIOUS LIONS THAT THE WOMAN IN THE BLACK MASK HAD UNLEASHED UPON THEM.

THEN SHE CALLED THE TWO BEASTS TO HER AND THEY OBEYED LIKE WELL-TRAINED DOGS.

"AGAIN YOU HAVE SAVED MY LIFE," THE WOMAN SAID.

AND TARZAN RECALLED THE SCENE IN THE FRENCH PROVINCIAL CIRCUS, WHEN THE GREAT RED LION HAD ATTACKED HIS TAMER, LA BELLE LENIDA.

..... AND WHEN TARZAN, HIMSELF, HAD SPRUNG FROM THE AUDIENCE TO RESCUE HER AND TO KILL NUMA IN A DESPERATE FIGHT.

"MY FACE WAS DESTROYED," LENIDA SAID, "SO I SWORE NO LIVING PERSON WOULD EVER LOOK UPON IT AGAIN, IT WAS A JUDGMENT UPON ME FOR IMPRISONING WILD BEASTS AND I MADE A VOW TO RETURN MY LIONS TO THE JUNGLES."

SO, WHEN THE BOAT REACHED THE LAST OUTPOST ON THE GUMWI RIVER, THE CAGED BEASTS WERE CARRIED ASHORE.

DEEP INTO THE JUNGLE TARZAN LED THE LITTLE PROCESSION AND THEN THE BLACKS WERE DISMISSED

WHEN THE BLACKS HAD GONE AFAR OFF, LENIDA OPENED THE CAGE TO GIVE JUNGLE FREEDOM TO HER BELOVED BEASTS.

BUT AS THE LIONS WANDERED FORTH, TARZAN SWUNG INTO THE TREES TO TRAIL THEM. HE WANTED TO SEE HOW THESE BEASTS, RAISED IN CAPTIVITY, WOULD FACE THE UNKNOWN PERILS OF THEIR NATIVE WILDS.
